MISCELLANEOUS READING.

FARMER FAIRWEATHER.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

I.

I am the last surviving witness who appeared at the trial; and unless I reduce to writing what I happen to know, there will be no record of the true particulars left after my death.

In the town of Betminster, and round about it for many a good English mile, I am known as Dame Rounsewood. I have never been married, and, at my present age, I never shall be. My one living relative, at the past time of which I now write, was my sister—married to a man named [illegible], who was settled in France, as a breeder of horses. Now and then he crossed over to England on business, and went back again.

I took such a dislike to [illegible] that I refused to be present at the wedding. This led, of course, to a quarrel. Nephews and nieces, if there had been any, might perhaps have reconciled me with my sister. As it was, we never wrote to each other after she went to France with her husband. And I never saw her again until she lay on her deathbed. So much about myself, to begin with.

II.

Circumstances, which it is neither needful nor pleasant to dwell on in this place, occasioned the loss of my income, while I was still in the prime of my life. I had no choice but to make the best of a bad bargain, and to earn my bread by going out to service.

Having provided myself with good recommendations, I applied for the vacant place of housekeeper to Farmer Fairweather. I had heard of him as a well-to-do old bachelor, cultivating his land nigh on five miles in a northerly direction beyond Betminster. But I positively declare that I had never been in his house, nor exchanged a word with him, on the day when I set forth for the house.

The door was opened to me by a nice little girl. I noticed that her manners were pretty, and her voice was a remarkably strong one for her age. She had, I may also mention, the finest blue eyes I ever saw in any young creature's face. When she looked at you, there was just a cast, as they call it, in her left eye, barely noticeable, and not a deformity in any sense of the word. The one drawback that I could find in this otherwise pleasing young person was that she had rather a sullen look, and that she seemed to be depressed in her spirits.

But, like most people, the girl was ready enough to talk about herself. I found that her name was Dina Coomb, and that she had lost both her parents. Farmer Fairweather was her guardian, as well as her uncle, and held a fortune of ten thousand pounds ready and waiting for her when she came of age.

What would become of her money if she died in her youth, was more than Dina could tell me. Her mother's timepiece had already been given to her, by directions in her mother's will. It looked of great value to my eyes, and it flattered her vanity to see how I admired her grand gold watch.

"I hope you are coming to stay here," she said to me.

This seemed, as I thought, rather a sudden fancy to take to a stranger. "Why do you want me to stay with you?" I asked.

And she hung her head, and had nothing to say. The farmer came in from his fields, and I entered on my business with him. At the same time I noticed, with some surprise, that Dina slipped out of the room by one door when her uncle came in by the other.

He was pleased with my recommendations, and he civilly offered me sufficient wages. Moreover, he was still fair to look upon, and not (as some farmers are) slovenly in his dress. So far from being an enemy to this miserable man, as has been falsely asserted, I gladly engaged to take my place at the farm on the next day at 12 o'clock, noon.

A friendly neighbor at Betminster, one Master Gouch, gave me a cast in his gig. We arrived true to the appointed time. While Master Gouch waited to bring my box after me, I opened the garden-gate and rang the bell at the door. There was no answer. I had just rung once more, when I heard a scream in the house. These were the words that followed the scream, in a voice which I recognized as the voice of Dina Coomb:

"Oh uncle, don't kill me!"

I was too frightened to know what to do. Master Gouch, having heard that dreadful cry as I did, jumped out of the gig and tried the door. It was not fastened inside. Just as he was stepping over the threshold, the farmer bounced out of a room that opened into the passage, and asked what he did there.

My good neighbor answered, "Here, sir, is Dame Rounsewood, come to your house by your own appointment."

Thereupon Farmer Fairweather said he had changed his mind, and meant to do without a housekeeper. He spoke in an angry manner, and he took the door in his hand, as if he meant to shut us out. But before he could do this, we heard a moaning in the room that he had just come out of. Says my neighbor:

"There's somebody hurt, I'm afraid."

Says I: "It's your niece, sir."

The farmer slammed the door in our faces, and then locked it against us. There was no help for us after this, but to go back to Betminster.

Master Gouch, a cautious man in all things, recommended that we should wait awhile before we spoke of what had happened, on the chance of receiving an explanation and apology from the farmer, when he recovered his temper. I agreed to this. But there! I am a woman, and I did take a lady (a particular friend of mine) into my confidence. The next day it was all over the town. Inquiries were made; some of the laborers on the farm said strange things; the Mayor and Aldermen heard of what was going on. When I next saw Farmer Fairweather, he was charged with the murder of his niece, and I was called, along with Master Gouch and the laborers, as witnesses against him.

III.

The ins and outs of the law are altogether beyond me. I can only report that Dina Coomb was certainly missing—and this, taken with what Master Gouch and I had heard and seen, was (as the lawyers said) the case against the farmer. His defense was that Dina was a bad girl. He found it necessary, standing toward her in the place of her father, to correct his niece with a leather strap [illegible] from time to time; and [illegible] by trying to get [illegible] when [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible]. As for the disappearance of Dina, he could only conclude that she had run away, and where she had gone to was more than he had been able to discover.

To this the law answered: "You have friends to help you, and you are rich enough to pay the expense of a strict search. Find Dina Coomb, and produce her here to prove what you have said. We will give you reasonable time. Make the best of it."

Ten days passed, and we, the witnesses, were summoned again. How it came out I don't know. Everybody in Betminster was talking of it: Farmer Fairweather's niece had been found.

The girl told her story, and the people who had discovered her told their story. It was all plain and straightforward, and I had just begun to wonder what I was wanted for, when up got the lawyer who had the farmer's interests in charge, and asked that the witnesses might be ordered to leave the court. We were turned out, under care of an usher; and we were sent for as the authorities wanted us, to speak to the identity of Dina, one at a time. The parson of Farmer Fairweather's parish church was the first witness called. Then came the turn of the laborers. I was sent for last.

When I had been sworn, and when the girl and I were, for the first time, set close together face to face, a most extraordinary interest seemed to be felt in my evidence. How I first came to be in Dina's company, and how long a time passed while I was talking with her, were questions which I answered as I had answered them once already, ten days since.

When a voice warned me to be careful and to take my time, and another voice said: "Is that Dina Coomb?" I was too much excited—I may even say, too much frightened—to turn my head and see who was speaking to me. The longer I looked at the girl, the more certain I felt that I was not looking at Dina.

What could I do? As an honest woman giving evidence on her oath I was bound, come what might of it, to tell the truth. To the voice which had asked me if that was Dina Coomb, I answered positively: "No."

My reasons, when given, were two in number. First, both this girl's eyes were as straight as straight could be—not so much as the vestige of a cast could I see in her left eye. Secondly, she was fatter than Dina in the face, and fatter in the neck and arms, and rounder in the shoulders. I owned, when the lawyer put the question to me, that she was of the same height as Dina, and had the same complexion and the same fine blue color in her eyes. But I stuck fast to the differences I had noticed—and they said I turned the scale against the prisoner.

As I afterward discovered, we witnesses had not been agreed. The laborers declared that the girl was Dina. The parson, who had seen Dina hundreds of times at his school, said exactly what I had said. Other competent witnesses were sought for and found the next day. Their testimony was our testimony repeated again and again. Later still, the abominable father and mother who had sold their child for purpose of deception were discovered, and were afterward punished, along with the people who had paid the money.

Driven to the wall, the prisoner owned that he had failed to find his runaway niece; and that, in terror of being condemned to die on the scaffold for murder, he had made this desperate attempt to get himself acquitted by deceiving the law. His confession availed him nothing; his solemn assertion of innocence availed him nothing. Farmer Fairweather was hanged.

VI.

With the passing away of time, the memory of things passes away too. I was beginning to be an old woman, and the trial was only remembered by elderly people like myself, when I got a letter relating to my sister. It was written for her by the English Consul at the French town in which she lived. He informed me that she had been a widow for some years past; and he summoned me instantly to her bedside, if I wished to see her again before she died.

I was just in time to find her living. She was past speaking to me; but, thank God, she understood what I meant when I kissed her, and asked her to forgive me. Toward evening the poor soul passed away quietly, with her head resting on my breast.

The consul had written down what she wanted to say to me. I leave the persons who may read this to judge what my feelings were when I discovered that my sister's husband was the wretch who had assisted the escape of Dina Coomb, and who had thus been the means of condemning an innocent man to death on the scaffold.

On one of those visits on business to England of which I have already spoken, he had met a little girl sitting under a hedge at the side of the high road, lost, footsore and frightened, and had spoken to her. She owned that she had run away from home, after a most severe beating. She showed the marks. A worthy man would have put her under the protection of the nearest magistrate.

My rascally brother-in-law noticed her valuable watch; and, suspecting that she might be connected with wealthy people, he encouraged her to talk. When he was well assured of her expectations, and of the use to which he might put them, in her friendless situation, he offered to adopt her, and he took her away with him to France.

My sister, having no child of her own, took a delight to Dina, and readily believed what her husband chose to tell her. For three years the girl lived with them. She cared little for the good woman who was always kind to her, but she was most unreasonably fond of the villain who had kidnapped her.

After his death, this runaway creature—then aged fifteen—was missing again. She left a farewell letter to my sister, saying that she had found another friend; and from that time forth nothing more had been heard of her, for years on years. This had weighed on my sister's mind, and this was what she had wanted to tell me on her death bed. Knowing nothing of the trial, she was aware that Dina belonged to the neighborhood of Betminster, and she thought in her ignorance that I might communicate with Dina's friends, if such persons existed.

On my return to England, I thought it a duty to show to the Mayor of Betminster what the Consul had written from my sister's dictation. He read it and heard what I had to tell him. Then he reckoned up the years that had passed. Says he: "The girl must be of age by this time; I shall cause inquiries to be made in London."

In a week more we did hear of Dina Coomb. She had returned to her own country, with a French husband at her heels, had proved her claim, and had got her money.—Youth's Companion.

THE NEW BOY IN SCHOOL.

He made his appearance at one of the Union schools the other morning, and, arriving ahead of time, he prevented any feeling of loneliness from seizing him by licking three boys and riding the gate off its hinges. He went in with the crowd when the bell rang, and finding no empty seat he perched himself on the wood box.

When the children repeated the Lord's prayer in concert, the new boy "kept time" with his heel, and when they came to sing he argued that variety was the spice of song, and attempted to sing one of his own—one about a gentleman named Daniel Tucker, who dreamed that he was dead, and so forth. The teacher warned him to keep still, and he replied that he wouldn't come to that school if his musical qualifications were to be overlooked.

When school finally opened the teacher secured his name and began asking him questions in order to find out how he should be graded.

"Can you spell?" she asked.

"What kind of spelling?" he cautiously replied.

"Spell 'house,' if you please."

"Frame or brick house?" he asked.

"Any kind of a house."

"With a mortgage on it?"

"You may spell 'man,' if you will," she said, giving him a severe look.

"Man?"

"Yes."

"I don't care much about spelling 'man' this morning, but I will this afternoon. I've spelt it with both my eyes shut."

"Do you know your alphabet?" she asked, changing the subject.

"Never had any," was the prompt reply.

"Do you know anything about reading?"

"I read like lightning," he answered.

She handed him a reader and said:

"Let me hear you read."

"Read right out loud?"

"Yes."

"I'm afraid it would disturb the children," he said in a low tone.

"Go on and let me hear you read."

"If I was a lame boy, and didn't get any peanuts in my stocking Christmas, blamed if I wouldn't make things jump around that house next morning!"

He handed the book back and the teacher asked:

"Richard, how many are three and three?"

"Three and three what?" he asked.

"Anything."

"It's a great deal according to what it is," he replied as he settled back.

"Did you ever study geography, Richard?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Is this world round or flat?"

"Hills an' hollers," he replied.

"Richard, can you write?"

"Write what?"

"Can you write your name?"

"I s'pose I can, but I've got it without writin' it."

"Can you write a letter?"

"Who to?"

"To anyone."

"Yes, if I had money to pay postage."

"Well, Richard," she said, in despair, "you'll have to go into the lower room if you want to come to school here."

"I druther stay here."

"But you can't."

"I'll bet you this knife agin ten cents I can."

She took him by the arm to remove him, but he laid his hand on her shoulder, and said in a warning voice:

She called the Principal down, and as he approached the boy, he demanded:

"Boy, what are you doing here?"

"Gettin' edicashun," replied Richard.

"Well, don't seen me, for I was never here before," replied Richard, slowly, moving his legs as if he meant to get down.

The Principal took him by the collar and jerked him around, got kicked on the shins, and bitten on the wrist, and finally landed the young student on the sidewalk.

"Now, you go home!" he shouted, as he tried to recover his breath.

"Who owns this school-house?" demanded the boy.

"No matter; you clear out."

"Will you come out in the yard here, where you can't hang to anything?" asked the boy.

"Begone, I say!"

"Don't draw no derringer on me," warned the boy, as he backed off.

The Principal walked in and shut the door, and after the new boy had stood there long enough to show that he wasn't afraid, he turned and walked off, growling to himself:

"I'll get the bearings of No. 8 to pound that feller when he's a week older!"—Arkansaw Traveler.

The almanac for 1887 gives a few items of general interest: New Year's Day comes on Saturday, Washington's Birthday on Tuesday, St. Valentine's Day on Monday, April Fool Day on Friday, Memorial Day on Monday, July 4th on Monday, Christmas on Sunday, Easter Sunday will be the 10th of April, Lent begins March 2. There will be four eclipses, two of the sun and two of the moon. One February 8, visible as a partial eclipse in the United States. The others that occur are not visible in the United States.

WHERE DID THE LAUGH COME IN.

"My dear," said a jocose farmer to his wife, "why is your deceased grandmother like my threshing machine?"

"I don't know; why?"

"Because she is no more and my threshing machine is no mower."

"That is a good one," said the lady, "and I must go and see if Mrs. Pikrust can tell."

When she saw Mrs. Pikrust, the lady said:

"John has told me such a good conundrum. It is this: 'Why is my grandmother like a threshing machine?'"

Mrs. Pikrust did not know.

"Because my grandmother is dead and you can't mow with a threshing machine," was the triumphant reply.

THIRTY-NINE GIRLS.

What will happen to girls—
Thirty-nine girls.

In ten years fifteen will be married.

In ten years more seven of the fifteen will be widows, dependents upon their own exertions for bread and meat.

In ten years fifteen of the remaining twenty-four will be sleeping beneath the sod. And how far apart they will be sleeping! One in Georgia, one in California, one in Ohio, one in Virginia, another, perhaps, in a missionary's grave in China, another amid the ashes of the ancient Aztecs of Mexico, another—but only time will tell where they all will sleep.

In ten years the nine I have not mentioned will begin to lose their sweetness, and develop something of the sourness supposed to be inseparable from women that are destined to be old maids.

In ten years, not one of the thirty-nine but that will have tasted of the bitterness that comes in time to all human beings. Hope will be blighted, loved ones will be claimed by that same skeleton you beheld just now, sorrow in a hundred forms will be experienced—indeed, to every one a surfeit of dead sea fruit will be offered.

A PASTORAL ROMANCE.

Lovely Miss Lucinda Tyler went to Farmer Hayseed's for the Summer. The object of her visit was to secure rest and quiet. She decided to abstain from all social excitement, and at first she succeeded. After awhile, however, her resolution gradually gave way and she found herself indulging in a pleasant flirtation with Farmer Hayseed's son John.

John was good looking and accommodating, and he did not object in the least to the effect of the city girl's fascinations. In fact, he rather seemed to like it, and when he got hold of her hand one evening—accidentally, of course—and gave it a good squeeze the affair developed into something serious. Of course, Miss Tyler's affections were not permanently disabled, but she sympathized with the steady devotion of her admirer and encouraged him because she, like all women, fancied that sort of thing. Even Eve left poor Adam for an hour or two to flirt with that very insinuating gentleman known as Beelzebub.

John's courtship was placid and unremitting. Everything he could do for Miss Tyler was done. It was, therefore, with regret that he saw the end of August approaching, for then she was to leave. He took her out riding. They entered a long, well-shaded, romantic-looking road, and almost before Miss Tyler knew anything John exclaimed with more or less emotion:

"I love you."

"This is very sudden," she replied.

"I hope you ain't mad about it."

"No; I don't know"—and as she faltered his arm encircled her waist.

There was a silence for a minute or two, and then pity got the better of the dear girl's feelings, and she said softly:

"John, I should think that you would get tired of the monotony of your life here."

"Yes; it is kind o' tiresome sometimes."

"Tell me what you do."

"You won't get mad about it?"

"Certainly not."

"Well, you know, we run this farm in Summer so's to make enough to keep the family the rest of the year. Mam sees to the cooking; pap tends to the works out-doors, and they make me do all the love-making business."

"The love-making business?"

"Yes, that's what it amounts to. Flirt with the boarders, you know, and make 'em believe that they've made a mash. First it was tough work—kind o' bashful, you know—and the first Summer I only popped to two girls. The second Summer I got up to six. Last season I reached a dozen, and this year—but, say, you ain't mad about it, are you?"

"No, dear John," and her head nestled fondly on his shoulder. "What a pretty hat you have! Let me hold it for you; and, dear John, how fine and soft your hair is." And she ran her fingers gently through his chestnut locks. Presently she put both hands up there, and after getting a good, tight hold, she pulled with all the gathered strength of a six weeks' vacation. John tried to yell, but he couldn't—his breath forsook him. He tried to speak but it was no go. The big tears that rolled down his cheeks were the only manifestations of his misery, but they were enough to touch a heart of stone. In about a minute—to John it seemed a century—the lovely Miss Tyler released her hold and gathered several dozen strands of chestnut hair into a knot.

"No, dear John," she said in her sweetest way, "I ain't mad. I only wanted a tuft of your lovely hair for a Summer souvenir. And now, dear John, suppose we return."

Dear John obeyed without a murmur. They reached home, and that night at a family council John issued his ultimatum: "Dad," said he, "if there's any more courtin' business to be done 'round here, you've got to do it. I've quit for good."

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE. | A. L. FORCE.
Editors and Proprietors.

1887.

The commencement of a New Year is a fitting season to adopt and carry out good resolves.

We will not presume to dictate a code of morals for the government of others.

Each can and ought to judge intelligently for himself.

Every individual, as he looks back and seriously surveys his past career, cannot fail to perceive many errors within his power to remedy, and which, if remedied, would surely enhance his welfare.

With the eye of impartial truth scan the past and to the present and future apply the teachings of wisdom.

Avoid all evil.

Cling to the good.

Fearlessly do the right.

A longer sermon might we preach, but not a better.

DEMOCRACY.

For twenty-two months the Government of the United States has been in Democratic hands, under control of that terrible party, which, if successful at the polls, was, according to the prediction of partisan opponents in 1884, destined to scatter blighting ruin all over the land.

The National Administration has been Democratic for nearly two years, and where are the evidences of its desolating effects?

They cannot be found.

They do not exist.

Never before were public affairs conducted with greater prudence, economy and efficiency, and never did the blessings of peace and good will so universally prevail as now.

Instead of the sword the Democratic party has brought peace, in lieu of Ruin it has inaugurated PROSPERITY.

May its banners wave in triumph a hundred years.

TRUE HONOR.

"He died poor, but an honest man."

That was the tribute bestowed upon General John A. Logan, Senator from Illinois, whose sudden death occurred at Washington a few days ago.

And it is a tribute dearer than aught fame or wealth can bestow.

To live for years in the faithful discharge of official duty at the National Capitol, that mart of venal jobbing, that rallying ground of political thieves of every stripe and grade, and there dying, to leave a personal record unsmirched by corrupt motives or gain of any kind, is to earn the brightest of honor.

Such justly attaches to the memory of Senator Logan, and such has been the merited repute of many other public officials, both Democratic and Republican, but, unfortunately, not all of them.

The height of honor is honesty.

That standard, both public and private good demands should be upheld, and more earnestly so in the future than it has been in the past.

Honor a man, not on account of his riches, not because of his learned attainments, not for the sake of birth or name, not in view of his ardent partisanship and spoils gathering abilities, but first and foremost, because, in every relation of life, and in spite of every alluring temptation, he has stood immovably HONEST.

The Philadelphia Times, looking at present English complications, sagely remarks: "All that Ireland has to do now is to wait. The Tories will do the rest."

One may look in vain for words of sounder wisdom than were uttered by Cardinal Gibbons in dedicating a Catholic Church in Baltimore, recently: "Strive," said the Cardinal, "to be law-abiding citizens; set your faces against those pernicious schools of anarchy, socialism and nihilism, and other dangerous organizations whose apostles are striving to destroy, but make no effort to build up the glorious edifice of constitutional freedom in which both native and foreigner alike find a home and shelter."

The Republicans are now claiming the credit for forfeiting the unearned land grants of the railroad corporations which they have so unceremoniously stolen from the public. This sounds well but will hardly bear the light of investigation and facts. It was by the legislation of Republican Congresses and the ready aid of Republican Executives and Land Commissioners that such stealings became possible and even now the Republican Senate blocks the way whenever it becomes necessary, and prevents many thousands of acres from being restored, which a Democratic House has striven to effect.

A bill was introduced at the last session of the Legislature which provided that taxes for personal property should be paid where the property was located. This was a wise and just measure and should have become a law, but the sapient legislators had too many pet schemes to carry through, and too many speeches to make for no other purpose than to exhibit their oratorical ability, to give much attention to the matter, and it failed to pass. It should by all means be resuscitated at the coming session and carried through successfully. All property both real and personal should be taxed where located, and if this was the case owners of personal property would pay more taxes than they now do.

The present railroad tax law well serves the equities of the case. It is undoubtedly true that the rate of taxes paid by the railroads is less than the average rate paid by other property held by individuals. But it is equally true that railroad property is more thoroughly discovered and more fully assessed than non-railroad property. These two deficiencies balance each other, and produce that uniformity and equality required by the Constitution. When the State shall establish such a system of taxation as will discover all the personal, as well as real, property held in the State, and assess it at its full value, then it will be time enough to talk about making the tax on the railroads at the same rate as that on individuals. While the railroads have long enjoyed an immunity from taxation not possessed by other corporations and individuals, it is not fair to make them now pay for their past privileges by extortionate taxation. Safety lies in the middle course, and the State will get along a great deal better if it finds its demand no [illegible] of reason and justice.—True American.

The maid has got her chatelaine,

The editor, we pause to say,
Has got the kidney complaint to-day.

This is the world's week of prayer.

It would be a good idea if the Weather Department would swear off "indications" this year.

It is rumored that Augustus W. Cutler will be appointed Secretary of State, in place of Henry C. Kelsey.

The last judgment has been rendered in the railroad tax cases, and the State will receive the money that ought to have been paid in 1884.

They are beginning to see whales off the New Jersey coast, and the unbelieving Brooklyn Union attributes the appearance to the new apple-jack.

The invigorating effects of a journalistic life are seen in the fact that "Clara Belle," who died some time ago, is still writing letters to various newspapers.

In the hearts of his countrymen John A. Logan, without a dollar to leave behind, is richer than that numerous body of statesmen who have become millionaires on five thousand a year.

An anxious inquirer asks: "Where would you advise me to go to play the piano?" To the woods, dear; to the deep, dark, damp, dank, dangerous woods.

The story going the rounds of the press that Governor-elect Green will make Trenton his residence during his term of office is not true. He will reside at Elizabeth as formerly.

There are to be ten contested seats in the next Assembly—and we don't know that all the returns are in yet. "Uneasy is the head that wears a crown," and uneasy is the seat that fails to get seated.—Rahway Democrat.

An exchange says to its readers: "Please hand in your local items while they are still fresh. We don't like to publish a birth after a child is weaned, a marriage after the honeymoon is over, or the death of a man after his widow is married."

How intent are the Republican newspapers of the State in giving advice to the Democratic members of the next Assembly. From the particular attention bestowed upon the latter, one would be led almost to suppose that there were no Republican members in that body.

In view of the fact that there are so many candidates for office constantly springing up in Hudson county, the Shore Press, of Asbury Park, suggests the formation of a new State with Jersey City or Hoboken as the Capitol. The ambitious young men would then have "a little world of their own."

Several rather good newspaper lies having been going the rounds of our exchanges lately. Among others may be mentioned the fortune of $150,000 left to Louis Steinberg, a cigar maker of Red Bank, the $800 fish story from Barnegat, and the Bradley bicycle rink item—none of which have any foundation.—Shore Press.

The House committee on invalid pensions has adopted a substitute for the Blair pension bill. The substitute provides for a uniform pension of $12 a month to all disabled soldiers of all wars, whereas the Blair bill gave graded pensions, according to disability, ranging from $1 to $24 a month. The substitute measure adds a clause for dependent parent and requires proof of dependency.

Like Lincoln and Grant, Logan was a typical American. From poverty he rose, not only to high place, but to a commanding influence over *his country*men and their history. What he lacked in the knowledge of the schools he made up out of a nature which was full to the brim of courage and generosity. How rapidly they are passing from the scene, the great actors in our country's time of peril! Grant, McClellan, Hancock, Seymour, Tilden, Hendricks, Arthur and Logan.

A giddy, young girl of 136 Summers passed in her checks a few days ago. This juvenile was born in St. Augustine, in 1750, and came to her untimely demise in the Indian Territory and a state of christian resignation. The frisky damsel's name was Susanna Warren, and her excuse for living so unreasonably long was that she was born and raised in Florida, had no acquaintance with John Barleycorn or tobacco, and was otherwise temperate in her habits.—Emporia, Fla. Advance.

The Tory administration have, it is said been convinced of the impracticability of reinaugurating coercive measures in Ireland, and will make a fight on a tenant's relief bill. Meantime all the politicians discern the speedy fall of the administration and a general election, which will again take the sense of the people. In such an election it is fair to presume that the prejudices which turned Mr. Gladstone from power will not be sufficiently powerful to keep him from returning to it.

Ben Butler announces himself as willing to lead another Labor campaign as a side show for the Republican canvass. Ben never did refuse a job in which there was any money, and since he has been compelled to make restitution to the National Soldiers' Home, his necessities are greater than ever. It is possible that he will succeed in securing some following, for no impostor has yet failed to mislead some people. But those who follow him will have their labor for their pains, except they intend to prove how great fools they are.

Articles of luxury are allowed to come into this country at a much lower rate of duty than many articles of necessity are admitted. Silk stockings, finest broad cloth, musical instruments, champagne and other wines, diamonds, jewelry, fine laces, the finest carpets and India shawls are all let in at lower rates than are worsted stockings, common, woolen and cotton goods, rice, galvanized iron, starch, salt, castor and linseed oils, window glass, crockery ware, spool thread, steel rails, Brussels and common carpets and common woolen shawls. The highest tariff on the necessaries; the lightest on the luxuries of life.

Captain Lewis Van Blarcom, a prominent lawyer of Newton, who lost a leg at Spottsylvania in 1864, and who at the last election was the Republican nominee for Congress in the 4th District against J. N. Pidcock, and nearly overcame a 4,000 Democratic majority, has been summoned before the Examining Board of Pension Surgeons at Stroudsburg, Pa., at the instance of Mr. Pidcock, who is a member of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to show cause why he should not have an increase of pension. Mr. Van Blarcom receives $30, the amount allowed for a leg that had been lost below the knee, and as the limb is off above the knee his pension will be increased to $36. The Captain did not know he was entitled to the increase.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

Mrs Lloyd Nelson gave a "tea" in the evening.

Mrs. Dr. Abrens is spending the holiday season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Day.

Another arrival of candidates for Rogers' colony or New Jerusalem, has located in our midst.

Monday and Tuesday mornings the thermometer hovered around zero, and caused quite a demand for ear protectors and warm hand wear.

Mr. Wilson commenced harvesting his ice crop on Tuesday last, the quality is said to be good, being solid nine inches thick and free from snow. There is no better ice in the county.

*Mr. Philip Jenner accomplished the feat of taking off, sharpening and re*placing 61 horse shoes on Monday last, many of his customers coming all the way from Plainfield. Thus much for being an expert.

The surface of the Lake has been in prime condition for skating, the past few days, and large numbers of visitors for miles around have taken advantage of the ice field. W. Otto is considered the most accomplished skater of the crowd.

The excitement of the competitors in the counting of the seeds in Charley Ward's "Big Squash," was terminated by the announcement of 507 which Emi Sayre came nearest by the guess of 500. The numbers varied from 9 to 2,000.

Messrs. G. W. Smalley and F. A. Nelson have issued invitations for a sociable, with the usual "Gents. assessed" "Ladies furnish," to take place at the residence of Lloyd B. Nelson, on Wednesday, January 12th. Prof. Dilly, of New York, has been engaged to furnish music.

The New Year was ushered in by the ringing of the church and school bells, and an effort to make a big bonfire of a brush heap on the Day place, but the adherence of so many crystal drops melting under the influence of a liberal supply of tar and coal oil, didn't make it burn worth a cent.

It is rumored that a new ticket will be put in the field at the next spring election for local office, and whilst it is doubtful whether such a movement can be advantageous, it behooves our Democratic friends to trot out some of their best stock and declare that the Republicans must go!

The new store buildings of Mr. Thos. H. Love on Broad street are rapidly approaching completion. The plate-glass fronts were put in last week. The building is an ornament to our town.

The charter members of the Citizens' Association of our town, which number about forty members, will hold their first election for permanent officers on next Tuesday evening at the town rooms.

The death of Mary Edna Hendricks, aged 46 years, residing on Cumberland street, occured on Tuesday last. The funeral services were held on Thursday, and the body taken to Freehold, N. J. for burial.

Mr. James L. Miller, chairman of our town committee, is foreman of the Grand Jury now in session at Elizabeth for the January term. This is the first time in over fifteen years that our township has had a foreman of the Grand Jury.

Mr. Foster E. Conant, of Prospect street, will wager a new hat that he has the most odd looking animal in the shape of a cat that there is in the county. It is of a breed peculiar to the Isle of Man. It has no caudal appendage and is also deformed.

The town committee at their meeting held on Friday evening, Dec. 31, 1886, resolved to recognize the Westfield Fire Department, consisting of the three companies, provided the several companies execute to the town committee a lease for the fire apparatus owned by each, which without doubt the companies will cheerfully do.

There has been a dearth of news in our town since the Holidays have passed, but you can hear the music of the hammer and saw in every direction in our town. The mechanics are all busy in the erection of new dwellings. Westfield is growing faster than it has in a number of years. Besides the large number of dwellings now under way, the plans are out for many more, to be erected in the early Spring. Why shouldn't our town increase in its buildings? We have as fine building sites within a short distance of the depot as there are along the line of the Central Railroad; good schools, churches of all denominations, stone ballast roads, free from dust, trains every half hour to New York, with first-class accommodations. Those desiring an investment can find none better than in Westfield real estate at prices, as it is bound to increase.

HIS HONOR slipped on an icy sidewalk, Monday evening, but lives to enforce, we hope, the ordinance that punishes those to blame for slippery ways.

THE annual election for officers for the ensuing year, of the Dunham Choristers, will be held this evening, at the residence of Councilman Dunham, at eight o'clock.

THE sensible and better class of people object to having their names heralded in "society notes" every time they make a few miles visit. It is getting to be too "common."

THE pumpkin in Werner, the clothier's window was cut Monday evening by Judge Suydam, its seeds extracted by Dentist Thiers, and the total found to be 732. Consequently young Andy Vanderbeek, having guessed 729, was awarded the $10 gold piece.

THE following officers have been elected for the ensuing year at the Warren Union Mission: President and Superintendent—E. L. Banney; Vice President and Assistant Superintendent—M. M. Dunham; Treasurer—C. B. Corwin; Secretary—E. B. Ryder.

MME. GILBERT, of New York City, who numbers among her references the patrons of Worth and of Redfern, has lately purchased a cottage at Netherwood where she is now permanently located. Her reputation as an artist in the originating and creation of elegant evening dresses and street costumes, is not excelled.

THERE is a report afloat that a certain young lady in this city is afflicted with cold feet and takes hot irons to bed with her to keep them comfortable. This is not the best remedy. We would advise her to consult her family physician. When cold feet become chronic the result is apt to be a bad case of antiquated maidenhood.

THERE were present amid the audience gathered upon the occasion of the organization of The Council of '87, Elias R. Pope, Esq., Corporation Counsel Marsh, City Treasurer Titsworth, Street Commissioner Angleman, Chief of Police Dodd, Deputy Treasurer of the Fire Board Dunham, ex-Mayor Rockfellow, and ex-Councilman Goddard.

THE report of Librarian Tyler for the month just passed, shows that the circulation was 991, the present number of card holders 432, the amount collected from fines was $4 72, the number of books added was 464, including complete sets of the New Jersey Law and Equity Reports, the U. S. Supreme Court Reports, and the New York Chancery Reports, which are a gift from Col. M. W. Tyler.

THE new owner of Hotel Netherwood, Mr. Frank Miller, is residing there quietly through the Winter with his wife, and acquainting himself with the needs of the house, in the way of repair and renovation. Early in the Spring a force of men will be at work making all the improvements necessary for next Summer's opening of the Hotel in better shape in all its departments than during any season of the past.

MISS LEIGH, who has charge of "The Mission Homes for the Protection of English and American Young Women in Paris," will give an account of the work in Grace church, on next Sunday night, service to commence at 7.45. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Any persons wishing to see Miss Leigh are invited to call upon her at the residence of Mrs. W. L. Patton, No. 24, East Ninth street, on Monday next, from three to six p. m.

EVERYTHING in general, and the toboggans in particular, have been moving smoothly at the chute, on Front street. The only drawbacks encountered have been in ascending the drag-way. As Providence does not provide, the Company were compelled to make a contract with Street Commissioner Whitlock for the hauling of snow out of "North Plainfield, the Canada of the East," and spreading it upon the slide. But "By Harry," he says he cannot agree to keep it covered all the year 'round.

THE New Year opens with many bright promises. In the year that has passed we have all had our private sorrows and misfortunes, but as the world goes, it has not been one of unpleasantness. There were plenty of joys mixed with our sorrows, and as philosophers we should take them as they come and be ready to meet what may be in store for us for the coming year. As a merry spirit has remarked, the happiest time is now. We wish our readers a Happy New Year, with the hope that every day of it may be a happy time to them.

AMONG the new firms of 1887 announced as about to enter business in that mammoth bucket-shop, the Stock Exchange of New York City, is that of Closson & Dumont. Its members are Mr. James F. Closson of Front street, East, a Director of the City National Bank and a pewholder in the Crescent avenue church, and Mr. John B. Dumont of Seventh street and Crescent avenue, one of the Vice Presidents of the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Common Council, and a member of Grace church.

A MEETING will be held in Elizabeth on Monday, Jan. 10th, at 7 30 p. m., in the Sunday school room of St. John's (Episcopal) church, to organize a Visiting Committee for Union county, in connection with the State Charities Aid Association of New Jersey. Notice has already been given of the formation of this new society, its object being to improve the moral, mental and physical condition of the inmates of jails, almshouses and other institutions supported by public money. It is hoped this community will give this new movement its hearty support, and that Plainfield, will be represented at the meeting in Elizabeth.

No more holidays until February 22

THE City Treasurer's report for 1886, and that of the retired Finance Committee of the last Council, are most interesting reading, and published elsewhere.

JUDGE MAGIE Monday morning in the Somerset County Courts at Somerville, sentenced Mrs. Catherine Keevan, to nine years' imprisonment in the State prison, at hard labor, for the murder of her husband, a few months ago.

THE custom of paying New Year's calls, pretty and commendable as it is, has seen its best days, and last Saturday there was comparatively little of that parade which was a few years ago so general. The iron heel of Fashion has trodden upon the custom, and that settles it.

THE North Plainfield Common Council meet this evening, when Mayor Van Winkle will probably appoint the members of the Board of Health, and possibly some further action will be taken in relation to the water supply ordinance published in our issue of Dec 17th, last.

TEMPERANCE orator English is to visit us again, and will speak at Reform Hall, Sunday evening, and also during several evenings of the week. He comes this time without his former partner, Mabee, who is at present either soliciting life insurance or selling hardware on the road.

ALL that remained of the once creditable minstrel combination of Messrs. Lester & Allen, appeared at Music Hall, New Year's day. The attendance in the afternoon was so light, no performance occurred, and the money received was returned to the few that purchased tickets. In the evening an extensive and a disappointed house was present.

MEMBERS of the Park Avenue Social Club of this city visited the Summit Lyceum of Summit, this county, New Year's Day, and the president of home club, Mr. Joseph C. Bilmm, presented the Summit boys, on behalf of his club, with a handsome silver water pitcher and gold lined goblet. They were royally entertained and reached home when the morning of the second day of the new year was making its appearance.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a regular meeting of Warren Engine Co., No. 3, held in their rooms, Wednesday evening, January 5th 1887, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst, our esteemed friend and brother fireman, Hiram B. Young, therefore, be it

Resolved That in the death of Hiram B. Young, we have lost an efficient member, one who was always ready when duty called, and whose loss will be deeply felt by all his brother firemen.

Resolved, That while we mourn his loss, we would extend our heartfelt sympathy to his family in their great affliction.

Resolved That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family, and also be printed in the City papers.

JOHN BECKER,
HENRY W. DILTEU,
GEORGE SCHLEKETH } Committee.

Plainfield, Jan. 5th 1887.

Another Righteous Step.

To present for decision by the Supreme Court the question whether the city may control the assessment of taxes to protect the property of its citizens from fire, Corporation Counsel Marsh, on behalf of Mrs. Carrie B. Taylor, made application to Judge Van Syckle, Wednesday, for a writ of certiorari—Messrs. Suydam & Stillman being present and representing the Board of Commissioners of the Plainfield Fire Department. The Court granted the motion and required that argument should be had on the whole case, at Trenton, during the February term of Court. The case is in the nature of a friendly suit between those interested for the city and for the Fire Board. The former believe that firemen, as well as other citizens of the City of Plainfield, will have their highest interests advanced by the success of the Taylor certiorari. However this may be, it is certain there has been a great change of opinion among the firemen since last year. Many openly advocate the position taken by the city.

The City's Case in the Court.

The following from the records of the Union Circuit Court explains what view the Court took of Mr. Marclay's demurrer to the claim of the City for the expense of putting down his sidewalk for him:

UNION CIRCUIT COURT.

The Treasurer of the City of Plainfield, plaintiff, vs.
Michael F. Marclay, defendant. } on contract.

The demurrer heretofore filed by the defendant in the above entitled cause to the first count of the declaration of the plaintiff coming on to be heard, and the same having been argued by Jackson & Codington, Esq's., on behalf of the demurrant, and by Craig A. Marsh, Esq., on behalf of the plaintiff and the Court having considered the same: it is now on motion of Craig A. Marsh, attorney of said plaintiff, ordered that the said demurrer be overruled, with costs, to be paid by the said demurrants to the said plaintiff. Rule actually entered January 4th, 1887.

The Holy Cross Exercises.

The children connected with the Sunday school of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, assembled in the school building adjoining the church last Thursday afternoon, the occasion being the usual Christmas festival. There was a large attendance, the singing of the Carols conducted by the Rev T. Logan Murphy was a credit to the school. After singing "Hail to the day," "Ring out the Bells" and "Sing, sing for Christmas," the "tree" was beautifully illuminated, then followed the singing of the carol, "Gather around the Christmas tree," at the conclusion of which a few appropriate remarks were made by Mr. Murphy and Superintendent Wann. The distribution of presents was next in order, every scholar, Teacher and others connected with the school receiving a handsome gift. At 6 o'clock the children returned to their homes delighted with their entertainment. On Sunday following they were agreeably surprised to find their school-room carpeted with a new and costly carpet, which, with the recent decorations, makes it one of the handsomest rooms in Plainfield.

A Pleasant Meeting.

The Upper Division of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Diocese of New Jersey, met in the Sunday school building of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, on Monday last. Representatives from Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Rahway, Roselle and other portions of the Diocese were present. The delegations were entertained by the ladies of the Holy Cross Church. The meeting was addressed by Mrs. Benj. Williamson, Jr., and Mrs. S. A. Clark, of Elizabeth, Miss Sybil Carter, of New York, and Mrs. Charles Ryder, of Plainfield. There was a large attendance present, and much enthusiasm was manifested in the cause of Missions. Grace Church, of this city, was well represented by delegates. The reception committee of the Holy Cross Church consisted of the following ladies: Mrs. T. Logan Murphy, Mrs. W. Rockhill Potts, Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, Mrs. Chas. Matthews and Mrs. Geo. P. Dupont. After the addresses refreshments were served by the committee in charge, consisting of Mrs. Judson A. Brown, Mrs. Chas. Wann, Mrs. Chas J. Taggart, Miss Grace W. Luther, Mrs. J. E. Terrill and Mrs. James Spencer. All went away feeling they had passed a very pleasant and profitable afternoon.

Board of Education.

The Board of Education organized for the ensuing year on Monday evening last by electing Jacob Kirkner President, and Nathan Harper Secretary. Mr. Murray positively declined a re-election as President because of his many pressing business engagements.

It has been said that the grandest achievement of artistic skill is to delineate with life-like accuracy the human face and form. The truth of that was convincingly brought to mind the other day when we were invited to look upon the finished portrait of a familiar friend, Catharine S. Vail, the widow of Plainfield's old time resident Uncle Stephen Vail. As a work of art the picture is perfection, and as a likeness, we confidently venture the opinion that a more truthful one was never placed on canvass. It is the production of Miss Etta Thorn, the talented daughter of our fellow citizen Martin M. Thorn, and should establish for her an extensive patronage. The portrait will, we learn, be on exhibition at the Art Gallery for a few days previous to its being sent to Addison, N. Y. It is worth seeing.

The Church Census.

The information which the pastors of the place desire to obtain in the census they have arranged to have taken in Plainfield and North Plainfield, is indicated in the following list of questions:

Street.
No and location of house.
Name of family.
Attendants of what church.
If of none, what church preference.
No. of children 15 years and under.
With what Sunday school connected.
If with none, state preference.
No. of young men, ages 15 to 35.
Servants, names and church connection or preference.
Boarders, names and church connection or preference.
Is there a bible in the house?

The success of this movement will depend upon the readiness of the people to answer the inquiries. Blanks will be furnished to every family by a canvasser in the hope that no one will refuse to fill them out. The value of the returns will depend upon their completeness, and every one should be interested in procuring the statistics.

A New Year's Eve German.

The young society people of this city held the second German of the season at Union Club house, Friday evening of last week, and danced the old year out in intricate figures. In spite of most inclement weather that prevented the attendance of a number from New York city and elsewhere, there were sufficient present to assure the success of the event in every particular, and not enough to crowd the parlors uncomfortably. The rooms were appropriately (to the season, we mean) and profusely decorated with greens, and a novel feature of the affair was the giving of the evening's favors from a bountifully loaded tree. The matrons who chaperoned the dancers were Mrs. Massett, Mrs. Waring, Mrs. Lowe and Mrs. Fleming. Mr. Simpson lead with Miss Waring, and the other couples were Mr. Wilkinson and Miss Williamson, Mr. H. Dunn and Miss Foster, of N. Y. City, Mr. C. Hyde and Miss Plummer, Mr. J. Moore and Miss Moore of Palenville, Mr. L. Hyde and Miss M. Ayres, Mr. F. Waitz and Miss Fairbairn, Mr. Dumont of Brooklyn and Miss G. Murray, Mr. Beebe and Miss Hart, Mr. Fairbairn and Miss Massett, Mr. F. Van Buren and Miss L. Dupew, Mr. Squires and Miss Dorman. The music and supper were both creditable.

Personals.

Miss Gussie Murray will entertain her friends at her home, next Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roome were on a visit with Mrs. Sanford of Seventh street, during the holidays.

Mrs. Charles Brooks (nee Ames) gave a German, Wednesday evening, at her residence on Franklin and First place.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Adams are returned from their wedding trip which included Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

A very social afternoon tea was held at the residence of Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Thursday of last week. The spacious mansion was tastefully decorated for the occasion.

The invited guests that were enjoying the pleasures presented at a progressive euchre party, saw the Old Year out at the residence of Mrs. S. C. Peck, Jr., last Friday evening.

Hiram Young, a member of the Plainfield Singing and Turning Society, and of Warren Eng Co., died at his residence, North Plainfield, Tuesday morning, in the 26th year of his age.

By the change in political complexion of the Common Council, the city looses the services of the affable and able City Clerk Merritt, but gains the services of the affable and able City Clerk Leonard.

The little daughter of Counselor Wm. K. McClure, gave a party to about a hundred of her young friends, Wednesday evening, at her home on Broadway. It was a most enjoyable affair in every respect.

Mr. John Brooks, Superintendent of the Potter Press Works, was thrown from his village cart, New Year's day, and severely bruised and injured. He has since been slowly recovering, but his driver is laid up with a broken collar-bone.

Mr. Charles E. Passmore, better known by his friends as "California" or "Blackboard Charlie" and who has been visiting in Plainfield for a few days, started Monday last on a tour South as general agent for the Novelty Wood Company of New York.

Mr. George Kirkner, who has been living for the past few months at St. Paul, Minn., happily surprised his folks here by arriving unexpectedly at home to spend the Holidays. His sister tenders a reception this (Thursday) evening, to a large number of invited guests.

Experience in the routine of business that governs and pertains to the meetings of the Common Council, especially fits Mr. Francis E. Marsh for the position of President of that body. His prompt ruling and decisive action will greatly expedite matters, and the unnecessary delay of the past will be avoided in the future.

New York State seems determined to rob New Jersey of some of its honor, and again has another tempting call been made to entice the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond from the pastorate of the Trinity Reformed of Plainfield. The Fourth Presbyterian church of Albany want him now, and offer a wider field and larger salary. No decision in the matter has yet been concluded by those interested here.

The reception held at the Potter mansion on Seventh street, West, Thursday evening of last week, was one of the Season's social successes in every particular. All the very best people of the community were present. The supper was a triumph of a New York caterer's art, and the service perfect. An orchestra stationed at the head of the winding staircase, discoursed pleasant melody through the hallways.

At the bride's residence on Park ave., last evening at six o'clock, the ceremony of marriage was performed that united Miss Bird and Mr. Frank Moore, of this city—a superintendent of that greatest of all corporations, the Standard Oil Co., of New York. The wedding was private—only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties being present, and the Rev's A. V. V. Raymond and D. J. Yerkes and their wives. The happy happy couple left on the 7.30 train for Niagara.

Christmas at the Reformed Church.

On Thursday evening last, the Sunday school of the Trinity Reformed church held their Christmas festival, and notwithstanding the stormy state of the weather a large number of friends of the church and school were in attendance. The exercises were of a pleasing and interesting character, consisting of singing, recitations, responsive readings, addresses by Pastor Raymond and Superintendent Anthony, after which the presents were distributed to the scholars, and a social time generally followed, during which everybody in attendance seemed to enjoy themselves. Where all did so well, we will not attempt to give individual praise, except to Miss Nettie Matthews and her chorus of eight voices, members of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. They sang well and gave evidence of careful and persistent training.

Warren Union Mission.

On Thursday last, both afternoon and evening the festival occasion was held in the Chapel. At 2:30 p. m. the scholars of the main building, constituting of the Primary and Intermediate classes, numbering about three hundred in addition to many parents and friends of the school met to witness and take part in the singing and recitations, also to enjoy the many tricks of magic performed by Prof. Carlisle, from New York. The school was then arranged around the tables to partake of the cream and cake provided for them, and a box of candy was given to each scholar and a suitable present to the members of the primary class, numbering 125. They were finally dismissed and went on their way rejoicing. At 7:30 p. m. the adult classes and their friends, numbering about five hundred, gathered and a programme arranged by a committee was enjoyed by all, much credit is due to the committee and to all those who took part. We make special mention of the addresses of welcome by Master Elmer VanAken and little Lula Pangborn, the former to the gentlemen and the latter to the ladies; also the Doll Drill under the direction of Mrs. F. H. Gardner, who has always been ready and very successful in her untiring efforts to make such occasions enjoyable and profitable. A recitation entitled "Billy's Rose" rendered by Miss May Bell of New York, was very affective. Prof. Carlisle was present to help make the occasion a success. A number of gifts were presented to the teachers from their classes. Mr. George Belcher was the recipient of a handsome marble top stand. A general invitation was then extended by the superintendent, Mr. F. H. Gardner, to all present to share in the good things provided for the occasion to be found on the tables arranged in the new extension. A social time followed and all seemed to be happy.

It Speaks For Itself.

The following correspondence was handed us too late for insertion in our issue of last week, but we want to put it on record as stating the case exactly. Assertions of esteem and endorsement—expressed in communications and post-mortem resolutions, upon a man's retirement or death, politically or otherwise—are most generally like salve for the wounded—soft and cheap. This open letter below, however, signed by so many of our representative citizens whose opinions are valuable, is, (alas, for some political leaders) too true and too new to "ring the bell" on.

PLAINFIELD, December 20, 1886.

To Hon. Geo. W. Rockfellow:—

As citizens of Plainfield we desire to express the satisfaction we have felt in your administration of the office of Mayor. Plainfield has had many good mayors. Our fellow citizens who have held that office have uniformly been men of high purpose and of unswerving integrity. It was no small honor to succeed to an office that had been so well and ably filled. But your administration especially commends itself to us, because you have never allowed your political affiliations in the slightest degree to influence your appointments. The man whom you believed could and would best serve the city and its interests was sure of your nomination and support. What political party he belonged to was without consequence. This fact, and a similar spirit manifested in all your public acts while in office have characterized your administration as exceptionally unselfish, patriotic and high-toned.

We feel that such unusual fairness and singleness of eye for local public interests is deserving of the highest commendation.

Wishing you a Happy New Year and success in your plans for the future, we remain;

Very respectfully,
Your fellow-citizens,

MASON W. TYLER.

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
City of Plainfield, N. J.,
Dec. 28, 1886.

To Hon. Mason W. Tyler, Rowland Cox, Job Male, Nathan Harper, Charles Potter, S. O. Bowers, Seely Edsall and others:

GENTLEMEN:—The cordial and discriminating commendation of my exercise of the power of Mayor of Plainfield, to which are appended your signatures and those of so many others of Plainfield's foremost citizens of all parties, puts in permanent form sentiments of approval which it has been my honor, if not my desert, personally to receive from hundreds of my fellow citizens.

Had my ambition been, continued or further political preferment, instead of the faithful execution of the trust reposed in me by the people, I am aware that it would have been necessary to have adopted other lines of conduct. If, to quote from your kind letter, "The man whom I believed could and would best serve the city and its interests was sure of my nomination and support," then I must needs renounce the rewards of partisanship.

In their place has come that which is far dearer. To the conviction of duty done, has been added the approval of my fellow men. Believe me, no position of party and no place of power in the gift of our people, could be so highly esteemed as this your unsolicited tribute.

Your obedient servant,
GEO. W. ROCKFELLOW.

Exit of the Council of '86.

The last meeting of the Council of '86 was held Friday evening, Dec. 31st, and all were present. The election, salary, poor and street bills for the last month were presented, referred and subsequently ordered paid. Gasoline lamps were located, upon the recommendation of the Street Committee, at Union and Sixth streets and on Second near Richmond street. A resolution was presented, approved by the Corporation Counsel, directing that a pole be erected and an electric light maintained thereon at the east corner of Park avenue and Fifth street. The resolution was laid upon the table. It was resolved that all parties desiring to deliver to the city's care the gas globes and lanterns not now in use, would be expected to put such in condition for lighting at their own expense, when required. A communication from the Plainfield Electric Light Co., agreeing to date its contract with the city from Nov. 1st, 1886, was tabled for the consideration of the incoming Council. The opinion of the Corporation Counsel was expressed to the effect that the unfulfilled contract of the District Messenger and Fire Alarm Co., did not repeal the franchise granted it by the Council, until three months notice should be given. A new petition was received for permission to remove Mrs. Tingley's frame dwelling, but the matter was laid on the table. The following review of the city's finances was presented and ordered filed and printed:

TO THE COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD:—Your Finance Committee beg to submit the following report. The Council of 1886 [illegible] for the first time in the history of the city to secure a tax levy sufficient for City purposes. The following estimate of the requirements for the year 1886, was made by your Committee:

Police	$8,000
Salaries City officers	2,000
Street lights	[illegible]
Street repairs, cross-walks, etc.	7,500
Rent Jail and Council room	[illegible]
Treasurer, Assessor and Collector	2,500
Printing, Stationery and Advertising	[illegible]
Registry and Elections	[illegible]
Sundries	1,000
	[illegible]
Less estimated receipts, licenses etc.	[illegible]

on which estimate the Council ordered a levy of $28,000 for City purposes. The payments during the year for account of the general fund have been as follows:

Police	$ 8,077.21
Salaries and Collector's fees	[illegible]
Street Lights	[illegible]
Street repairs, crosswalks etc	[illegible]
Rent Jail, Council room and repairs	919.44
Printing, Stationery and advertising	918.12
Registry elections	779.95
Balance due on Judgments	[illegible]
Sundry items	[illegible]
	[illegible]

This includes warrants amounting to $[illegible] ordered paid in 1885, but does not include warrants for account of 1886, ordered paid during this year as follows:

Street repairs etc	$2,200.00
Street lights	242.
Salaries and Collector's fees	[illegible]
Police	[illegible]
Elections and Registry	[illegible]
Sundries	67.50
	[illegible]

The expenditures for streets, include the sum of $2,071.51 contributed by property owners on Front street and Broadway. At the beginning of the year the City Treasurer reported a balance in general fund of $[illegible] and liabilities warrants $[illegible], notes for money borrowed, $5,000; and at the end of the year the Treasurer's balance will be $[illegible], with liabilities warrants, $[illegible], notes for money borrowed, $8 000.

The payments for account of the Poor Fund this year have been $[illegible], or nearly $[illegible] in excess of the tax levy.

The Collector's annual statements shows the following results:

	Taxes due Jan. 1, '86	Taxes paid 1886	Taxes due Jan. 1, '87.
[illegible]	[illegible]	64	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	5.70	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	30.46	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	46.90	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	247.65	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	2732.14	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	10031.46	[illegible]
	[illegible]	$14702.61
tax levy 1886	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
		[illegible]	[illegible]

Nearly 80 per cent. of the tax levy of 1886 has been paid, a larger per cent. than usual, but the collection of delinquent taxes does not compare favorably with last year, the amount of delinquent taxes for 1885 being $[illegible], against $[illegible] for 1884, at the end of last year.

During the year 1886 the Council appointed a special collector of delinquent taxes, with favorable results, as shown by the small amount of 1880 taxes $[illegible] remaining unpaid.

Such action would not be necessary if the Collector would use the power he has and enforce payment of personal taxes by sale of such property, and was more persistent in urging payment from delinquents.

The delinquent poll tax each year is about $[illegible], and nearly as many voters are not assessed any other tax.

Detailed statements of receipts and disbursements of the General Fund, Poor Fund and Library fund will appear in the Treasurer's annual report.

Respectfully submitted,
J. B. DUMONT,
Ch'n Finance Com.

The retiring President and Clerk were unanimously thanked by resolution for their labor of the past year, and the Council adjourned sine die.

Organization of The Council of '87.

The Common Council of 1887 met for organization, Monday evening. Present Messrs. Bowers, Cary, Cox, Cuthbert, Dumont, Marsh, Taylor, Voorhees and Wilbur. Absent Messrs. Dunham and Simpson. Clerk Merritt called the Council to order, and Councilman Dumont nominated for President, Mr. Francis E. Marsh; Councilman Bowers nominated Mr. Rowland Cox. The ballot resulted as follows: Marsh 7 votes; Cox, 1; Blank, 1. Councilman Dunham arrived too late to vote, and, in consequence, was paired with Councilman Simpson in this ballot. President Marsh, in taking the chair, thanked the members present for the honor conferred upon him; feeling it an honor, as he stated, to be called upon to preside over the deliberations of so honorable a body. It was a position, he said, that would call for forbearance on both sides, and he would ask all to join with him to the end that the deliberations of the Council of '87 might be always harmonious. Upon the calling of an election for Clerk, Councilman Dunham nominated Mr. O. B. Leonard, and Councilman Cox nominated Mr. Richard Merritt. A ballot resulted in Mr. Leonard receiving 7 votes, and Mr. Merritt, 3. The Janitor of the past Council, Mr. William V. Mundy, was unanimously re-elected to that office. Councilman Cox offered as the by-laws of the Council, the published edition of the rules of order of the Council of the past, and moved, which was carried, that they be the rules of order of the present until otherwise ordered. The President appointed Councilmen Dumont, Dunham and Voorhees as a special Committee to inform the Mayor that the Council had organized and would be pleased to receive any personal communication or written message he might choose to present it. At the close of a short recess, the Committee returned with His Honor, the Mayor, who was escorted to the platform and a seat beside the President. Upon being introduced by that officer, Mr. Male said that he was glad to meet all the Council and hoped to be still better acquainted. He trusted that they with him would go along comfortably together, with no other desire in their hearts than the best interests of the City. The following message was then read by the Clerk:

MAYOR MALE'S MESSAGE.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—Being aware of your organization I wish simply to communicate a few congratulatory words for the present. It is not as a stranger to the important duties of the Mayoralty, that I assume the responsibilities of the chief executive of this city, and I am glad to know that a number of your board bring to the work of local legislation the practical experience of several years' service. My sincere desire is that all departments of the municipal government may be managed with fidelity and mutual agreement. I shall not be disposed to recommend any other measures for your consideration than such as may be approved by your honorable body. And be assured that all laws of the state, and city ordinances enacted by you, shall be faithfully enforced by me. In glancing over the official figures of the City Treasurer's books for 1886, there is occasion for congratulation upon the favorable financial beginning of 1887. From his statements and those of the Collector, it is learned that our full quota, of $[illegible], has been handed over to the county authorities. This is an opportunity calling for public congratulations, when the City's first and largest indebtedness is so honorably and promptly met. My earnest hope is, that we will soon be able to hear the encouraging report, that all remaining taxes of this year have been paid, including the back taxes of other years. It is a pleasure to know that the 1886 taxes, delinquent at this date, are lower than ever before, in proportion to the amount assessed. But while any considerable arrears are outstanding, it will be necessary to plan discreetly, till all the remaining revenues are paid up, in order that the City's expenses may not become greater than its regular income. This has been the safe policy, as a general rule ever since our chartered organization, nearly eighteen years ago. Then in 1869-70, the citizens of Plainfield honored me as their choice for first Mayor. The population at that time was about 5,000, with property worth a little more than two and a half millions dollars and the rate of taxation 37 cents on every hundred dollars for City purposes. Now the census will reach nearly 10,000 inhabitants, with assessed valuations of about five millions and a rate for the present City taxes of 44 cents. Few inland cities of this commonwealth can show a better financial standing or a steadier and more healthy increase. At a later period it will afford me pleasure to confer with your honorable body on measures necessary and expedient for the City's welfare. For the present be assured of my hearty co-operation in any undertaking you may suggest for the improvement of the public morals and general welfare of the people whom we represent.

JOB MALE, Mayor.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 3, 1887.

The annual report of the Treasurer, as published elsewhere, was received and ordered printed. The Bond of Treasurer Titsworth was received and accepted, and the Council adjourned to meet again next Monday.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The return pigeon shooting match between the Middlesex and Essex Gun Clubs came off on the grounds of the latter at Erb's Park, Newark, N. J., on Thursday, Dec. 30, 1886. There was a large attendance of prominent sportsmen, although the weather was extremely disagreeable for shooting. It will be remembered that the first match shot between these two clubs, resulted in a victory for the Middlesex boys. This time the Essex boys put in good work, while some of the Middlesex's best shots went to pieces. A third match will be shot in the near future. The following were the conditions of the match: 20 men a side; 10 live birds each; 25 yards rise; 5 ground traps; gun below elbow; both barrels. Referee—William Sigler of J. C. H. G. C.; Judge—M. G. C., Geo. Eaton of the Forest and Stream; Judge E. G. C., C. M. Hedden, South Side G. C. Newark; Scorer—W. L. Ritch; W. F. Quinlan, Capt. M. G. C., H. Breintnal, Capt. E. G. C.

CURRENT COMMENT.

The report of the Bureau of Statistics shows that there has been a considerable increase of immigration to the United States within the current year. During the eleven months ending on the 30th of November, 1886, the number of immigrants landed was 365,577, or an average of a little more than 1,000 a day. This is an increase of 50,000 over the immigration during the corresponding eleven months of 1885. Of this immigration England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland contributed 120,564 an increase of nearly 30,000 over the immigration of eleven months of last year from those countries. In the same period the contribution of population from Germany to the United States has fallen from 103,837 to 80,685. The immigration from Austria, Hungary and Bohemia has increased from 24,297 to 37,822; from Russia, from 19,196 to 30,197; from Italy, from 14,827 to 27,631, and from Sweden, Norway and Denmark, from 36,575 to 50,373. In the small contributions from France and other countries of Europe there has been but little change.—Philadelphia Record.

AN OLD RELIC.

An old electoral ticket was recently found in an ancient trunk in Montclair, this State. The trunk once belonged to Mr. Jerome Sigler's great grandfather. Several articles were about to be sold at auction, among which was a trunk, and this relic happened to be discovered before the auction took place. A Montclair man turned the ticket over to Mr. Sigler, together with an old box which is thought by all who have seen it to be a snuff box of ye olden times. The ticket, which is of the year 1829, is headed as follows:

JACKSON ELECTORAL TICKET

Abraham Godwin, of Essex; William McCullough, Warren; Robert McCarter, Sussex; George Maxwell, Hunterdon; William J Conover, Monmouth; Cresse Townsend, Cape May; Joseph Kille, Salem; William N. Shind, Burlington.

For Members Twenty-first — George Cassidy, Bergen; James Fowler, Sussex; Peter D. Vroom, Jr., Somerset; James Parker, Middlesex; John Clement, Gloucester; William N. Jeffers, Salem.

The paper upon which the names are printed is of the old straw paper, far better than the kind used at the present time.

Two hundred and fifty acres of the Great Meadows, Warren county, will next spring be devoted to the raising of onions. Ye who have tears, prepare to shed them then.

Lately, in a music hall, after the ballad lady had warbled: "Would I Were a Bird," great excitement was created by a stalwart miner in the audience shouting, "Would I were a gun."

"McClellan's Own Story" has had a large sale. Already the first edition of the book has been nearly exhausted and the publishers have sent Mrs. McClellan $10,000 as her share of the profits.

A Vermont railroad engineer, who refused to "die heroically at his post," explained to a reporter that his wages had just been cut down ten per cent. and he couldn't afford to. When he thought of his wife having less than five dollars in the house, with a large family needing shoes right away, he felt it his duty to live on.

Jersey City and Newark are beginning to worry over the question of water supply, because a private corporation has been buying up the water sources of Northern New Jersey. Both Jersey City and Newark were given an opportunity to secure these water rights, but did not do so. And they now have no reason to complain that others have secured what they rejected.

Socialism is one of the greatest foes of workingmen, and yet the labor societies have allowed themselves to become generally imbued with its false and pernicious doctrines. It is about time that the masses of the people of this country became aroused to the gravity of the situation, and that measures should be adopted to effectually stamp out this worst of old world importations.

The Colin-Campbell divorce suit will cost $125,000. The light thrown upon English high life morals and estimate of marital obligation is worth something more than that to Americans who have been thinking about establishing social relations with the people of the "mother country," or to those who wonder why English actresses, professional beauties and noblemen act as they do when they come to America.

Two years ago Republican prophets were positive the country would go to ruin in consequence of a restoration of the Democrats to power. Now they are compelled to see a steady and general return of industrial and commercial prosperity. The facts and figures of all the Government reports show this result and indicate a largely increased volume of business throughout the country. There is nothing so convincing as truth, but the enemies of the Administration say: "It's Cleveland's luck."

In the event of John P. Stockton becoming the next chancellor of New Jersey, which is not an unlikely event, it is said that Hon. Robert Gilchrist will be presented as a fit custodian of the attorney generalship. Mr. Gilchrist is one of the most distinguished lawyers at the bar of New Jersey and filled the attorney generalship under ex-Governor Randolph with marked ability and satisfaction to the people of the state. With two "Bobs" at Trenton the Democracy could float with great success.—Elizabeth Herald.

The Republicans who robbed the Democratic Governor of his patronage and threw it into the legislative Joint Meeting are not so jubilant as they were last year. The Democratic majority will not have much mercy upon them when in the Joint Meeting the following will come before them for appointment:

Trustees of the Normal School in place of Isaac C. Wynn, J. Howard Pugh, Gilbert Coombs, Edward G. Read, W. W. Marsh, Jacob L. Hays, and Charles W. Fuller.

"THE IDEAL MAGAZINE"
for young people is what the papers call St. Nicholas. Do you know about it—how good, it is, how clean and pure and helpful? If there are any boys or girls in your house will you not try a number, or try it for a year, and see if it isn't just the element you need in the household? The London Times has said: "We have nothing like it on this side." Here are some of the leading features of

ST. NICHOLAS
For 1886–87.

Stories by Louisa M. Alcott and Frank R. Stockton—several by each author.

A Short Serial Story by Mrs. Burnett, whose charming "Little Lord Fauntleroy" has been a great feature in the past year of St. Nicholas.

War Stories for Boys and Girls. Gen. Badeau, chief-of-staff, biographer and confidential friend of General Grant, and one of the ablest and most popular of living military writers, will contribute a number of papers describing in clear and vivid style some of the leading battles of the civil war. They will be panoramic descriptions of single contests or short campaigns, presenting a sort of living picture-gallery of the grand and heroic contests in which the parents of many a boy and girl of to-day took part.

The Serial Stories include "Juan and Juanita," an admirably written story of Mexican life, by Frances Courtenay Baylor, author of "On Both Sides;" also "Jenny's Boarding House," by James Otis, a story of life in a great city.

Short Articles, instructive and entertaining, will abound. Among these are: "How a Great Panorama is Made," by Theodore R. Davis, with profuse illustrations; "Winning a Commission" (Naval Academy) and "Recollections of the Naval Academy;" "Boring for Oil" and "Among the Gas Wells," with a number of striking pictures; "Child Sketches from George Eliot," by Julia Magruder; "Victor Hugo's Tales to his Grandchildren," recounted by Brander Matthews; "Historic Girls," by E. S. Brooks. Also interesting contributions from Nora Perry, Harriet Prescott Spofford, Joaquin Miller, H. H. Boyesen, Washington Gladden, Alice Wellington Rollins, J. T. Trowbridge, Lieutenant Frederick Schwatka, Noah Brooks, Grace Denio Litchfield, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt, Mary Mapes Dodge, and many others.

The subscription price of St. Nicholas is $3 a year; 25 cents a number. Subscriptions are received by booksellers and newsdealers everywhere, or by the publishers. New volume begins with the November number. Send for our beautifully-illustrated catalogue (free) containing full prospectus, etc.

THE CENTURY CO., New York.

THE CENTURY.
For 1886–87.

The Century is an illustrated monthly magazine having a regular circulation of about two hundred thousand copies, often reaching and sometimes exceeding two hundred and twenty-five thousand. Chief among its many attractions for the coming year is a serial which has been in active preparation for sixteen years. It is a history of our own country in its most critical time, as set forth in

THE LIFE OF LINCOLN,
By his Confidential Secretaries, John G. Nicolay and Col. John Hay.

This great work, begun with the sanction of President Lincoln, and continued under the authority of his son, the Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, is the only full and authoritative record of the life of Abraham Lincoln. Its authors were friends of Lincoln before his presidency; they were most intimately associated with him as private secretaries throughout his term of office, and to them were transferred upon Lincoln's death all his private papers. Here will be told the inside history of the civil war and of President Lincoln's administration,—important details of which have hitherto remained unrevealed, that they might first appear in this authentic history. By reason of the publication of this work, which has been followed with unflagging interest by a great audience, will occupy less space during the coming year. Gettysburg will be described by Gen. Hunt (Chief of the Union Artillery), Gen. Longstreet, Gen. E. M. Law and others; Chickamauga, by Gen. D. H. Hill; Sherman's March to the Sea, by Gens. Howard and Slocum. Gens. Q. A. Gillmore, Wm. F. Smith, John Gibbon, Horace Porter and John S. Mosby will describe special battles and incidents. Stories of naval engagements, prison life, etc., will appear.

THE WAR SERIES,

NOVELS AND STORIES.
"The Hundredth Man," a novel by Frank R. Stockton, author of "The Lady, or the Tiger?" etc., begins in November. Two novelettes by George W. Cable, stories by Mary Hallock Foote, "Uncle Remus," Julian Hawthorne, Edward Eggleston, and other prominent American authors, will be printed during the year.

SPECIAL FEATURES
(with illustrations) include a series of articles on affairs in Russia and Siberia, by George Kennan, author of "Tent Life in Siberia," who has just returned from a most eventful visit to Siberian prisons; papers on the Food Question, with reference to its bearing on the Labor Problem; English Cathedrals; Dr. Eggleston's Religious Life in the American Colonies; Men and Women of Queen Anne's Reign, by Mrs. Oliphant; Clairvoyance, Spiritualism, Astrology, etc., by the Rev. J. M. Buckley, D. D., editor of the Christian Advocate; astronomical papers; articles throwing light on Bible history, etc.

PRICES. A FREE COPY.
Subscription price $4.00 a year, 35 cents a number. Dealers, postmasters and the publishers take subscriptions. Send for our beautifully illustrated 24-page catalogue (free), containing full prospectus, including special offers by which new readers can get back numbers to the beginning of the War Series at a very low price. A specimen copy (back number) will be sent on request. Mention this paper.

Surface Indications

What a miner would very properly term "surface indications" of what is beneath, are the Pimples, Sties, Sore Eyes, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions with which people are annoyed in spring and early summer. The effete matter accumulated during the winter months, now makes its presence felt, through Nature's endeavors to expel it from the system. While it remains, it is a poison that festers in the blood and may develop into Scrofula. This condition causes derangement of the digestive and assimilatory organs, with a feeling of enervation, languor, and weariness—often lightly spoken of as "only spring fever." These are evidences that Nature is not able, unaided, to throw off the corrupt atoms which weaken the vital force. To regain health, Nature must be aided by a thorough blood-purifying medicine; and nothing else is so effective as which is sufficiently powerful to expel from the system even the taint of Hereditary Scrofula.

The medical profession indorse AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and many attestations of the cures effected by it come from all parts of the world. It is, in the language of the Hon. Francis Jewett, ex-State Senator of Massachusetts and ex-Mayor of Lowell, "the only preparation that does real, lasting good."

Do not be induced to take others, but be sure and get the genuine "Petroline," which is always enclosed in an envelope with the signature of the proprietors, The P. W. P. Co., and directions in four languages; also seal in green and black on each plaster. Sold by first-class druggists, at 25 cents each.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AT THE END OF THE LANE.

It was a shame, I thought, that Aunt Mary, having promised to make me one of her heirs, should expect me to pay her a fortnight's visit, at the same time issuing commands to my partner in the estate for her presence at Deerford. Now, I had nothing against Milly, though she was carroty-headed and freckled, but Aunt Mary's shrewd old head was running in a matrimonial groove, and the idea of entering the harness with a young woman—I beg the sex's pardon—with such a tendency to ugliness was not agreeable to a young man with a professed abhorrence of anything in petticoats.

Behold me, Jack Miston, thirty, good-looking, of course—what man of thirty thinks he is not?—settled in the small-sized farm-house, smelling strongly of whitewash, soap and paint. I mentally resolved, then and there, to use the old house for firewood, once it came into my possession, and erect on the grounds, which cover some thirty acres of valuable land, a substantial stone residence, a country gentleman's it would be, completely fitted for a country bachelor of social habits and Bohemian existence.

My castles in Spain were knocked on the head by the entrance of Jane, the hand-maid, propelling an endless array of pails and brooms, enough to satisfy the cleanly instincts of Old Mother Goose. My masculine soul recoiled in horror. The window stood temptingly open, and I made a bolt; jumping lightly the six feet to fall into a trap little inferior to the one I had just escaped, namely, the hand of my co-partner in law, and willing to be by marriage. Fastening herself on me, she gave me a ravishing look, meant to bring me to her feet, but failing in its object, through a most adorable squint.

"How splendid of you to come and resurrect me. Do you know what you remind me of?"

I confessed my inability to call to mind anything I resembled but myself by stupidity staring into space.

"A breath of pure air," she gurgled, "after being immured in a stifling atmosphere," and I stood transfixed with another look.

This struck my fancy, and I grimly thought of the country air, flower-laden and sweet, in comparison with the atmosphere of the clubs. I whistled softly to hide the laugh her foolishness provoked.

"What are you going to do this morning?" my tormentor asked, sweetly.

"A walk," promptly, as I caught sight of the very frail, high-heeled French slippers that my goddess wore.

"Then I'll go with you. You walk along the road slowly, and I will catch up with you."

She didn't. When next I saw her she was flying along the road, raising a terrible dust, and uttering all sorts of things—my deafness—I'm afflicted a little that way sometimes—made it impossible to hear, and, of course, I haven't eyes in the back of my head. She limped solus homeward, with a far-away oh-to-scratch-him expression in her eyes.

Here was something I had not bargained for, the road ended suddenly, as country lanes have an knack of doing, leaving me staring blankly at the big farm-house at my right, and catching a glimpse of the village road, I jumped the low fence, thanking heaven there was no convenient bull-dog in sight.

"Another obstacle!" I groaned, before I reached the road. Sitting on a gate, sitting and swinging, with her big yellow sun bonnet dangling loosely from her neck, all unconscious of an observer, was a young country girl. As she turned, I made a sweeping bow, likely enough to bring a nod of approbation from Lord Chesterfield, and very sweetly explained the situation. I rather expected to see her limp with surprise and bashfulness, but was mistaken. The big brown eyes regarded me with suspicion, I fancied, and I began to feel discomforted. She was piquant and pretty. I noted great masses of brown bronze hair, falling in distracting little curls over the broad, white forehead. Without a word she sprang lightly to the ground and opened the gate.

"Do you live there?" pointing to the big house in the distance.

A nod of assent.

"A pretty place."

A nod.

"This road runs to Deerford, doesn't it?"

Another nod.

"Are you deaf?" I asked of my nodding mandarin.

The pretty lips widened and she burst into a merry laugh; then, the ice being broken, we got along famously.

Meg, her name was, and her manner, in contrast with Milly's, seemed perfectly divine, so free, so natural, yet withal so modest; and I, the professed woman-hater, sighed that she was only a country girl. Her grammar, to be sure, had the fault of getting a little mixed, but for all that I enjoyed her breezy little anecdotes, her quick repartee and witty replies, and the fun she made of the ways of city folks. I was fast falling in love, but of course the thought was absurd. She amused me, that was all.

"Shall I see you again, Meg?" as she bade me good-bye.

"Well, really, that is not the first time I have been asked that same question, and it depends," with an arch look.

"Depends on what?" I asked, smiling.

"On whether I want to see you again, and—well, I wouldn't feel sorry if I never did. You're such a greeny, you are, not a—a verdant, I think the city folks call us; but you're a little green, anyhow, and you're fun, so if you're passing this way and I'm here I reckon you can see me."

But her smile was so winning and her eyes so coquetish that I could not take offense, and with a parting nod she danced, light as a fairy, over the velvet grass and was lost to sight.

That road became my daily walk. Sometimes I saw Meg, and other times I had to go home with a strange feeling, hard to define, at my heart—bitter disappointment. I was not in love with the little country girl; that I repeated over and over again; but the more repetition gave me no assurance.

One day I missed her, and the next she was not visible, and then the fact stood before me in characters I could not but understand—the little country girl was necessary to my happiness. I loved her, and then came a terrible struggle between my heart and intellect. Could I face my fashionable friends and introduce a girl wholly uneducated, but far superior to many of them in intellect? With Eugene Wrayburne I weighed the pros and cons of the case. Society vs. Meg; and finally my heart conquered—I would ask her to be my wife.

Fortune favored me. Meg was in sight and came forward as I reached the gate. I plunged boldly into the subject and asked her to be my wife.

"Do you love me, Mr. Miston?" she asked with a blush, looking down.

For answer I caught her to my heart and kissed the rosy lips.

"And you won't feel ashamed of me?"

"Ashamed of you!" I exclaimed. "My darling, I shall be proud of you always."

"You need not be ashamed, Jack. I am your equal. When you came upon me so suddenly, while sitting on the gate, I thought I knew you, and then it flashed across my mind that I had met you before. You must have thought me rude to stare as I did, and then I remembered."

"Remembered!" I ejaculated in amazement.

"Yes; Ada showed me your picture once—in fact, it hung in our room for a year—so I couldn't very well mistake you."

"Then you knew my sister?"

"Yes; we were room mates in Mme' D——'s academy;" she answered smiling.

"Great heavens! You are not Maggie Reeves?" I managed to ask.

"Yes; I am Maggie Reeves."

"And you are not a country girl?"

"No, indeed!" she answered. "Mother sent me up to farmer Gray in May to regain my health—I had malaria, last winter—and, thanks to the farmer and his wife, I am wholly recovered."

"Then," I said, "after wooing a little country maiden, I find a city belle on my hands; how am I to manage it?"

"I am afraid you'll have to turn Mormon, Jack," she said saucily, "and keep us both."

FEATHERED LINGUISTS.

Next to the little silver tongued canaries, the gaudy plumed parrot is the most popular of the feathered pets. An individual dealer may perhaps sell fifty canaries or mocking birds to one parrot, but the singers have delicate constitutions, and as a rule do not live long. The bird fanciers know better than any one else what trouble purchasers have with their pets. It is a common experience for a customer to come back three or four times a year for a new bird. The "one bought last never seemed bright," they say "and it died in less than two months after taken home." Occasionally a parrot gets sick and dies, but generally speaking, parrot flesh is not heir to many ills, and the talkers frequently live to a venerable age, says the Savannah News. Mr. Jacob Gardiner said of parrots that the best talkers come from Africa. The gray African learns quickly, and its tone approaches nearer the human voice than any other species of the parrot family. The gray African lives to be thirty and forty years old, and instances are not rare of their living more than 100 years. Very few of these birds are brought here. The Savannah parrot market is supplied by northern dealers and sailors from the West Indies, Mexico and South American ports. Mexico and Cuban birds are often brought here by sailors, and if a tar comes to the door and offers a pair of Venezuelan birds, it is five to one that they are Mexicans or Cubans. The Venezuelans talk as well as the Africans and their plumage is more brilliant.

Birds from the Brazilian forests are the most gorgeous plumaged.

Married people who have no children are good customers of bird fanciers, and if they only buy one bird they generally take a parrot. Other birds may sing like Calypso, but they cannot talk. An intelligent talker is really a companion in many households and fills the place of prattling youngsters. As the parrot simply imitates sounds, considerable practice is necessary before Polly can talk. The names which the birds hear the oftenest are the ones which it first learns. Six months at least are required before a parrot, unless it is remarkably bright, acquires anything of a vocabulary. "Pretty Poll" and "Polly wants a cracker" are the first words learned as a rule. Names of members of the family are soon learned. The intelligence of some birds is wonderful. A family in Savannah recently had two Mexicans, an old one and a young one. Both would watch every opportunity to get out of their cages. When the old one would escape it would quietly slip about the house stealing whatever it could find, but alway slyly trying to avoid being seen. In case the young one happened to get out and the old one could not, the latter would scream "Polly's out!" until some one came.

Another family has a bird which sings "Peek-a-Boo," to the amusement of every one who hears it. There is a popular impression that a parrot will learn to swear quicker than it will learn to use words that are not profane. A gentleman of this city who has at least three birds says that impression is not founded on fact. To satisfy himself he tried to teach his birds a few choice oaths. But after considerable trouble he gave it up as a too difficult task.

Whether the birds had conscientious scruples as to profanity he would not say, but they would not learn to swear. A bird that a sailor has owned is not apt to be conscientious on the subject, but the swearing birds are not so common as is supposed.

Parrots often speak two languages, as German and English, or French and English. The prices run from $5 up to $50, and even higher.

Barnaby Rudge's raven "Grip," and Poe's raven, "Nevermore," must yield the honors of talking to a parrot owned by the United States Senator, Leland Stanford, of California. He paid several hundred dollars for it, and it is said to be a wonderfully educated bird. It speaks four languages—English, French, German and Italian. The strange part of it is that as soon as he hears any one speak, he knows in what language to address the person.

For a long while no one knew that the parrot spoke Italian, until one day an Italian artist came to the house to do some work, and the parrot heard him talk. At once the bird started to jabber Italian, and had quite a conversation with the man. It always talks German to the German servant, and French to the maid.

The parrot, when any one comes down in the morning, says: "Good morning, I hope you rested well." He is very particular, and one day when a stranger went up to him and said, "Pretty Polly; Polly want a cracker?" he quite astonished the person by saying, "Oh, stop that foolishness! Can't you talk sense? I am tired of that rot!" The parrot has not learned to say "chestnuts" yet, but very often when asked if he wants a cracker, says, "That's old; give me something new."

BEGINNING OF THE BOOM.

People in the West try every dodge to get railroads to run near their property. A railroad man tells of an instance of this that recently happened in Kansas. One day when he was laying out his road a citizen came up and began to boom his town. "I have named her Chicago," he said, "and she is bound to be as big a place as the other Chicago, some time. You want to run your railroad through her. It will only take you about six miles out of the direct line, and the business you will get will be immense. Besides you will be the first in, and will get the best location for your depots." "Well, how big is your town now?" asked the railroad man. "Not very big yet, but she is boomin', you bet." "How many houses have you now?" further inquired the railroad man. "Well, to tell the truth, we haven't any yet," admitted the boomer, "but I'm diggin' a well."

WHO PETS THE BABY.

Up to the time a child can talk and say funny things, she—it is generally particularly so with female children—she is her mother's pet. Then she is taken possession of by the male parent. A little while after she is born the new-made parent likes the novelty of dandling her, but that does not last long. Then for a while she is a nuisance to the father, but when she begins to get "cute" and cunning, when her mother has with infinite care and affection developed her infantile brain, the father steps in and begins to monopolize the credit. It isn't fair. But the mother always lets him. When a lady tells me a story of her baby she says "our baby." But when the father talks he always begins about "my li'tle girl," and generally says, "I have a little daughter." There was never a child yet whose best ideas were not derived from the mother. Children who have been petted by their fathers generally talk slang, which their fathers think is awfully bright.

"FRESHY" FOOLS FATHER.

"Pa," said the speculator's son, "I want some money for a little speculation." "I am pleased, my boy," returned the father, as he fished a five dollar bill from his pocket, "to see that you are taking such an interest in the business affairs of life. Now, I won't ask you what this speculation is, but I will go halves with you on it. I will furnish the money and you engineer the business, and we will go halves on the profits. Of course, if there are none, I lose my money and you your time." "All right, pa. I'll make the investment to-day and report progress to-morrow." The next evening when the father returned home he inquired about the "deal." "Swamped!" was the sententious remark of the youth. "Swamped!" exclaimed the old gentleman in surprise. "Yes, swamped," replied the boy. "Never saw such a decline in stocks in my life. Shrunk clear out of sight. It was a good investment yesterday—goods worth their face value then; but to-day you couldn't give them away." "But for Heaven's sake, Georgie, what did you invest in?" "Theatre tickets for last night's performance." The old man thought very hard for a time, and then expressed himself to the effect that the boy was fitted for a confidence operator rather than a speculator.

HOW MEN BUY WOMEN'S CLOTHES.

Men who venture into dry goods stores always do so with fear and trembling. The thread and needle shop, no matter how large and imposing, notwithstanding that it contains everything that a man wears or uses in his household, is still a place where women congregate in large numbers, where saleswomen abound, and is in every way suggestive of women's ways and her wants. The man who can go through a dry goods store with his wife, and enjoy the excursion as much as she does, is among the things that are yet to be discovered. A woman can purchase men's wear from the young man who waits upon her in that department of a dry goods store and not experience the slightest embarrassment, but it takes a bold son of Adam to purchase an article of women's wear from a woman in a like establishment and not wish the job well off his hands. Women declare that with the exception of underwear they would much rather be waited upon by men than by their own sex. They will tell you that the average shop girl is saucy, and acts when taking your order as though a great favor was being done you. Men are more polite and painstaking, know their business better, and try hard to find just the thing needed. If it were possible to replace the saleswomen at a large dry goods store with men we believe that the ultimate result would be satisfactory. Of course the change is not probable, or rather it will not be made, for the reason that female help is much less costly than male. Whether the change would improve business for the stores first making it to so great an extent that the difference in the pay-roll would be made up, is a question for other minds than ours to debate.

THE LARGEST FARM IN THE WORLD.

In the extreme southwest corner of Louisiana lies the largest producing farm in the world. It runs 100 miles north and south and twenty-five miles east and west, and is owned and operated by a syndicate of Northern capitalists. Their general manager, Mr. J. B. Watkins, gives an interesting account of this gigantic plantation, which throws the great Dalrymple farm of Dakota into the shade completely. He was cornered by a reporter at the St. James Hotel and asked to give the particulars of his gigantic enterprise. "The million and a half acres of land in our tract," Mr. Watkins said, "was purchased in 1883 from the State of Louisiana and from the United States Government. At that time it was a vast grazing land for the cattle of the few dealers of the neighborhood. My first work was to divide the immense tract into convenient pastures, establishing stations or ranches every six miles. The fencing alone cost in the neighborhood of $50,000. The land I found to be best adapted to rice, sugar, corn and cotton. All our cultivation, ditching, etc., is done by steam power. We take a tract, say half a mile wide for instance, and place an engine at each side. These engines are portable, and operate a cable attached to four plows, and under this arrangement we are able to plow thirty acres a day with only the labor of three men. Our harrowing, planting and cultivating is done in a like manner. In fact, there is not a draught horse on the entire place. We have, of course, horses for the herders of cattle of which we now have 16,000 head. The Southern Pacific Railroad runs for thirty-six miles through our farm. We have three steamboats operating on the waters of our own estate, upon which there are 300 miles of navigable waters. We have an ice factory, a bank, a shipyard and a rice mill."

IN ANOTHER LIGHT NOW.

"John, do you remember when we used to swing on my father's front gate?"

"Yes, Maria, I do."

"And the moon used to look so beautiful, John."

"It did, Maria."

"And the stars were so bright."

"They were."

"I wonder if the moon is so beautiful and the stars just as bright now as they were then, John?"

"I presume they are, Maria."

"Then why can't we swing on the front gate now and look at the moon and the stars and the blue night skies, with their fleecy clouds, as we used to do then?"

"We can, Maria, if we want to."

"Then, John, let us go out to the front gate for awhile and see if it will seem anything like it used to."

"All right, Maria. You go out and try it awhile, and if you like it maybe I'll take a turn at it."

But Maria thought him too much of a brute to do anything of the kind.

AN EXPECTED STAR.

Over a hundred stars are known to vary in brightness—a few very strikingly—in periods ranging from a few hours to several centuries. In one class the changes seem to follow a regular law, and in another they are irregular and spasmodic. To the latter class probably belong the so-called "new" stars from time to time recorded, which, instead of being new creations, are doubtless faint stars suddenly flashing into prominence. A most remarkable new star was seen in 1572 by Tycho Brahe, who reported that it became suddenly so brilliant as to be seen at noon, then gradually faded away, and was lost to view about sixteen months after it was first observed. Since the invention of the telescope a faint star has been detected so near the spot marked by the famous Danish astronomer that it is thought to be the one whose blazing up he witnessed. This is supposed to have been the bright star of 1264 and 945, and European astronomers are reported to be now watching for another outburst of its brilliancy, which seems to be due if this theory is correct.

IT WASN'T TOOTH POWDER.

I was told yesterday a rather amusing story at the expense of Mark Twain—and the same story is already a standing joke in society. Not long ago the humorist was traveling in the country, and stopped one evening at a house presided over by an elderly woman. He was shown to a room somewhat bare of ornament and furniture, yet slept until morning. When morning came and he rose he became mindful of the fact that, although he had provided himself with a tooth-brush, he had forgotten his tooth powder. He consoled himself with the thought that there must be tooth powder lying somewhere about. After a brief search he discovered something in a small box on the mantel which certainly resembled tooth powder. At any rate he used it vigorously on his teeth, and found it satisfactory. When he got down stairs he apologized to his hostess for using her tooth powder. She appeared surprised. "What tooth powder?" she inquired, blandly. "It was on the mantel," Mark replied. "On the mantel?" she repeated. "Yes, in a small box. It was excellent," he declared. "Good gracious!" she ejaculated, "that wasn't tooth powder!" "What was it?" asked Mark, now slightly alarmed. "Why, that was auntie!" said she. It seems that "auntie" had been cremated.

DIDN'T GET THE OYSTER AFTER ALL.

Flapdoodle, who lives, or, rather, boards, in Jacksonville, concluded that he would have a treat recently. (Flap. is a single man.) So he went into a restaurant and ordered an oyster stew. It arrived in due time, and Flapdoodle proceeded to investigate it. Suddenly he sprang to his feet, and, in a voice rendered tremulous by joy, shouted:

"I've got one!"

"Got one what?" inquired the proprietor.

"An oyster!"

And seizing a big spoon he re-captured the bivalve, and he, the waiter and the dish-washer, in solemn procession and due ceremony, marched to the kitchen and re-consigned the oyster to the pot. Then the proprietor shook his fist at the cook and said:

"You are docked your week's salary for serving out the oyster that we keep for seasoning purposes."

While this scene was going on in the kitchen, Flapdoodle finished his stew and skipped out without paying his bill.

The next time Flap. draws an oyster in a hash-house lottery, he will not speak until he is outside of the bivalve, and, even then, he will remain silent if he has any reason to suspect that there is a stomach-pump in the neighborhood.

SHAVING A DEAD MAN.

A loquacious barber informs us that his most trying experience is in shaving dead people. He says on this cheerful subject: "You would be surprised to notice how fastidious some people are about the tonsorial treatment of their dead. Last week I was summoned to shave the face of a deceased dry goods salesman. In life he was a very fashionable person, vain of his good looks and possessed of the notion that he made an irresistible impression upon susceptible female hearts. His weakness was shown in his desire to linger in the barber's chair. He always insisted upon having his hair dressed to perfection, and there was great trouble unless his mustache was curled with the nicety of execution of which the most skilled artists in my line alone are capable. Well, when I went to attend him after death his widow, who had been extremely proud of her handsome husband, insisted that he should be made as attractive as he was before he relinquished the cares of existence. I worked over him for more than two hours before she was satisfied. Every resource of my profession was brought into play, including a liberal expenditure of bay rum, hair tonic, cosmetic and brilliantine. 'He looks real nice,' was the widow's comment when I had finished. She was so well pleased that she never demurred when I charged her the rather stiff price of five dollars for the job. For work of this kind the rate ordinarily runs from fifty cents to two dollars."

Simon walked home with the minister after service last Sunday, and the latter complained of exhaustion. "Tired out, eh?" said Simon. "Yes," sighed the reverend, "completely gone up mentally and physically; I actually strained my back in getting up this morning's sermon." "Oh," said Simon musingly, "you must be very near the bottom of the barrel!" There is a coolness between them now that furnace heat cannot dissipate.

HE HAD TO RUN.

A boy about ten years of age was rushing along the street of a Dakota town as fast as he could run, when he happened to meet his father.

"Here, hold on!" cried the parent, grasping him by the arm. "You'll make yourself sick running so on such a hot day. Come on home to dinner."

"L-l-egge o' me, dad!" panted the half-exhausted boy, "there's a bully dog fight down there, and I wanter go and—"

"Dog fight!" exclaimed the father, getting excited. "Great Scott! what are you standing here for? Go on quicker'n lightning and show me where it is!" and the boy dashed away, making frantic efforts to keep from getting stepped on by his parent tearing wildly behind.

A GAY GIRL BRIDE.

Brides do such queer things nowadays. I quite remember when in the extreme South, the bride was as eager to look lovely at all times to her husband as she had been to her sweetheart. But here, if the bride is following a course that is to add to her beauty, as very many are nowadays, she does not allow an interruption because she is doing such an ordinary thing as getting married. Think of a bride sufficiently self-possessed to say to her bridegroom of a few hours: "Well, my dear boy, my complexion, which looks so nice, would be very wretched if I did not cover it every night with a mixture that has an egg beaten in it; over this, to keep it from soiling the pillow and to keep the air out, I tie a quilted mask with openings for my eyes, nose and mouth. You would have to know it a little later on, and you might as well get used to it in the beginning." She told this her very self, and added that men were so queer, because he made a great row about it and chose to sleep on a lounge.

A COLOSSAL LIAR.

I think lying is older than gambling. The primordial protoplasmal globule lied, I believe. In old Olympus the gods lied like pirates, and if you read mythology you'll find that Jupiter had to lie to Juno nearly every night. And she caught him out nearly every time. Juno was a rustler. I don't believe lying ever reached such absolute perfection as in a man who came on the overland with a friend of mine lately. He could not be beaten, on any proposition. They got talking about gold mines, and the Californian thought he knew a good deal about that subject. The stranger was a mine owner.

"You should see my Peruvian mines," said the traveler. "That's the place where they have gold. I've seen specimens—specimens that ran up into the hundreds of thousands."

"Well" said the Californian, "I have myself a specimen of pure virgin gold."

"My dear boy, I've a hundred specimens that beat virgin gold."

"Say!" said the Californian, "In your travels did you ever hear of a man named Baron Munchausen?"

"Oh yes. He owns the next claim to me."

ANOTHER LOCAL OPTION BILL.

The temperance people of this State are getting ready for aggressive work, and are actively preparing for the presentation of a local option bill to the next Legislature. Last session a bill was introduced into the Legislature of this State for local option, and it succeeded in passing the Senate, but was killed in the House. The temperance people intend to present that bill to the next Legislature but with many alterations and in better shape, as they think, than the former bill. This matter is in the hands of men who are deeply imbued with the spirit of their work. They are not necessarily Prohibitionists: in fact the movement is not a third party one by any means, although there are some Prohibitionists in it. On Tuesday of last week a meeting of a committee interested in this project was held in New York, and the matter was discussed and preparations made for the drawing of a bill for local option by counties. It is expected that co-operation will be had with the church commission from the leading denominations of New Jersey, and that a committee will be at Trenton during the session of the next Legislature to press by all legitimate means the passage of the bill.—Montclair Times.

UNDER THE FOOTLIGHTS' GLOW.

I have heard of all sorts of flirtations, but the thoroughbreds of Boston have gone the usual snap a cultured better. The science of flirting has been by them so reduced to an intellectual pursuit that it throws anagrams and all their relations quite out in the cold. It is an especially delightful pastime since the theatre is its absolute field of action. It takes a clever fellow to start it, because he must pick out the mashee with great tact, and it takes a girl of keen appreciation, as well as willingness, to catch on. Having chosen your girl you will be lucky if she sits in the front row of the gallery or parquet circle, if you are in your usual wet seat in the centre aisle. You make sure that her escort is her brother or a disinterested party who went tumble to it also. Then when a sentence from the stage comes that will carry a message from you to her, you give her a tender glance. If she's a clever girl she sees your pretty game at once and don't hesitate to send you back a dispatch from her bright eyes as soon as the author and the actor will voice it for her.

It's a great sport if you don't make a mistake in the girl and is as intellectual as even Boston could desire. It is the real cultured article.

150 MILES AN HOUR.

"I predict," said a friend of mine yesterday—

"An earthquake?" I asked.

"No; I am a railroad Wiggins. I predict a regular hair-raising advancement in railroad time making. I predict that in the next twenty-five years the people of the United State will see trains make a speed of 150 miles an hour. My idea is this: The railroad of to-day is too small an affair; it is too crooked and too insignificant. Take points like Chicago and New York. An ordinary railroad is too small an affair to do the business. Let a mint of capital build a road as straight as the crow travels from New York to Chicago. Let it go right straight through regardless of hills, mountains, and valleys. Build a track, say fifteen feet wide. Let the rails be as big—well, as big around as a sea serpent, for instance. Then build an engine with drivers ten feet high, every thing heavy and strong in proportion. I mean build a great big railroad as much ahead of the present roads as the present roads are ahead of stage coaches. Steam up your big engine—pull the throttle wide open, and let her go! Give her a straight track, clear the deck, and I'll bet she'll—well—I'll bet she would make the fastest time of to-day ashamed of itself. Mark me—what can be, and is needed, will be.

DEMOCRATIC FOES.

A distinguishing trait of the Democratic party and one which commends that political organization to honorable mention, is its sincere and unfaltering devotion to the interests of the people, not to any privileged portion, but to all the people, irrespective of class, creed, nativity or worldly condition.

The most bitter opposition the party of Democracy ever encountered during its active career of now nigh a hundred years, was because of its uncompromising hostility to aristocratic tendencies of every character.

The Federal party fought the very name of Democracy with tiger venom, for the reason, that the Democratic party truthfully, boldly and with conquering effect denounced Federalism as alien to Republican equality and freedom.

And so, through the many subsequent years of political history, has the party of Democracy, in its sturdy championship of popular rights, been antagonized at various times and under different pretenses by the same fell spirit of aristocratic Federalism that once strove so hard to make "the rich and the well born" sovereign rulers of the land in which we dwell.

They are striving as of yore for mastery over the people.

They are mercenary from head to foot.

Money is good in its proper place, but Justice and Honesty are good everywhere and a thousand fold safer and better than monopolistic wealth.

Next Tuesday, Hon. Robert S. Green, will be inaugurated as Governor of the commonwealth of the State of New Jersey. Arrangements are already perfected that will make this inauguration the grandest ever known in the State.

The great Republican party, by methods that are acknowledged dishonorable, frustrated the people, through their chosen representatives, the Democratic party, from organizing the lower House of the Legislature on Tuesday last at Trenton.

A meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee for Union county was held on Monday, Jan. 3rd, at 3, P. M., at their rooms, Library Hall Building, Elizabeth, when the following named officers were unanimously re-elected: Thomas B. Budd, Chairman; Charles A. Ryan, Secretary and J. Williams Crane, Treasurer. A resolution offered by Mr. John L. Crowell to attend the inauguration of Governor-elect Green was adopted unanimously. After which the meeting was declared adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman.

The Democracy throughout the State cannot but feel proud of its able, honest, upright and conscientious defenders in the present House of Assembly, Messrs. Noonan and Hudspeth of Hudson, the eloquent trio from Essex, Messrs. Barrett, Crane and McDermit, while Union with Matthews and Atlantic with Beckwith, the party, though in a roundabout-way were cheated in the organization, by their friends, the enemy, will accomplish what the people intended they should, the election of our present popular Governor, Leon Abbett, to a seat in the U. S. Senate from the all-time Democratic State of New Jersey. With so many expounders of parliamentary jurisprudence the Democracy may rest assured of being defended and receiving an honorable reward by their long list of young and able defenders.

Janitor Titus having been convicted of murdering Tillie Smith, of Hackettstown, has been denied a new trial and will be sentenced to death. All efforts to save him have failed, and there is but one earthly hope for the wretched man, the leniency of the Court of Pardons. That power will be invoked, and those who most revere the justice for which the State is famed earnestly hope that the appeal will not be in vain. It may be true that they were not fatal defects in the method of the trial, and that the courts were justified in declining to make a precedent by interfering; but it is also true that the conviction was based upon inconclusive circumstantial evidence, that the verdict was reached under the pressure of an excited local sentiment, and that no greater harm to the cause of justice could be done than to hang a man whose guilt is open to such serious doubts as that of Titus.—Newark Sunday Call.

Board of Chosen Freeholders.

The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders held its regular meeting last week. Director Martine presiding. The joint committee on public buildings and jail inspection made their final report regarding the completion of the jail addition, which cost $13,000. The cost was $1,000 more than the appropriation. Collector Sheridan submitted the following report:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—At the commencement of the year I have the honor to report to your board that the taxes of the year have been very promptly paid, which shows that the various collectors are worthy of their positions and deserve the thanks of the people for their promptness in liquidating claims. The total amount remaining unpaid is as follows: From Elizabeth, $14 662 09; Rahway, $10 420 49; Springfield, $1,215 98; total $26,338 56. This does not include interest.

The amounts now in arrears on previous years are as follows: Rahway, 1879, $3,473 70; ditto, 1881, $1,764 17; ditto, 1882, $791 09; total, $6,028 96—not including interest.

It is also my pleasure to report that the county has temporary loans or outstanding obligations (other than bonds not yet due), and that the current expenses, bonds and coupons falling due have been promptly met; also all contracts for addition to jail have been paid.

The bonded debt of the county at the end of the fiscal year will be reduced $27,000 (that being the amount falling due this year). This will reduce our interest account next year $1,620. As our grounds and buildings will need but little expenditure for some years, and as our bridge account next year may be lighter we can drop back to our levy, $125,000.

At this time we have sufficient cash on hand to pay the state tax, leaving still enough with assets due, more than equal to our needs.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

P. SHERIDAN, Collector.

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 9, 1887.

THE LEGISLATURE MEETS.

The Democratic members of the 111th session of the New Jersey Legislature met in caucus in the Assembly Chamber in Trenton, at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning last. The strife for the possession of the speakership, and the minor offices in the gift of the Democratic majority, was, with the factional feeling apparent on the evening previous, at a decidedly disadvantage to the Democracy. The candidates for speaker were Messrs. Hudspeth of Hudson, Harrigan of Essex, Throckmorton of Monmouth and Wolverton of Hunterdon. The first ballot showed Hudspeth 19; Wolverton 12; Harrigan 1. Throckmorton having thrown his strength to Hudspeth. A similar vote selected W. J. Thompson of Camden for Clerk, Ex-Assemblyman Drake of Morris for Engrossing Clerk and James F. Connolly of Hudson for Reading Clerk. No sooner was the nomination of Connolly announced that Wolverton withdrew from the caucus followed later by Assemblyman Baird of Warren and Arawine of Hunterdon. The Republican managers under direction of Gen. Sewell here showed their hand. Summoning the two Labor men, Donohue and Carrol of Passaic, a deal was made by which the twenty-six Republicans, the two Labor men and the three bolting Democrats were to secure possession of the assembly offices. A committee was sent after the bolters from the Democratic caucus, but they had made up their minds and refused to return. Long before three o'clock, the hour set for opening, crowds packed the corridors, halls and offices of the State House, eager to procure seats in the Assembly Chamber, and when the doors were thrown open the scramble to enter was confusion of the worst kind. The Republican members who had entered with the crowd were politely requested to retire as were the crowd also, by the Secretary of the Democratic Caucus, Frank M. McDermit, who said: "Gentlemen, the Democratic caucus is not ended, and the House will not organize or do business until all outsiders retire." Assemblyman Beckwith of Atlantic chairman of the Democratic caucus was in the chair and Frank M. McDermit of Essex and Thomas F. Noonan of Hudson were acting as secretaries. Ex-Speaker Armstrong said "the Constitution requires organization at three o'clock and we demand possession of the House of Assembly." "Who demands it?" returned Beckwith. "The members-elect," said the ex-Speaker. "Well, you are not in the chair now, Mr. Armstrong, and you are no longer the dictator of this House," said McDermit of Essex, while Noonan of Hudson added, "the Constitution has been wrongly quoted. It does not declare that the Legislature must necessarily organize at three o'clock, and it has been the invariable custom for the majority to be permitted the use of the Assembly Chamber till it can decide upon officers. Now, gentlemen, I ask you as a matter of courtesy and custom to retire." No effort being made by the Republican members to vacate, Noonan added, "Gentlemen, I am surprised that one so well known for his uniform courtesy as ex-Speaker Armstrong should refuse to accede to my request, which was as courteous and polite as I knew how to make it." "If the crowd will leave I doubt not an arrangement can be made by which the Democrats will be permitted to go on with their deliberations," said the ex-Speaker. "Won't you make an attempt to depopulate the chamber by leaving yourself?" demanded McDermit. "Once for all," said Beckwith, "this is or was a Democratic caucus and we are going to stay here and complete our business if we have to remain all night." Words followed by Dr. Baird, of Warren and Edward T. McLaughlin of Hudson. "As chairman of this caucus," said Beckwith, "I respectfully request that those who are not members to withdraw." "And I personally request all Republicans to withdraw," added Armstrong. Then the galleries were soon vacant and only a few outsiders remained on the floor. An animated and angry war of words followed with what remained and after Trenton policemen appeared on the floor of the House only did the Republicans consent to leave. They entered the Speaker's room and with Donohue and Carroll, the two Labor members from Passaic, Arawine and Wolverton of Hunterdon and Baird of Warren, a "combine" was effected whereby the spoils were distributed between the three factions and the organization perfected by the election of Dr. W. M. Baird of Warren as Speaker; Clerk, Joseph Atkinson, of Newark; Assistant Clerk, Herbert Potts, of Jersey City; Journal Clerk, James O'Brien, of Patterson; Sergeant-at-Arms, Terence J. McDonald, of Jersey City; Assistant, James Willever, of Hunterdon; Engrossing Clerk, Holt Stockton, of Hunterdon; Assistant, J. F. Salliman, of Hunterdon; Assistant Journal Clerk, Irvin Cox, of Hunterdon; Document Clerk, G. R. Johnson; Keeper of Ladies' Gallery, William Burgoyne; Keeper of Men's Gallery, Frank McCaffrey. They are all Democrats and Labor men, excepting Potts, who is a hide-bound Sewell Republican. They asked to be permitted to re-enter. They came back into the Democratic caucus. Scenes then occured which are indescribable. From our perch in the Gallery it looked decidedly dangerous. Men flew about the Chamber. Police officers were again on the floor and members excitedly took sides with the two bodies and in the wildest kind of uproar both sides simultaneously made motions and both presiding officers simultaneously declared an adjournment to ten a. m., Wednesday.

On Wednesday morning the House as organized on Tuesday in the star chamber manner met, and after Hudspeth and Noonan of Hudson, Beckwith of Atlantic, Matthews of Union, McDermit and Barrett of Essex, demanded that they, including Turley, of Camden, be sworn in, they were opposed by Armstrong of Camden, and Corbin of Union, as against Turley only, who finally after recess was admitted. Much disorder was manifest. Wolverton of Hunterdon, who bolted his party on Tuesday, in an emotional tone of voice explained why he went over to the other side, stating that his county received no patronage, etc., in the gift of the majority. Hudspeth of Hudson said: "It is publicly bruited throughout the State," said he, "that recently public men have used money to eliminate from the Democratic party its rights—the rights of the majority,—and have been and are trying to elect Mr. Sewell, from Mr. Armstrong's district from Camden. The gentleman for whom we are making the fight is near and dear to the hearts of the gentlemen on the Democratic side of the House, and now their opponents are trying to throw Mr. Turley out, not to defeat Mr. Turley, but to elect Mr. Sewell the United States Senator." McDermit of Essex said: "We see the Republican party getting nearer and nearer to the chair. A Republican Assistant Clerk is sitting there now. We see Republican corruption aiding in knocking out Mr. Turley. This is damnable when such men as Wm. J. Sewell can work his way in this Assembly. A rumor has it that the lobby has money enough to secure the unseating of a representative from Camden. It would be better if the members dropped dead than to go back on the Constitution of the very State whose interests they are sworn to protect." Routine business followed after which the House adjourned to Monday evening next.

The New Jersey Senate refuses to organize on the last Monday, because the members elected to represent the high-toned Republican party, hope thereby to defeat the will of the people that went against Sewell.

GOV. ABBETT'S MESSAGE.

In his third annual message, sent to the New Jersey Legislature, Tuesday afternoon, Gov. Leon Abbett indulges in no preliminary remarks, but plunges at once into the question of corporation taxation. By the decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals the law by which railroad and canal companies must pay their portion of the burdens of State taxation has been declared constitutional.

Under the laws of April 10 and 18, 1884, the State will collect for 1886 $1,075,000, an increase of State revenue from corporations over 1884 of more than $357,000. There will also be collected for local purposes, only for the years 1884, 1885 and 1886 on certain real estate of railroad and canal companies, taxes aggregating $1,061,627 86.

Then he has this to say regarding the taxation of corporations and its bearing on general taxation.

"The State has secured, during the past few years, results that are of great advantage to the people, but it has not yet obtained the full measure of equal taxation. The act of April 10, 1884, contains a limitation upon the taxation of railroad and canal property for local purposes, which excludes the main stem of railroads, the waterway of canals, and the tangible personal property and franchises of these corporations from any tax for local purposes, and also limits the rate, on the property remaining subject to local taxation, to 1 per cent. If these exceptions and the limitations were stricken from the act, these companies would substantially pay the same tax as individuals. If the real estate of these corporations was taxed at full local rates, less the one-half of 1 per cent. reserved for State purposes, this class of property, instead of paying for local uses in 1886 the sum of $367,781 69, would pay the sum of $1,230,162 41.

"The ratables for each taxing district would be increased if each taxing district was allowed a proportionate part of the value of the franchise and the tangible personal property of these corporations, but there are difficulties in the way of such apportionment that render it unwise for the present to do anything except to levy a State tax as now provided in the act of April 10, 1884.

"The foregoing figures show a direct loss of $862,380 72. This is an enormous subsidy, contributed by the farmers, land owners and other taxpayers of the State, for the benefit of these great corporations. Is this just? Only one answer can, in my judgment, be given."

A series of tables are appended to the message to show how the change proposed would operate to the benefit of each taxing district by reducing the burden of taxation on individuals, which ranges from two cents per $1,000 up to as high as $8.76 per $1,000, the latter case being in the Pompton district of Passaic county.

The average local tax rate under existing laws is $16 97 2-5 per $1,000. The average rate on the real estate of railroads and canals under the law of April 10, 1884, is on the contrary but $8.11½ per $1,000. If the railroads and canals paid full local rate on their real estate the average rate for all classes of taxpayers would be reduced to $15.42 per $1,000, and the average saving to the individual taxpayer now paying full local rates would be $1 55 2-5 per $1,000. The aggregate saving would be $862,380 72. This has been calculated on the basis of excluding from local taxes the valuation of franchise and tangible personal property of railroads and canals, amounting to $71,638,188 64. If this amount be added it will make the aggregate ratables $744,524,766 29, instead of $672,886,577 65, and would require only an average tax rate of $14 39 per $1,000 to raise the $10,375,903 99, and the State tax of one-half of 1 per cent. If this new rate of $14.41 per $1,000 be adopted, this would make an average saving to the individual taxpayer of $2 55 per $1,000 instead of $1 55 per $1,000. This would increase the aggregate saving to $1,418,873 31.

Under the act of April 10, 1884, the State Board of Assessors taxed 97 railroad and canal companies for the year 1886—for State purposes the sum of $964 901 73, and for local purposes $372,364 18.

Pennsylvania system	$394,584 77
Reading system	221,841 51
Erie system	101,786 0[illegible]
Del., Lackawanna & West'n system	286,617 73
Unclassified	201,418 89
Total	$1,337,265 9[illegible]

The total valuation of the property upon which this tax was assessed is $192,980 343 28, being an increase over the valuation of 1885 of $3,283,691 33. The total increase of tax for the year 1886 over 1885 is $21,001 29, of which $16 418 80 is assessed for State purposes and $4 582.49 for local purposes. The mileage of the railroads in the State is reported as 1,932,663 miles; of this amount 517,622 is double track and 127,807 is siding, making a total mileage of 3,478,094. The total length of the canals and feeders is reported to be 176,417 miles.

In relation to the Morris and Essex Railroad taxes the Governor, in spite of the recent decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals, which granted the lessees of that corporation—the Delaware, Lack*awanna and Western Road*—coveted exemptions, still believes that they can be compelled to bear a fair amount of the burden of taxation, because he thinks the courts will decide that its annual returns have been incorrectly made, in that items have been charged to the equipment account in very large sums, instead of the construction account, where they belonged and where they would have been liable to taxation. Then he adds:

"There appears to have been an attempt made to create in the public mind the impression that the State is doubtful of the result of the pending investigations into the charges above referred to, and it has been suggested that some compromise should be effected in the interest of the State. Should an attempt be made during the present session to pass any act which will interfere with the proper prosecution of the State's claim against this company it will not be done in the interest of the State. The officials having the matter in charge are satisfied that the claim made by the State is just and can be successfully maintained in the courts."

Gov. Abbett also recommends a complete revision of the general tax laws to prevent the frauds now practiced in some localities in assessing property very much below its true value. He wishes to have "equal burdens and equal rights for all, corporations as well as individuals," and to that end would have revisory tax boards appointed in the various counties of the State. So, too, he would have the charters of defaulting companies who do not pay the taxes repealed.

Another important matter upon which the Governor touches are the election laws. Regarding these he says:

"The election laws of the State should be revised. Elections should not only be pure, but they should be so conducted under law that every citizen should believe them to be pure. The use of money by corporations or their officers or agents, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of affecting elections, and all attempts to intimidate or unduly influence the action of any employe, should be punished as a most serious crime, and, in addition to imprisonment and fine, should deprive all persons guilty or cognizant thereof of the right to hold any office or employment in any way connected with such corporation. Any employer of labor who abuses the advantages of his position to interfere with the free and untrammeled action of the voter should be punished by imprisonment and deprived of the right of suffrage and the right to hold office.

"The present system, while excellent in some respects, needs revision. The Justice of the Supreme Court who makes a recount should, before the election, upon application of any person who intended to be a candidate, appoint one or more persons for each political party at each polling place, who should have the right to be present at the election and during the counting of the ballots with the right to see each ballot, and file objections to the counting of any particular ballot, designating it by the number indorsed thereon. The disputed ballots should be sealed up and delivered to a Justice of the Supreme Court within 24 hours, who should forthwith decide whether they had been properly counted, and if not order how they should be counted. Such Justice should also have authority to order a new election in any polling district where these provisions had been disregarded, if the vote of that district would change the result of the election."

The Governor recommends an appropriation to enlarge the State prison in order to prevent the overcrowding which now exists, and another for the construction of proper buildings for the New Jersey Home for Disabled Soldiers. An additional building for the care of 200 incurably insane is recommended to be added to the Insane Asylum at Trenton.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER DOES NOT CONTAIN LIME, AMMONIA, OR ALUM.

Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, manufactured by Cleveland Brothers, Albany, N. Y., is absolutely pure and wholesome. It is made only of strictly pure Grape Cream of Tartar Bicarbonate of Soda, and a small portion of wheat flour, and does not contain Ammonia, Alum, Lime, or any adulteration whatever.

The Cream of Tartar is refined by a new process which frees it entirely from lime and every impurity, and is obtained in the pure crystals and ground in our own factory; the Bicarbonate of Soda is prepared expressly for us; and to ensure uniform and absolute purity of our baking powder all the ingredients are subjected to searching chemical analyses and none used unless proved to be perfectly pure.

"We are analyzing all the Cream of Tartar used in the manufacture of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and we hereby certify that it is practically chemically pure—testing as high as 99.96 per cent. and not less than 99.50 per cent.

"From a hygienic point of view we regard Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder as the ideal baking powder, composed as it is of pure Grape Cream of Tartar and pure Bicarbonate of Soda.

An Efficient Remedy
In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

No quorum of the Fire Board, Tuesday evening, so a special meeting has been called for to-morrow evening in the City Court room.

THE Constable for the collection of Delinquent fire taxes, G. P. Smith, has up to date coaxed from unwilling pockets the sum of $905 65.

Next Monday evening the Toboggan Slide will be run for the benefit of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, and, the weather permitting, we predict a large attendance.

THE concert at the Academy of Music drew a well filled house (over 2000). The Rock Band Concert Co., gave some good instrumental and vocal music.—Philadelphia Press.

WE will brave the probability of the tinkling of the chestnut indicator, and remark upon the possibility of the glowing of ye incandescent lamps, before our next issue.

"TWENTY thousand people heard the Rock Players in Chautauqua. It was pronounced a very unique and pleasing entertainment", says Dr. J. H. Vincent, Chancellor Chautauqua University.

THE latest fashionable craze is to collect wish bones. The ladies polish them, tie ribbons to them, and fasten them to a handsome plaque and use them as parlor ornaments.

THE Y's are arranging another reception to be held when and where is not exactly known. The programme is to consist generally of vocal music, principally by local voices.

THE annual meeting of the State Charities Aid Association of New Jersey will be held in the Common Council room, Lyceum building, Morristown, N. J., on Wednesday, January 19th, 1887, at 10:30 a. m.

WE must ask the pardon of those of our subscribers who only received the second and third pages of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, last week. An unexpected demand for extra copies cut into our regular edition.

IF some of the many milkmen, grocers and others who are driving sleighs this weather, are arrested and fined because their horses wear no warning bells, they need only blame themselves for thus violating the law.

OUR report of the recent lamentable proceedings at Trenton (subsequently recognized as the organization of the Legislature) is by a representative of this paper who was present. We can vouch for its truth.

THROUGH the kindness of Mrs. R. F. Penfield of this city, late Superintendent of Periodicals of the W. C. T. U., of N. J., we are favored with a copy of the minutes of the recent convention of the organization held in Plainfield last October.

WE suppose the authorities are displaying commendable activity for the city's interest in stopping the speeding of fast horses, but how about the condemnable inactivity displayed in permitting the violation of the ordinance against icy sidewalks?

WE somewhat regret that we have not the space to print, as requested, the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union's "Address to all Knights of Labor, Trades-Unions and other Labor Organizations". The circular is full of sympathy, advice and hope.

IF Mrs. Shellenger, the aged lady who slipped on the icy sidewalk in front of the residence of Mr. S. D. Collins, on West Fourth street, and broke her leg, would rise up and sue the city, we believe she'd obtain damages in another but a more satisfactory way.

MR. ALEX THORN of the late well-known firm of Berry & Thorn, has established headquarters on Somerset street adjoining the bridge, where he displays a handsome stock of stoves, ranges, etc., and where he receives and gives immediate attention to orders for all work in his line.

MISS LUCIA F. KIMBALL of Chicago, National Superintendent of the Department of Sunday School work of the W. C. T. U. in which she has had seven years active experience, will address a Sunday School Union Meeting at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday afternoon next at 4 o'clock. Miss Kimball will speak in Reform Hall, Sunday evening on temperance.

THE Superintendent of the Sunday School Department of the National W. C. T. U. Miss Lucia E. F. Kimball, of Chicago, will be in Plainfield, January 15th and 16th, under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The Parlor-Meeting Committee have arranged for a lecture in the Congregational church, Saturday evening, January 15th at 7:45. An invitation is extended to all.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT, N. W. Pease, of Elizabeth, was the recipient, Christmas morning, of a very handsome present from the teachers of Union county under his charge. The gift was a large plush-covered patent rocker. Mr. Pease is now serving his eighteenth year in his present office, and by his unremitting labor has been largely instrumental in raising the schools of the county to their present high standard.

IN accordance with one of the foundation principals of true charity, the managers of the Relief Association earnestly desire to procure sewing for worthy women whose chief means of support is by the needle. The ladies of Plainfield will kindly remember that by application to the Superintendent of the Association, who is daily in attendance at the rooms, women may be procured at reasonable prices to do sewing of various kinds.

THE Berlin Weekly Echo offers a prize of 20 marks for the briefest and wittiest answer to the following conundrum, which might have been propounded by the author of "The Lady or the Tiger?" A young spendthrift, who is able to borrow money only because his affianced has promised to pay his debts after the wedding, falls into a river together with her before the wedding has taken place and both are on the point of being drowned. A miserly creditor of the young man happens to pass, jumps into the water and saves—whom and why?

THE Central Times in speaking afterwards of the appearance at Music Hall of Haverly's Minstrels, Thanksgiving day, said "there was nothing dismal about their entertainment. That was bright and enjoyable. In several particulars it is the best show of the kind that has been given here." And even THE CONSTITUTIONALIST said a good word to the effect that "many and emphatic were the expressions of approval given. The programme was extended, varied and admired." This company has been engaged to appear again at Music Hall, Thursday evening of next week.

THE fire bell again tolls the hours of noon and evening.

It is probable that the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond will accept the call of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Albany.

THE "balance of power" in the Council on the liquor license question, says "all or none" of the applications shall be granted. But time will tell.

Freeholder Vanderbeek, who has been under the weather for a few days, is now thoroughly recovered and his cheerful countenance enlightens the Chautauqua Corner, again.

AMONG the active firemen named for the office of Chief, to succeed Mr. August Saltzman, the one we, so far, hear spoken of the oftenest, is Foreman T. H. Keller of No. 2 Engine Co.

THE pool tournament for the championship of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, will take place in the billiard parlor of the Club house, this Friday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock. The prize, besides the title, will be a handsome cue.

THE Standard Cable company, backed by the Standard Oil company, but organized under the laws of New Jersey, and in which one or two Plainfield capitalists are financially interested, held its annual meeting at Laing's Hotel, Monday.

THE many friends of Mr. Charles Smith of Front and Somerset streets, were favored on New Year's Day with a pleasant testimonial of "Charley's" good feeling in the shape of a little cigar box, containing a photograph of the donor's kind face, and filled with fragrant havanas.

The German given by Miss Gussie Murray, Wednesday evening, was but another one of the many brilliant affairs the residence at Central avenue and Eighth street is noted for. About seventy-five were present and thoroughly enjoyed the fine music from New York and the bountiful supper.

THE Rahway Democrat says Plainfield people are alarmed at "the fact that Westfield is growing (sic) more rapidly than Plainfield". But the same article asserts that an acre in Westfield can be purchased for 1,000, and an acre in Plainfield for $5 000. Now, we would ask our deranged contemporary, which proves a demand for location.

THE committees of Reform Club for the year, just appointed are: Executive—Dr. H. H. Lowrie, John H. Cuthbert, H. N. Spencer, Martin I. Cooley, A. Vanderbeek. Speaking—Rev. W. E. Honeyman, Col. Julian Scott, Dr. A. Utter. Finance—W. R. Coddington, L. A. Hummer, S. P. Hoffman. Printing—Joseph M Harper, William Sharkey, Thos. Rutledge.

TOBOGGANING is all the fashion. The slide here is not only crowded at all sessions by our own residents, but large parties from Bergen Point, Rahway, and other places not so favored as Plainfield, are often present among the patrons. Wednesday afternoon Mr. Townsend Rushmore gave his Sunday school class the use of the chutes at his own expense.

WE publish on the opposite page the annual statement of that most successful of fire insurance companies, the German American, of which Messrs. J. C. Pope & Co. are the agents in this city. By comparison with last year's statement, we notice that the company's assets have increased half a million and its net surplus is greater by over three hundred thousand dollars.

THE new play by Bronson Howard, "Met By Chance", is now being presented at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, at an expense of production amounting to about $10,000. Miss Helen Dauvray, who entered the hearts of the inhabitants of the New and the Old Worlds as "One of Our Girls", is the brilliant little lady whose talents and whose ducats deserve the new play's success as a reward.

THE costs incurred in the proceedings taken by the Township officers of Fanwood in the matter of procuring adjudication as to certain road encroachments, amounted to $763, yet all such costs have been paid at once. We congratulate Messrs. Kyte, Miller and Terry, the Township Committee, not only on their legal victory, but on their ability and will to settle at once the bills incurred.

WE are much flattered with, and appreciate highly, the kind things so many of those who live in the dark and the vicinity of Park avenue and Fifth street, have said to us in recognition of our efforts towards the location of an electric light—as ordered by the Council—at the only point the Council's orders have been defied. But congratulations are not yet in order. Wait until the lamp hangs out to burn.

WE publish elsewhere the ordinance just adopted by the Mayor and Council of North Plainfield, prohibiting the riding of bicycles on the Borough's sidewalks between 7 a. m., and 9 p. m. The civil and dignified French nurse from Erin, however, is still the authorized occupant of the centre of the walk, and will continue to run her baby carriage up your back and over your toes unless you step aside into the gutter or behind a tree.

THE annual financial statement of St. Mary's church shows the amount of receipts to be $14 778 37 and disbursements the same less $11 42. The receipts included a loan of $1,500; pew rentals $3,595 51; fair, $2,285; sale of old rectory, $3 205; Sunday collections, $1,092 98; other collections, $1,859. A little over $4,000 was applied to the church debt which now amounts to $18,500. Among the expenditures was the purchase of a lot for school purposes costing $2,700.

OF course it was impossible for the "Little Tycoon" to fill the house with a second appearance, but even a larger audience than it deserved was present Thursday evening of last week at Music Hall. The music is all simple, but some of it is sweet enough to tempt people of intelligence to sit through both the wheat and the chaff. But the inane puns, common gags and low-down localisms thrust in without rhyme, reason or place, did not improve the opera by turning it into a burlesque. We are not "Buckwheats"—at least, not all of us.

MR. ALFRED PEARSALL will give a musical, dramatic and humorous entertainment in the W. C. T. U. course at Reform Hall, on Tuesday the 18th inst. Mr. Pearsall has appeared on lecture courses with such men as Judge Noah Davis, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Dr. Talmage, John B. Gough, Dr. J. H. Vincent, Will Carleton and others, and has unnumbered pulpit, press and personal endorsements. Those who desire to be entertained and amused, should not fail to hear Mr. Pearsall. Course tickets can now be obtained for the small sum of $1. Single tickets, 35 cents. THE Union Counties Charities Aid Association, as an auxiliary of the State Association, organized in the chapel of St. John's church, Elizabeth, Monday evening. Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany of this city explained the objects of the Association, as follows: "First. To promote the improvement of the mental, moral and physical condition of the inmates of all charitable and penal institutions in the State, and in particular, of all State institutions, county poor houses and city almshouses, prisons, jails, penitentiaries and reformatories, lunatic asylums, orphan asylums and all places where for charitable, penal or reformatory purposes, any individual is supported at public charge. Second. To induce the adoption, by the community at large, of such measures in the organization and administration of both public and private charity as may develop the self-respect and increase the power of self-support of the poorer classes of society."

THE sleighing could not have been better nor the weather more suited for the enjoyment of it, than during the past week. And still there's more to follow.

ABOUT forty-five members of Ivanhoe Council, American Legion of Honor, partook of a supper at Force's Hotel, last Monday evening, after a business meeting.

IT is remarkable for the weather to continue so steadily and evenly cold as it did for five days up to Wednesday. The thermometer ranged only from five to fifteen above.

MR E. V. SHOTWELL is another victim of the criminal carelessness of our municipal authorities in permitting slippery ways to be. He fell because of such, and now suffers from a fractured shoulder joint.

IT has been reported that Mr. Barney Moore, the first Foreman of Warren Engine company, who was subsequently in the employ of Mr. A. M. Griffen, and recently a resident of New York, died in that city last week.

THE "Alpha" Social Club gave a Social at the residence of Mrs. Geo. Muschutt, 102 E. Front street, Wednesday evening last. There was a large attendance and a very pleasant time experienced by all. France furnished excellent music.

A HORSE attached to a grocer's sleigh ran through Park avenue so rapidly, Monday morning, that it couldn't turn at Front street, so it jumped the driver's seat and landed alongside the pole between Mr. John Tier, Jr's team that was standing with a sleigh-load of ice in front of Pope Bros.

THE Congregationalists will give a concert for the public inauguration of their new organ, Thursday evening, Feb. 17th. At this early date we cannot give a complete list of the artists who will take part, but Mme. Lasar-Studwell, who last sang in this city at the vocal of March 12th, 1885, is expected to be the sweet singer of the occasion.

ONE hundred and ten enthusiastic scientists met in Stillman High School, last Wednesday afternoon. Reports were presented from the various divisions of the Society lately organized, and the entire company voted to unite with the Agassiz Association. An interesting address was delivered by Mr. Frank Smith of Rutgers College, and the work promises great results.

AFTER a session lasting until midnight, the North Plainfield Council adjourned for two weeks. It is expected that at its next meeting the ordinance "to provide means for extinguishing fires, manufacturing and domestic purposes," will be adopted as published by us, Dec. 17th, with the few amendments considered and approved at the Council's meeting, Friday of last week.

SUPERINTENDENT MATTOX of Music Hall is given a date and the use of the Hall, each year, by the act of the Directors in recognition of Mr. Mattox's services. This year he donates such privilege to the Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, and on the evening of Feb. 1st, that association will present for its benefit (and for the benefit of the audience) a thrilling drama of the evils of intemperance.

WEDNESDAY evening at about 8.30 o'clock, fire was discovered among some empty tallow barrels stored in P. M. French's barn, opposite the end of the alley leading from Front street to the mill-race. The alarm was rung and the entire department turned out—the truck being drawn by hand, as its horses were off to Somerville with a sleighing party. The flames were put out with snow, however, and no damage done. "Cause unknown."

Moonlight Nights and Fine Sleighing.

How the young people are enjoying these happy conditions! The air every night is musical with the tinkling chimes of the sleigh bells and the joyous laughter of thoroughly happy young people. As we grow older business responsibilities and household cares somewhat dull the edge of our enjoyments, but to most of us the sleigh bells are still joyous sounds, recalling those never to be recovered days when a bright moon, a willing horse, a neat cutter and a pretty girl bounded a world of happiness. The most of us have been there, young folks, know all about the fun you are having these beautiful nights, and will pardon us if we envy you as we re-live the days of "auld lang syne," under similar conditions. But we don't expect to commiserate us. We know from experience that a young couple while sleighing on a moonlight night are oblivious to all the rest of the world.

Obituary.

The funeral of Hiram B. Young took place from his residence in North Plainfield, last Thursday afternoon, at two o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Richards officiating. The services were simple but impressive, and the unusually large attendance of friends bore testimony to the esteem in which the deceased was held, particularly by his associates of his own age, for nearly all present were noticeably young men and women. Mr. Richards spoke in most feeling terms of the young man's character, saying that he was honorable and upright in all the acts of his daily life, that he especially performed nobly and faithfully the family duties which had fallen to his trust, adding that the dead young man, though not a member of any church, had yet left behind him abundant evidence that he was fully prepared for death, and that he was indeed gone to that land where all is joy and peace, and where sickness and sorrow cannot enter. By his death, the community in which he lived has suffered the loss of one of those rare characters which the world can ill do without, for he presented a manly example, in his humble life, of purity, uprightness and moral courage in always doing what was right, that makes other men the better for seeing in their midst. The grief that mourned around his bier was sincere and heartfelt—sisters, brothers and friends alike mingling their tears of love and affection. Thus was taken from us a young life full of promise, cut off at the very threshold of early manhood, and again we have to bow to one of those inscrutable decrees of Providence which yet we find it hard to accept unquestioningly.

We Wish Them Success.

We are expecting to hear at any time, "before the year is out", of the engagements that will follow the proposals of marriage that the prettiest school-teacher of this city and one of society's ladies have taken the latest means of securing. They knit them with their own hands and wear them day and night. They are of bright yellow, and the result promised is the desideratum we mention above.

Borough Council Proceedings.

The Mayor and Council (all present) of the Borough of North Plainfield, met in regular meeting, Friday evening last. Petitions for crosswalks on Linden avenue and Duer street, were received, referred and granted. Collector Spencer reported as the total receipts for taxes to January 1st, $1,727 10. Clerk Mattison's report showed a balance on hand of $10.50. The claim of $21 39 for costs in the suit against the Borough by Mr. T. J. Carey, was referred to Corporation Counsel Jackson, and he was subsequently instructed to appeal the case. The Council confirmed as members of the Board of Health, the following nominated by the Mayor: P. M. French, 4 years; Isaac Brokaw, 4 years; Rev. T. Logan Murphy, 3 years; Dr. W. E. Mattison, 2 years; Dr. J. H. Carman, 1 year. The ordinance prohibiting the riding of bicycles on the sidewalk was adopted as published by us elsewhere. The Water Supply ordinance was amended in many particulars and laid over until the next meeting of the Council, Friday evening, the 21st inst.

A Browning Club.

Among the literary characteristics of the present, one of the most remarkable is an awakening of interest in the writings of Robert Browning. Until recently his readers in America were a very small and select body of people. But since attention was called to his works through the C. L. S. C. and the lectures of Canon Farrar, the number of Browning's admirers has increased tenfold. It is announced that every copy of a work on Browning by Prof. Corson, of Cornell University, was sold before it made its appearance, a few months ago.

Browning societies, for the study and interpretation of his poems, have been organized in many places. Such a society has been proposed in Plainfield, to be composed of the readers of Browning's poetry. All who desire to unite in its organization are requested to send their names to either Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, D. D., or Miss Bulkley, principal of the High School. Notice of the first meeting will be sent to all who thus signify their desire, but no public announcement will be made.

Personalia.

Mrs. Massett chaperoned a sleighing party of seven couples, Tuesday evening, to Bound Brook for supper and a dance, and home again towards morning.

The news reaches us from Newark of the marriage there, Wednesday afternoon of last week, of Mr. Orrin E. Runyon, formerly of this city, to Mrs. Minnie D. Smith.

Mrs. J. Hervey Doane of La Grande avenue will sail in a few weeks for Florida, making the pleasure trip on the Clyde Line S. S. "Cherokee", of which her father is the commanding officer.

Mr. James Frank Mundy, the accomplished son of City Janitor Mundy, is writing a serio-comic ballad that gives great promise if we may judge by its title—"Poverty's Tears Ebb and Flow."

Mrs. Wm. Bloodgood entertained a number of her friends, Friday evening of last week, in a novel and intensely pleasing manner. There was a coasting party on the "Rahway Hill", and a bountiful supper at the Ninth street residence, followed.

Mr. William Sandford, Jr., of Seventh street and Plainfield avenue, has been so charmed with Mr. George Kirkner's description of life and climate in the Far West, that he will join the latter at St. Paul in a few days, and may be settle there permanently.

Mr. Charles Schermerhorn, Jr., son of Manager Schermerhorn, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, in this city, started on Monday last for Vicksburg, Miss., to accept a position with Samuel R. Bullock & Co's Water Works Co., who are engaged in erecting a system of water works at Vicksburg. A large number of friends and acquaintances wish "Charley" luck in his new venture.

Major Charles E. L. B. Davis, of the U. S. A., is visiting his father, Mr. C. S. A. Davis, of this city, at his residence on Broadway near Hillside avenue. Major Davis' Headquarters are at Detroit, Mich., where in command of his corps of Engineers, his duties are the inspection of the Government light houses and the survey of the Lakes. He is at present enjoying a month's leave of absence.

Despite bad weather, even the spacious parlors, halls and stairways of the Kirkner mansion were filled, Thursday evening of last week. The occasion was a reception given by Miss Kirkner, and her popularity was evidenced by the large number of friends that braved the weather to be present. The best of music led the dances, and artistic programmes were presented those who indulged. The supper was by Ramonetti.

There were "no cards", and only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present at the happy wedding ceremony that united Miss Minnie Bird and Mr. Frank Morse at the residence of her father, Thursday evening of last week. The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes officiated, assisted by the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond. Upon their return from their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Morse will reside at Bergen Point.

Mr. W. H. Doane, the courteous Superintendent of Frank C. Greene's warerooms, this city, has accepted a more lucrative offer elsewhere. The public will be sorry to learn this, as Mr Doane was universally liked for his gentlemanly and urbane manner in dealing with customers. To him was due the tasteful appearance of the show windows, which were always looking so attractive. Mr. Doane has the best wishes of a host of friends for his future success and welfare.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Councilman Voorhees motion that the electric light located at Third and Liberty streets be erected, was tabled. The communication of the Electric Light company in relation to the dating of its contract, was referred to the Laws Committee with power. Councilman Voorhees' perseverance in relation to the petition of Mrs. Tingley, was rewarded by the granting of her request to remove a frame dwelling provided the written consent of the property owners along the route described, be first obtained. The published rules of order of the past Council, were adopted as the by-laws of the present. On recommendation of the Lamps Committee, gasoline lamps were ordered to be placed at Third and Liberty streets, and on Third between Washington and Richmond streets. A number of claims reported correct by the Auditing Committee, were ordered paid, and, on motion, the Council adjourned for two weeks.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

There were interesting sweepstake matches at pigeons on the Middlesex Gun Club Grounds, on Wednesday last. Every effort is being made to make the coming Tournament an event of pleasure and interest to sportsmen.

There was a pigeon match at 30 birds each, between Harry Campbell, of this city, and James Pilkington, of Oak Point, on Wednesday last, which drew quite an attendance to Campbell's Club House. Campbell shot his adversary out on the 17th bird. We failed to receive score as promised.

Miss Annie Oakley, the young lady shooter, who gave an exhibition shoot on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club, Dunellen, N. J., some weeks since, and was presented by the Club with a handsome gold badge, has attested her appreciation of the Club's generosity and gentlemanly conduct, by presenting to them a fine large photograph of herself in shooting costume. M. E. church. Mr. Nelson sold 159 tickets, exceeding by a large number those who had them for sale in Rahway. The winner of the cane needs it very much this slippery weather. If he was to drop great would be the fall. Mr. Lewis Peterson did not want the cane very bad,—he sold only one ticket.

Dr. J. S. Mitchel, of Chicago, in a clinical lecture at the Cook County Hospital, Oct. 7, 1886, said: "In typhoid fever no remedy we can administer is so valuable as Quinine; at the best it can only effect a temporary reduction of temperature; and after forty-eight hours the fever is usually higher than at first."

Liver, Lung and Kidney Disease.

Prof. W. F. Holcombe, M. D., 54 E. 25th St., N. Y. (late Prof. N. Y. Med. College) writes: "Kaskine is superior to quinine in its specific power, and never produces the slightest injury to the hearing or constitution."

The U. S. Examining Surgeon, Dr. L. R. White, writes: "Kaskine is the best medicine made."

St. Francis Hospital, N. Y.: "Every patient treated with Kaskine has been discharged cured."

MISS BEGONIA'S CANARY.

"Please, Miss Begonia, is there anything else for me to do?"

Miss Begonia Featherfield was leaning back in her comfortable bamboo-chair in the shadiest corner of the cool veranda, with an open book in her lap and a palm leaf fan in her hand.

Miss Begonia had been born and brought up in the West Indies. She was a tall, yellow-faced female, with high cheek bones, small bead-black eyes, and hair that she wore frizzed, not because it was becoming, but because it was the fashion; and she wore foulard-silk wrappers that hung in straight folds from neck to instep, and made her figure look a degree more like a clothes-post than its natural capacities—which, indeed, were quite sufficient.

What a contrast was little Barbara Held, the fifteen-year-old German girl, as she held open the door and viewed Miss Begonia the four inches of aperature with mute, admiring awe. Oh, to wear silk dresses like that: to sit and read picture-books all day!

If Barbara had been asked whether she would prefer to be an angel or Miss Begonia, she would have answered "Miss Begonia."

"Please, Miss Begonia," she asked, in a soft contralto, "is there anything more that I can do?"

"Have you fed the canaries," said Miss Begonia, "and given the monkey exercise, and cleaned the lory's cage, and looked after the parrots, and furnished fresh nuts to the squirrels?"

"And cleaned the east windows, and watered the ferns and helped Deborah clean the silver?"

"Yes, Miss Begonia."

"Then I suppose you may go. But be sure you are here at four o'clock precisely to gather the red raspberries for tea."

Barbara Held dropped a little courtesy, and went away to fulfill her next engagement—that of daily scrubbing at the house of Mrs. Levinbolt, one of those rabidly neat housewives who regard cleanliness as a shade or two superior to godliness.

For Barbara Held was a hard-working little elf, and there was need that she should work. The Held family had come over from Germany two or three years before. But Herman Held, the father, had died of ship fever on the way; the mother had been paralysed on one side within a month of reaching the American El Dorado, and there was only Barbara to find bread for the three moon-eyed little Helds.

Miss Begonia watched the brown-checked figure flit away and disappear in the linden shadows of the front lawn and then rose up.

"I shall drop asleep, if I don't stir around a little, and gather lilies for the India vases," said Miss Begonia, and then she went in to look at her birds.

A row of gilded cages hung high above the envious paw of cat or dog; Miss Begonia eyed them with serene satisfaction.

"All right," soliloquized she, "Pet and Darling, Mince, Pinkey and—why, goodness gracious me! the linnet-canary is gone!"

Transfixed with horror and astonishment, Miss Begonia stood before the empty cage which had contained the pet and pride of her heart.

"The cage door is tight shut, too! The linnet-canary is stolen! Oh, no, perhaps—who knows but Barbara Held has changed him to some other cage. It would be unparalleled audacity, but—"

And snatching a curious straw hat from its nail behind the door, away posted Miss Begonia Featherfield to the Held cottage.

Barbara had not got home yet, but Mrs. Held sat with her knitting in her lap. Mrs. Held could not rise to courtesy to the great lady, but she smiled in her feeble German way.

But Miss Begonia took no notice of them; her eyes were glued to a spot on the wall, just back of the paralyzed woman's head, where hung in a wicker cage containing the linnet-canary.

"Well, I never!" cried Miss Begonia. "The impudence of the thieving creature—after all that I have done for her, too. Well, I never!"

Mrs. Held looked troubled. She could not understand the words, but the tone of anger and amazement was unmistakable.

The three little Helds had begun with one accord to utter the words: "Mrs. Levinbolt's on Cherry Tree Lane—," when the door opened and in walked Barbara.

"You ungrateful minx," cackled Miss Begonia, "you bold, bad thief! I've a mind to send you to State Prison, that I have!"

"Oh, please, ma'am," faltered Barbara, "what have I done?"

"You've stolen my Susette, my linnet-canary. There she hangs right before your face and eyes."

"Please, ma'am, it isn't Susette, its a bird that Mr. Lyman gave me—Mr. Lyman, the artist, that is summering at Mrs. Levinbolt's."

"A likely tale," said Begonia, wrathfully. "You bad, bold girl, give me that bird at once."

But Barbara only sank down into a splint chair and began to cry. So Miss Featherfield caught down the cage herself with a jerk.

"And, now, Barbara, never come near my house again."

"But, Miss Begonia, please——"

"Not a word! You hear what I say; heed it, and I shall take especial care that the neighbors all know this."

Miss Begonia was just enough to stop at the Levinbolt farm on her way to see Mr. Lyman.

"He started on a tour to Canada this morning," said Mrs. Levinbolt. "He'll be gone three weeks."

"I—thought—so!" said Miss Featherfield, with a sarcastic laugh.

And the next morning, when Barbara commenced her round of work, people looked coldly upon her and closed their doors in her face.

"We must all starve now," she said, "Poor mother and the little ones, and all!"

The next evening, as Miss Begonia was gathering up some scarlet feathers which the lory had plucked from the macaw's head in a bird cage, something whirred around her head and settled, a small, fluttering, yellow mass, against the bars of the empty cage.

It was Susette, the linnet-canary. Draggled, weary, half-starved, the little truant had winged his way back to the prison between whose bars it had contrived to squeeze itself the day before.

First, Miss Begonia fed and caressed her bird, then she put on her things and carried it, cage and all, down to the Held cottage.

"Barbara, said she, here's my Susette, And there's your canary. And though they are like enough to be one and the same, they're not. And I've behaved like an old fool—and you'll be a young one, Barbara, if you bear any malice against me after I've begged your pardon, which I'm going to do now. And I'll go all around to the neighbors, wherever my wicked tongue has wagged, and say the same thing. And you shall come and be my little maid, Barbara; and there's a dollar apiece for the children, and one for the mother. You'll forgive me, Barbara?"

So the sunbeams broke through the cloud of Barbara's troubles.

BENEFITS OF A BEARD.

The throat is a wonderful instrument of music. Place the fingers upon it, and every time you speak you can feel the vibration of the vocal organs, producing sound. Anything that even touches the throat impairs the purity of those sounds. Fling a cloth over the strings of a piano or a violin, and get music out of it if you can. So every cloth which surrounds the throat impairs the sweetness of the voice. Women go with necks bare; men have theirs swathed and bandaged, and ten women have a sweet voice where one man has. A man's voice should be as pure as a woman's. Why is it not? He is shaved and choked. God has provided a covering for a man's throat, light and soft; it clothes the neck and preserves the health. But a man gets a sharp iron, scrapes his neck, ties a rag round it, takes cold, has sore throat, bronchitis, consumption, and then dies.

JEFFERSON'S ROYAL HOSPITALITY.

Thomas Jefferson, toward the close of his life, was so infirm and poor that he applied to the Legislature of Virginia for permission to dispose of his large estate by lottery. He hoped by this method to realize a sum sufficient to pay his debts and to give him a competence.

Public duties prevented him from looking after his estate during many years, and a profuse hospitality had exhausted his means. Mr. Jefferson was the most popular of American citizens, and people came from far and near to see him.

Life at Monticello resembled, for years, that in a hotel at a fashionable watering place. Members of Congress, office-holders, clergymen, lawyers, doctors, artists, foreigners and people of fashion flocked to see the great statesman and to partake of his great hospitality.

Fifty guests were entertained in one night, and whole families came in their carriages and remained for months. One family of six persons came from Europe and made a visit of ten months. Then they made a short tour through the States, returned to Monticello, and remained six months longer.

A gentleman asked Wormley, Mr. Jefferson's favorite servant, pointing to the three carriage houses, each of which would contain a four-horse coach, "How often were these filled in Mr. Jefferson's time?"

"Every night in Summer, sir," answered the servant; "and we often had two or three carriages besides under that tree."

"It must have taken all hands to take care of your visitors?"

"Yes, sir, and the whole farm to feed them," said the slave.

PYÆMIA
Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA
Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is also the only one that will cleanse the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of

ANÆMIA,
A wretched condition indicated by Pallid Skin, Flaccid Muscles, Shattered Nerves, and Melancholy. Its first symptoms are Weakness, Languor, Loss of Nerve Force, and Mental Dejection. Its course, unchecked, leads inevitably to insanity or death. Women frequently suffer from it. The only medicine that, while purifying the blood, enriches it with new vitality, and invigorates the whole system, is

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE LAWYER'S DELEMMA.

When I was a young man I had a great passion for the law business. My father indulged this in me, and gave me ample means to carry me through a course of study under the most favorable circumstances. Two years after I became a solicitor the incident occurred which I am about to relate.

One evening, while I sat in my office alone, and thinking over the case I had in hand, the door opened, and two gentlemen entered. This was nothing unusual, and yet I did not like the appearance of my visitors.

"We require your services for an hour to night, if you can spare the time," said the elder of the two, in a coarse voice, "and you shall be well paid for your trouble. Our case is rather peculiar, and it will be necessary to preserve the utmost secrecy in regard to it."

"I am at liberty to transact any business for you to night," I replied. "What do you want me to do?"

"We are settling up our family affairs, prior to our departure for abroad, and there are certain papers and documents that we want copied and signed in legal form. But, as I have already told you, it must be done under the seal of secrecy on your part. Unless you consent to be blindfolded while you are being driven in a carriage to the house you need not undertake to manage our business; but, of course, this can make no difference to you."

"Not at all," said I, "if, as you say, it is of any consequence that it be done as you propose."

"Well, sir, I am glad you view the matter in a business like way. Here is the money for your services. You see, we do not intend to cheat you in any way. The carriage will come for you at ten. Is that too late?"

The preliminaries being settled to their satisfaction, they took their departure, with as little ceremony as possible, and I was left to my own thoughts of the enterprise.

I must confess that the idea flashed across my mind once or twice that those two men meditated throwing me into the river, or otherwise disposing of me. But this did not dampen my love of adventure, for I was determined to the end of it, whatever might be the personal risk.

I took the precaution, however, to put a pair of loaded revolvers in my pockets while I was waiting for the carriage.

Precisely at ten o'clock I was driven off, in company with the two men who had called at my office early in the evening. Before we had gone half a dozen streets one of the men produced a large silk handkerchief and carefully bandaged my eyes.

For some time the carriage rattled along—I knew not where—and my companions talked to me freely upon various topics, evidently to keep me from being frightened during the drive.

I had serious thoughts of removing the bandage from my eyes and refusing to proceed any further, but then I came to the conclusion that this would be cowardly, and so I determined to see the end of this strange adventure even though it should—as I was sure it would—involve personal risk.

After a drive of half an hour, as near as I could guess, we arrived at our destination.

"Now, sir," said one of my companions, "allow me to be your guide," and as he spoke, opened the carriage door, and stepping to the ground, helped me in my blindfolded condition to get out also.

"Don't stop, John," said he to the coachman; "come back at half-past eleven."

I do not know whether the coachman was a party to the intrigue or not; but he certainly must have thought it strange to see me with a bandage over my eyes.

Perhaps the villainous pair had already informed him that I was suffering with sore eyes, and was obliged to keep them covered from the night air. However, I had no time to waste on the driver or his thoughts; my own position was sufficiently interestingly just then to monopolize all the attention I could spare.

When we quitted the carriage, my companion, who acted as spokesman, took my arm and led me along a gravel pathway for twenty or thirty yards, then up, what seemed to me, a long passage. He opened the door with a latch-key, and ushered me into a hall.

"Now, sir," said he, as he closed the door and locked it, "you may remove the handkerchief, as the rest of the programme will require your eyes."

I am afraid I smiled in a sickly way as he made his speech, and I thought I might need my revolvers also before I could escape from the trap into which I had voluntarily gone.

In a few moments I was seated in a comfortable room, and my companions were arranging some papers and explaining the contents. This disarmed my suspicions of personal violence, and I felt a little more comfortable.

"We will only detain you a short time, sir," said the old gentleman. "This document is a transfer of property, and requires to be copied in legal form. The young lady to whom the property belongs is my niece. It is unnecessary to go into details of our family affairs. My reasons for wishing a settlement in this way will appear plain to you when I tell you that my niece inherits insanity, and has been partially insane at times for some months past. This document merely makes me her lawful guardian, and will prevent the interference of distant relatives who might swindle the poor girl out of her property."

I examined the document which he handed me, and found it to be exactly what he represented it.

"But," said I, "it will be necessary to have the young lady's signature to this in order to make it legal."

"Yes, certainly," said he; "Alice will sign it. She is now perfectly sane, and is willing to have the matter arranged at once; for she fears—poor thing!—another attack, and is in momentary dread of its appearance. I will call her when you are ready for the signature."

After half an hour I had completed my work. During all this time my mind was busy trying to unravel the mystery of the case before me. Of one thing I was very certain—these men were engaged in a game of villainy.

My suspicions were strongly aroused by this time, and I was determined to frustrate them, either then or in the future, if possible; but how I was to accomplish it was as yet a mystery to me.

"Go and call Alice, Mr. Peterson," said the elder gentleman, who seemed to be the moving spirit of the plot.

I thought I saw them exchange winks as the young man departed, but of this I was not sure, for my nerves were strung up to a high pitch of excitement. Presently the door opened, and Mr. Peterson entered with a young girl.

As I glanced at her my heart throbbed wildly. She was of medium height, and remarkably handsome, although bearing the traces of sorrow and suffering. I could not help feeling that her eyes, as they looked into mine, appealed to me for protection. Her manner and silence also betokened a certain amount of fear lest her guardian should notice her look of entreaty toward me. "Alice," said the man who called himself her uncle, "you already know the contents of this document. Your signature is all that is needed."

"Now is my time," I thought, and, taking the paper to see if it was signed properly, before any one was aware of my intention, I put the document in my pocket and drew my revolvers. Turning upon the terror-stricken men, who were thus taken by surprise and at a disadvantage, I told them I had divined the falsity of their purpose in this transaction, and would free the young lady from her gaolers.

"Oh, save me! save me!" cried Alice, in agony of terror. "It is all a base plot of these two unprincipled wretches to defraud me out of my property. They have threatened to kill me if I refuse to assign it into their hands."

"It's a lie! It's a lie!" they both shouted, simultaneously. "You will have to answer for this outrage!"

"Be calm, gentlemen," said I, now doubly emboldened by seeing that I had guessed the truth of the case. "If you move hand or foot I will blow you where you long since should have been! Fly for your life, Alice," I said, "and I will protect you from these scoundrels."

She rushed toward the door and opened it, then fled from the house.

I covered my retreat as I walked backward until I had reached the door; as I closed it with a loud bang, I felt like one transported to Paradise, for I knew that they dare not follow me to the street.

Alice, noble minded girl, was waiting for me on the pavement, and we were soon beyond the possibility of annoyance from the scoundrels whom we had left in the house.

As we walked along the streets Alice detailed to me the whole story of her wrongs. From what she told me it was evident that her life would have hung upon a thread if these men had been successful in getting her to assign her property. She was an orphan, and her uncle, together with his accomplice, had concocted the plot to defraud her and get her out of the way.

Alice Hilgrove regained her liberty and her fortune. She is now my wife, and, I have every reason to suppose, one of the happiest women in the world, because she has told me so a thousand times within the last ten years.

All efforts to capture the two men who caused Alice so much misery proved useless. They escaped from the city; but it is to be hoped they will meet with the punishment which is due to their evil deeds.

LOVE IN THE DARK.

We were seated in luxurious arm-chairs before the cheerful open grate in Jack's snug smoking-room, enjoying his excellent Havanas, when my host broke the silence which had lasted for several minutes with the surprising question: "Did I ever tell you where and how I proposed to my wife?"

I nodded a negative reply, well aware as I did so that he knew he had not told me, but had prefaced his tale with an interrogation, according to his usual custom.

"It's quite a long story," said Jack, in a warning tone, remembering my aversion to lengthy yarns as told by any one but myself.

"Ah! but such a subject," I answered, settling myself more comfortably in my chair and drawing the box of Havanas conveniently near. "I shall be delighted to hear about it, but what will Mrs. Taylor say to your telling me?" I added, knowing how the partner of my lot would feel on the subject.

"She has positively forbidden me ever to speak of it," said he, laughing, "and I have obeyed her until now, with one or two exceptions, but it's too good to keep."

My curiosity was now fully aroused, and as Jack would tell the story of course I was obliged to listen, and if you think that in repeating it I am acting unfairly I'll stop at once.

"It was during my second year at Harvard," began Jack, knocking the ashes from his cigar. "How long ago it seems. But let me see, it's only eight years. Yes, it was during my Sophomore year that I accepted Frank Wilson's invitation to spend the holidays with him. He was awfully good company, and I knew that I would be sure to put in a jolly week at his place. Besides, there was another very strong inducement.

"I was in love at that time with his cousin, Helen Wilson, whom I had ascertained would be of the party. I believe we used to write to each other. I know I used to spend the greater part of my time composing verses about her, many of which, however, I had not the courage to send.

"When I heard that she was to be at X—— I was delighted. I determined to go to New York and see if we could not arrange to travel up together.

"When I arrived in that city I went directly to her house; but at the door I learned that she had just left for P——, having decided to go a day sooner than she expected.

"I inquired how long she had been gone, and the servant said about fifteen minutes. Hoping to overtake her I rushed up to the Grand Central depot. There was not an instant to lose. Hastily buying a ticket, I tore frantically after the already slowly moving train, and owing to my length of limb succeeded in boarding the last car.

"Panting, perspiring, but exultant, I went through every car, in every seat expecting to find the object of my haste.

"I had gone through all but one when we entered the tunnel, and I was beginning to fear that after all perhaps she might not have taken this train, when, as I was standing by the door, the rays of sunlight which came in through the occasional openings in the tunnel revealed her to me, seated alone, at no great distance ahead of me.

"My heart gave a bound, and, scarcely realizing what I was doing, I rushed up to her, dropping into the vacant place beside her and grasping her hand, said:

"Darling! I thought I had missed you!"

"What do you mean!" she exclaimed, in a tone of mingled indignation and fright. 'Let go my hand; you have made a mistake.'

"I obeyed her, thinking that she was angry at my mode of address.

"'I beg your pardon,' I said, 'I should not have spoken to you as I did, but I was so rejoiced to find you that I did not remember where we are. But as I have begun I may as well finish.' 'Darling,' moving a little nearer, 'will you marry me? You must know that I love you; I have done so for ages, ever since my Freshman year.'

"But the mention of that astonishing piece of constancy produced no result in my favor. She turned her back upon me, if possible, more completely than she had before. But I would not give up.

"'Can't you love me a little?' I inquired tenderly, trying to take her head. But she snatched it away and declined either to turn her head in my direction or to answer my question.

"As the train was making a tremendous noise I thought that, perhaps, she couldn't understand me, so I repeated my words at the top of my lungs. She made some reply, but I didn't catch it.

"'What do you say, dear?' I bawled.

"'I don't even know you,' she answered in what sounded like a shrill whisper, but the tone was in reality a shriek.

"I thought I could not have heard aright, and to convince myself that it was my hearing that was at fault I planted my glasses more firmly on my nose and took a closer inspection of her.

"'I tell you I don't know you,' she repeated, bringing her foot down on mine with much energy. 'Leave me this moment, or I'll—'

"Here the train emerged from the tunnel, and you can picture my amazement, horror and mortification when I tell you that the girl to whom I had been screaming out my love was an utter stranger to me.

"Dazed and scarlet, I arose from my seat.

"'I beg your pardon,' I said, removing my hat; 'I have taken you for some one else.'

"Not observing how my apology was received, I retreated to the smoking-car, where I remained until we reached X——, too stunned even to think.

"When I left the train, in looking about for some sort of conveyance to take me to the Wilson place, I found, to my increased embarrassment, that the girl to whom I had so recently offered myself was standing on the platform, apparently waiting for some one.

"That she saw me I could tell from the expression of not seeing me which she immediately assumed. As she would not look at me, I had plenty of opportunity to observe her, and saw that she really did resemble Helen in many ways, notwithstanding that she was both fairer and smaller.

"But my object was not to admire her, *although I assure you that was my in*clination; so finding that there was no hope of obtaining a vehicle, I started on foot, fortunately getting a lift over the greater part of the way.

"Arrived at the house, I was welcomed with much cordiality by my host and his family and introduced to the other guests.

"Imagine my feelings when in the course of the conversation, I learned that Frank's sister was expected home from boarding school that afternoon by the very train on which I had come.

"It was then to her I had been making love instead of to her cousin. My disposition was to turn and run, but I knew I should have to stay and make the best of it, so I smothered my mortification, and when a few minutes later the carriage arrived, bringing Miss Wilson, and I was presented to her, I think that of the two she found the situation more awkward.

"The next day the tardy Helen arrived, and explained how, returning to the house, for something, she had missed the train and her escort.

"During the entire week I was im*patiently waiting for an opportunity to* offer myself to her, but before I could do so I learned that a large diamond ring which she had been wearing for several months was the pledge of her engagement to some other fellow; and, to my surprise, discovered at the same time that the knowledge did not trouble me very much, although for a while I did feel considerably broken up.

"I suppose you think I was half in love with the sister, but I assure you I was not. I considered her too young for me, although now I think her just right for me in every particular, and it was not until several years later, when I met her again as a charming young lady, that I realized that I had accidently proposed to the woman whom of all others I would choose for my wife."

HOW TO HAVE A DRESS MADE.

What Mr Bowser didn't know about dressmaking up to a week ago wasn't worth knowing. What he doesn't know now would fill a large sized book. I was fretting about the delay on the part of my dressmaker, when he suddenly turned on me with:

"Mrs. Bowser, it's all infernal nonsense. When I order a suit of clothes they are ready for me at the date set, and if there is any reason why a dressmaker can't do business on business principles, I want to know it."

"But I can't help it," I protested.

"No; you can't! Your women are fools to be imposed upon as you are. I'd like to see one of these dressmakers bamboozle me around the way they do you!"

"But you don't wear dresses."

"For which thank Heaven! There is more nonsense about selecting a dress and having it made up than is seen in an idiot asylum in a year. I tell you, it's all bosh!"

"You might select my dress goods for me."

"Oh! I might! Well, hang me if I don't! Yes, sir, I'll go down this very afternoon and buy you a new dress, and I'll follow the cloth until you have it on your back! I'll show you, Mrs. Bowser, that business is business!"

He began operation after dinner. Mr. Bowser has an alarm clock which goes off to the minute. He, therefore, argues that everybody else ought to go off with the same promptness and dispatch. He jumped off the car and rushed into a dry-goods store and said:

"Give me twelve yards of stuff for a dress—quick?"

"Calico or silk?" queried the clerk.

"Why, silk, of course. You may give me two shades—six yards in a shade. I'll take green and blue.

"But no one can get a dress out of twelve yards of silk, and as for the colors—"

"They can't, eh?" howled Bowser; "my mother never had over twelve yards for a dress, and twelve has got to make one for my wife. The colors are all right."

The clerk gave him what he asked for, and Bowser rushed home and flung the package in my lap with:

"Been gone just thirty-seven minutes by the watch, while you would have been fooling around three afternoons. There's twelve full yards, and if you have any pieces left you can line my overcoat sleeves."

"Twelve yards! Why, I never got less than twenty-three! Don't you see how narrow the silk is?"

"Um! I thought it was shooting-width, of course. That's another fraud I'm going to look to."

"And the shades—I can't wear 'em—no one could."

"You can't! Well, you will, all the same! This talk about matching the complexion with dress goods is the twaddle of idiots! If green and blue won't hit you, then let her miss! It's my taste, and I think I know what belongs to harmony. We'll go down after supper and get the dressmaker to begin work."

"But I know what she will say."

"Oh! you do! Well, you leave that to me. I'm bossing this job, Mrs. Bowser, and I'll learn you a thing or two before you get through."

After supper we drove down-town to a dressmaker's. As we got out of the carriage Bowser charged me to keep my mouth shut and let him do the talking, and I cheerfully-promised obedience. He carried the bundle under his arm, and, as we entered the shop, he asked:

"Will you take a contract to build Mrs. Bowser a dress and have it finished at a certain date?"

"Let me see the goods," she replied; but no sooner had she opened the package than she asked:

"Is it some fancy skirt for the circus ring?"

"Circus ring!" he whooped; "what is there about these goods to remind you of a circus ring?"

"The colors."

"Mrs. Bowser," he said, as he turned to me, "we will go elsewhere. It is evident that this person has come out of some door-knob factory to take up dressmaking."

At the second place the dressmaker smiled as she saw the colors, and replied that she wouldn't think of beginning work without twenty-four yards of silk at hand.

"Then you'll never begin!" exclaimed Bowser. "It is high time the long-suffering public kicked against this dressmaking robbery. When I buy twelve yards of silk for a dressmaker to steal you can expect I'm going to die the next week."

The third dressmaker seemed to understand the situation at a glance. She opened the silk, rolled it up again and calmly but firmly said:

"I am very busy just now. You'd bet*ter take it to some blacksmith shop.*"

Then we went home for the night. Bowser was mad and wouldn't speak to me, and as he slept he dreamed of dressmakers, and I overheard him saying:

"Colors! I tell you it's all bosh! How many horses and cows do we see of four or five colors?"

The next day we visited twelve other dressmakers. Two of them called Mr. Bowser an old fool, and four others laughed in his face, while the other six refused to have anything to do with the dress. When we left the place he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I'm a man who can't be bulldozed. Those dressmakers have formed a ring to steal cloth and keep up prices. I'll beat 'em at their own game. We'll wait until we go to New York and then buy a ready-made dress."

When we got home he called the cook into the sitting-room and gave her the silk, and she thanked him kindly and added:

"It comes in very handy, Mr. Bowser, for my sister is a tight-rope performer and wants a new pair of silk tights."

I couldn't help laughing, and Mr. Bowser hasn't spoken to me since.

MODERN SHAMS IN SOCIETY.

Nothing is so clearly apparent to the intelligent observer of modern society as the many deceptions and the false glitter which it contains. There are social circles into which one may enter where the false and deceptive find no place, but these are in the minority. Glance at the average society of to-day, and there is but little in it that is really what one supposes it to be. How often is it that we find men and women carrying impressions of wealth and station far beyond their real income? Dignity is found to be only pretensions, refinement an artificial gloss, and intelligence but a verbal display. White satin and silk dresses are worn where the plainest muslin is scarcely within the wearer's income; broad-cloth, where the simplest business suit, if honestly paid for, would almost be a draft upon the revenue received. Flowers are worn in profusion, jewelry loaned and carriages hired by those to whom the acquirement of the necessities of daily life is a struggle.

Society, instead of being made a great compact designed to promote the good of man and woman, is used only as a cunning contrivance to palm off unreal virtues, and give to the unsophisticated wrong and injurious impressions. Host and hostess share in the general deception with their guests, although neither is conscious of the other's deceit. The china on the table of the hostess is admired and its possession envied by their guest, while the former in return is driven to maddening inward jealousy at the gorgeous garments of her guest. The guest knows not that the china is loaned, the hostess is ignorant of the unpaid bill of the dressmaker. The furniture, heavy portieres and expensive draperies are examined with admiration, and so fixed becomes the attention of the guest upon the embellishments of the home of her hostess that no room is left in her mind for a suspicion of a plan of purchase commonly known as the "installment."

The young man, with only a cursory knowledge of the cost of feminine apparel, regards what is only inexpensive silk or satin as the richest goods the market affords. The young lady, in turn, silently calculates her chaperone's income by the flowers he sends, the liveried carriage in which he escorts her to the reception, and the full dress suit in which he is arrayed, being purchased by the installment plan. Her untrained mind knows not the existence of places also where a lunch may be had by a modest indulgence in beverage, and establishments where clothing is sold for a night.

FREEHOLDERS' PROCEEDINGS.

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., JAN. 6, 1887.

Regular meeting of the board, held on Thursday, January 6, 1887, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Astfalk, Chapman, Doty, Debbie, Dardis, Hubbard, Howard, Haliday, Isenmann, Oliver, Pierson, Pitcairn, Roll, Vanderbeek, Wright—16.

Absent—Freeholder West.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting list of bills ordered paid) and, on motion, approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The county collector presented the following statement, which was read by the clerk:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—At the commencement of the new year I have the honor to report to your board that the taxes of the year have been very promptly paid, which shows that the various collectors are worthy of their positions and deserve the thanks of the people for their promptness in liquidating claims. The total amount remaining unpaid is as follows: From Elizabeth, $14 603 09; Rahway, $10,420 40; Springfield, $1,315 92; total $26,328 40. This does not include interest.

The amounts now in arrears on previous years are as follows: Rahway, 1879, $3,472 70; ditto, 1881, $1,764 17; ditto, 1883, $791 09; total, $6,028 96—not including interest.

It is also my pleasure to report that the county has no temporary loans or outstanding obligations (other than bonds not yet due), and that the current expenses, bonds and coupons falling due have been promptly met; also all contracts for addition to jail have been paid.

The bonded debt of the county at the end of the fiscal year will be reduced $27,000 (that being the amount falling due this year). This will reduce our interest account next year $1 620. As our grounds and buildings will need but little expenditure for some years, and as our bridge account next year may be lighter we can drop back to our levy, $125,000.

At this time we have sufficient cash on hand to pay the State tax, leaving still enough with assets due, more than equal to our needs.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

P. SHERIDAN, Collector.

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 6, 1887.

On motion of Freeholder Chapman, received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From joint committee on public buildings and jail inspection:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—Your committee appointed at the meeting of May 19, 1886, to build addition to the men's jail and make alterations in the women's jail at an expense not to exceed $15,000, in accordance with plans at that time submitted, beg leave to report,

That the work is now complete and ready for use. The entire cost of addition to the men's jail has been $12 913.33. The cost of skylight carpenter work and laun*dry plumbing in women's jail has been* $874.25, making a total of $13,387 58.

The old jail had 28 cells; with the addition it has 72 cells. The women's jail is now supplied with sunlight, fresh air, two additional rooms and convenient laundry.

All of which is respectfully submitted. The work is now ready for inspection of the board, or others who may feel interested.

W. M. OLIVER,
A. VANDERBEEK,
JOHN ISENMANN,

LEON ABBETT FOR SENATOR.

The United States Senator from New Jersey to take the place of Senator Sewell should be ex-Governor Leon Abbett.

We do not pretend to say that Governor Abbett is the only Democrat in the State worthy and capable of filling that high and important position, but we do emphatically assert, that he is in every particular equal to the best, and that he stands the recognized choice of the Democratic party.

There is especial need of just such statesmen as Governor Abbett in the United States Senate at the present time. That body, once renowned for brains and patriotism, has become the camping ground of arrogant millionaires and sordid corporation agents and attorneys. Leon Abbett is the man who would fearlessly antagonize corruption and duplicity of every kind, and hesitate not to publicly expose and denounce a venal system that now blots the honor of country and wrongs honest people everywhere.

We know not whether Governor Abbett will permit his name to remain as a Senatorial candidate, but if he does, and fails of an election by a Legislature fairly Democratic on joint ballot, it will be because of political treachery or some other species of crookedness.

SUBLIMITY.

We read the other day of an editor who unceremoniously kicked a chap down stairs because he persisted in dilating upon that concentrated essence of modern humbug the tariff question.

We do not believe, as a general rule, in either kickers or strikers, but circumstances may alter opinions, you know.

The tariff, that topic about which so much has been written and said, in Congress and out of Congress, and nothing practically done to amend its imperfections.

Was it surprising that the boot of the irate editor suddenly changed its horizontal position?

The choicest specimen of tariff crankism yet known was introduced into the New York Senate last week by an eminent statesman from one the rural districts. It reads thus:

Resolved, That with many thousand skilled laborers in this country seeking and not finding employment; with an enormous accumulation of our manufactured products piled up in our warehouses awaiting a market; with the eager watchfulness of great manufacturing and commercial nations for an opportunity to crowd their surplus products into our already overstocked market while they jealously exclude us from trade with non-producing nations by reason of their control of the merchant fleets that bear the world's commerce; our present protective tariff remains of vital importance to the welfare and prosperity of the whole people, employers and employees in equal degree, and the restoration of our once proud supremacy on the seas, carrying American goods in American-built ships to all the markets of the world, is an immediate national necessity. The Secretary of State is directed to forward these resolutions to New York's representatives in Congress, who are requested to act in accord with the resolutions.

Was not that sublime.

Our present wonderful tariff declared to be of vital importance because—

Mark the reasons:

"Because thousands of skilled laborers cannot find employment, and because an enormous accumulation of manufactured products are piled up awaiting a market, and because other nations control merchant fleets that bear the world's commerce."

Shades of the absurd!

The present war-rated and tribute paying tariff has been in operation a quarter of a century, during which period our once glorious and lucrative merchant marine has fallen into decay and ruin, and now, in addition to that misfortune, if labor cannot find reward, and the products of labor free disposal, why, in the name of common sense, is such a tariff of vital importance, and why should it not be overhauled and reformed as a matter of both public and private prosperity?

There is a hope, although faint, that justice and intelligence may some day rise into dominion, and driving away the hindering effects of political duplicity and sectional covetousness, give the people even an honest tariff.

Let us patiently wait.

George Gray has been re-elected United States Senator from Delaware.

Senator Dawes has been re-elected United States Senator from Massachusetts.

M. S. Quay was elected United States Senator from Pennsylvania on Wednesday last.

Frank Hiscock, of Syracuse, has been elected United States Senator to succeed Warner Miller, of New York.

Gen. Wm. B. Hazen, Chief Signal Officer of the Army, died suddenly at Washington, D. C., on Sunday last. His death was caused by a complication of Brights disease and diabetes.

Arthur J. McQuade, the convicted boodle Alderman of New York, was taken to Sing Sing prison on Monday last, where he will serve out a term of seven years and pay a fine of $5,000. Mr. O'Neil next steps to the front.

Assemblyman McDermit offered a resolution in the New Jersey Legislature, Wednesday, to the effect that the Speaker's chair be declared vacant. Hisses and applause greeted the reading of the resolution, and McDermit, in explanation, said in passion accepted tones: "In offering this resolution I am desirous of finding out where the Democratic party stands. We ought to have a Democratic Speaker in a Democratic House."

The Democrats gained another point on Wednesday in the House, by seating Walters of Mercer. The Committee on Contested Elections, which has a Republican majority, presented a report declaring that a new election should be held in the disputed districts. Mr. Matthews, of Union county, presented a minority report, which declared that Walters was legally elected and entitled to his seat. After a sharp parliamentary battle, a vote was taken on the minority report, and it was carried by a vote of 30 to 29. The two labor members, Carrol and Donohue voted with the Republicans, as did also Baird, the Speaker. This, together with the seating of Turley, Democrat, of Camden, early in the week, are considered great victories for the Democrats, and insures them a majority on joint ballot, outside of the two labor votes. It is probable that the Senate will [illegible] on Tuesday of next week. The House has adjourned until next Monday.

EDITORIAL MENTION.

The promise of a home and land of their own, it is easy, says a recent traveler, is the golden inducement which leads many Germans to cross the Atlantic.

Governor Abbett is a friend to the Press and in his message he advocates payment to all newspapers which publish the laws last year without being designated.

The Jersey Democratic Mule is worse than the alleged Hoss. But the Mule will be short lived, thank heaven, and will go to its grave unwept, unhonored and unsung!—Dover Index.

State Senators will be elected next Fall in Camden, Essex, Gloucester, Monmouth, Salem, Somerset, Union and Warren counties. Monmouth, Union and Warren are now represented by Democrats, the others by Republicans.

Scenes such as were witnessed at Trenton recently are not a credit to the politicians or the people. It is not the latter, however, who must shoulder the responsibility, and the people will demand an accounting with the politicians.—Somerset Messenger.

Of Ex-President Arthur's cabinet, Frelinghuysen and Folger are dead; Hatton is editing the Chicago Mail. Lincoln is practicing law in Chicago. Gresham is on the bench. Brewster is taking care of a large law practice. Teller is in the United States Senate.

The Trenton Emporium comes forward to say that "'it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle' than for a poor man to enter the United States senate." The Emporium is way off, for Abbett is not a rich man, and he will be a United States senator.

The river and harbor bill appropriates $7,500,000, and New Jersey waters will get the following sums: channel between Staten Island and New Jersey, $7,500; Raritan, $15,000; the Maurice river gets $6,000, the Passaic $15 000 the Raritan $25,000, the Shrewsbury $5,000 and the South river $2,500.

The editor of the Seabright Sentinel receives codfish in payment of subscriptions from fishermen. This is very kind and obliging of the editor, but one would think it might have a tendency to give the newspaper a rather fishy flavor. It may be, however, that codfish is the editor's favorite brain food.

The Trenton Emporium seems to have got right close up to a few facts in the following: "Chicago seems to be the home of the dynamiter, the socialist, the blizzard and canned corn beef, all of which are destructive to life in some form. The only good thing that comes out of that city is the limited express."

The world moves and the South is moving with it. The Memphis Appeal says that a revolution has taken place in the condition of the negro since the war. What is seen among the colored people to day shows that there is a vast amount of capacity in the race beyond anything they were credited with a quarter of a century ago.

State Senator Edwards of Hudson, is a young man with the capabilities for carving out a great future. We expect to hear from him frequently and creditably when he gets to work in the Capitol. There are a good many things for him to do, and he seems to be just the kind of an energetic, fearless, honest man who can best do them.—Jersey City Argus.

We believe that workingmen should "go into politics," but not as a class. They should go into politics simply as all good citizens should, to secure good government in the interest of all the people. If they can do this best through the organization of a new party, it is well. But we advise honest workingmen generally against putting their trust in self-constituted leaders.—Philadelphia Tocsin, (Labor Paper.)

The importance of little things is shown in the fact that New Jersey has 160 building and loan associations with a membership of 30,000 persons, their combined capital being nearly ten millions of dollars. These corporations are about the only ones in which a poor man can get in on the ground floor, so to speak. This vast amount of capital is the result of a few dollars paid in each month by an army of shareholders.

The contract for the current printing of the Legislature was last Wednesday awarded to McCrellish & Quigley, of Trenton, at 29 cents per 1,000 ems, which is 6 cents below the union rates. The award has greatly incensed the labor organizations. The typographical unions of the State are to make an effort again this Winter to have the present contract system abolished, and in this they have the support of the labor organizations.

Among the prominent men of the present day who began life as newsboys the Washington Critic mentions General Sheridan, General Horatio C. King, E. B. Haskell and Charles A. Andrews, of the Boston Herald; Simeon Levy, of the Mexican Financier; Isaac H. Bailey, of the Shoe and Leather Reporter; Ben. Perley Poore, Benjamin P. Shillaber (Mrs. Partington), ex-Governor Waller, of Connecticut; Crane, the comedian, and Harrison, the artist.

Democratic members of the Legislature should by no means forget that the party in the State is pledged to "equal taxation." It will be their duty to investigate the fact whether under existing laws discrimination is made among citizens—are any distinctions made in the matter of assessments? Is one citizen compelled to pay more by way of taxes in proportion to the value of his property than another. If so let the remedy be forthcoming.—Camden Democrat.

In reference to the State Prison Gov. Abbett says in his message: "I cannot view with favor any employment of labor in the prison that interferes unjustly with outside labor. The question of revenue, in my judgment, should be subordinate to the rights of labor and capital engaged in industries outside the prison. I do not believe our people will approve any prison employment which will close any factory or work shop in the State, or reduce the wages of those employed therein."

The persistency with which certain newspaper correspondents have tried to make President Cleveland a dangerously sick man, is as ludicrous as are the attempts of the same inexorable pen drivers to break up Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet. Rumors about Cabinet changes that begin with the resignation of Secretary Manning, follow with the retirement of Secretary Bayard, and end with the displacement of Attorney General Garland, find their way to Washington from a distance every two or three weeks and are as often denied. The latest gossip makes ex-Governor Hoadly, of Ohio, the successor of both Messrs. Manning and Garland.

Careful Republicans will not follow the lead of Senator Sewell in attempting to raise a cry of fraud in the election of a United States Senator. Without the disputed Camden and Mercer districts, the Democrats have a clear majority on joint ballot, counting the two Paterson Labor votes. These two Assemblymen will undoubtedly vote for some Democratic candidate, under no conceivable circumstances could they vote for General Sewell. The New York Tribune recently asserted that the defeat of the Republican candidate depends upon the admission of the Camden and Mercer members, whose seats are disputed. This is a mistake, and the Tribune should not have made it. [illegible] there has been no doubt of General Sewell's defeat, and due respect for the dignity of the State should prevent Republicans from attempting to put a false construction upon the situation.—Sunday Call.

GOVERNOR GREEN INAUGURATED.

The ceremonies attending the inauguration of Robert Stockton Green as Governor of New Jersey took place at the Taylor Opera House, Trenton, on Tuesday last between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock. A great mass of people was present and in the throng were many prominent in the social, professional, and political circles of the State. The theatre was elaborately decorated with the national colors and over the stage a canopy was formed of ropes of ivy and evergreen. The members of the Legislature, comprising nearly all the Senators and Assemblymen, sat behind the footlights in a group, of which Speaker Baird was the central figure. Flanking them on either side were the State officials, prominent politicians of both parties, specially invited guests, and personal friends of the retiring and incoming Governors, for whom seats had been reserved.

The four private boxes of the opera house were occupied by the ladies of the Green and Abbett household. They were all quietly but elegantly attired. Mrs. Green wore at her belt a large bouquet of cut flowers. She and her daughters, with several other ladies and Mr. Vanderpool, one of the law partners of the new Governor, occupied the lower left-hand box. Mrs. Dodd, the sister-in-law of Gov. Abbett, and his young daughter, with several well known Newark and Jersey City society ladies, filled the lower right hand box. In the boxes overhead were relatives and intimate friends of the two Governors.

Among the most distinguished personages on the stage were Senator McPherson, Chief Justice Beasley, ex-Governors Parker and Bedle, Chancellor Runyon, Congressman William Walter Phelps, and J. Nelson Pidcock, Judges Knapp, Van Syckel and Scudder, of the Supreme Court; State Controller Anderson, the Secretary of State, Mr. Kelsey, and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Mr. Chapman; Dr. James S. Green, brother of the new Governor, and G. A. Hobart, President of the Republican State Central Committee.

When the two Governors appeared upon the stage together, the audience, which now was so great that not a foot of standing space was visible, welcomed them both with tumultuous applause.

During the delivery of the opening prayer all on the stage and in the boxes remained standing. Governors Green and Abbett, President Griggs, Secretary Kelsey, and Chief-Justice Beasley then formed a group at a table near the footlights in the centre of the stage. The Chief Justice administered the oath of office to the Governor-elect, who, in a loud voice, repeated the words which pledged him to an honest administration of the affairs of the State. When he had done this Secretary Kelsey offered him a pen and he subscribed his name to the oath.

The delivery of the great seal of the State was then in order and the retiring Governor addressed his successor.

Governor Green replied: "In receiving from you the great seal of the State I express the hope that three years from this time I may have a just cause as you to believe that the prosperity of the State has been materially advanced."

Ex Governor Abbett introduced the new Governor to the President of the Senate, by whom he was presented to the members of the Legislature. The latter arose to receive the Governor's bow. This given, he turned around, and, facing the audience, delivered the inaugural address.

Truly grateful to the people of my native State for the distinguished honor conferred upon me—deeply impressed with the responsibilities incident to the position—I have taken the oath prescribed by law, and now assume the office of Governor of the State of New Jersey, with reverent dependence upon Him who shapes the destinies of nations, for wisdom and guidance in the discharge of the duties of this high trust.

The successful and satisfactory administration of the affairs of State, at all times difficult, becomes doubly so to one, who is chosen to succeed a Chief Magistrate, whose administration has been distinguished by results of great benefit to the people. Governor Abbett has the proud satisfaction of knowing, that during his term of office, the burdens of taxation upon the people have been lightened, that a more just system of taxation of corporate property has been enacted by the Legislature, and sustained by the court of last resort, that many measures have been adopted by which the just complaints of labor have been in a degree redressed, and that he can and has surrendered the seal of State to his successor, not only with self-consciousness of having fulfilled every pledge, of having done his duty faithfully, fearlessly, fairly, but with the approbation and praise of every fairminded, impartial, unprejudiced citizen of the State.

The wisdom of the constitutional provision convening the Legislature one week before commencement of the term of an incoming Governor, secures to the people of the State a review of the transaction of the past year, and the recommendations as to State affairs, of one who must be conversant with every detail and requirement. But little can be expected on such an occasion, of one coming into office, other than the expression of his views as to some of the general questions of public policy and interest.

TAXATION.

The question of taxation is one of controlling importance—its satisfactory solution has been, and continues to be, the fruitful source of theories and experiment. Theory after theory has been suggested and urged and system after system adopted and tried, only one by one to be rejected as inequitable and unjust.

It is fundamental that every tax must have a public object.

Every such object will relate to some expense of government in one or more of its various departments or subdivisions.

The problem is, on whom and by what principal should tax be levied?

It clothes the artificial person—the corporation—with franchises, with its right to exist, its right to aggregate capital, its right in some cases to exercise a part of the powers of sovereignty.

By no rule of justice can either the natural or the artificial person claim exemption from a just share of the support of that Government, to which the one owes its existence and powers and all look for protection in the enjoyment of property and rights.

There is wisdom and reason in the policy adopted in this State of exempting from taxation so much of the property of religious and educational institutions as may be necessary for their successful operation. The Church and the School-house are the nurseries of good citizenship; their teachings and influence, by training our young in their duties as citizens, by inculcating an all obedience to law and subordination to lawful authority, lessen the expense of government, and thus indirectly but surely contribute to its support.

No just reason however, exists why incorporations, institutions or individuals owning property, which they hold for use, enjoyment, investment, profit or speculation, should not each bear a just share of governmental expense.

The proper principal on which tax is to be assessed has not been so easily ascertained.

The tendency of late years has been to equalize the burden, by making the tax proportionate to the value of property.

Government protects all, the individual and the corporation, in the enjoyment of property, but the protection enjoyed by the owner is proportionate to the amount of property owned. The owner of large estates and the owner of a small estate should not pay to the support of government the same amount. Both are protected, and in the same way, but the protection one receives is greater than that which the other enjoys.

The just rule is, that each, as the owner of property protected by government, should bear a share of government expenses proportionate to the value of the property, and irrespective of the incidents of ownership.

Our Constitution, recognizing this principle, now declares that "property shall be assessed for taxes under general laws, by uniform rules, at its true value."

Although adopted in 1875, as the expression of eleven years we have the state of the laws such that the platform of one party "renews" its "demand that the taxation of property shall be regulated by value, and not by ownership;" while the other declares that "the laws of this State as to the assessment of real and personal property need revision to make them plain and consistent, and to conform in letter and spirit to the requirements of our amended Constitution—that property shall be assessed for taxation at uniform rates, by general laws, and according to its true value."

These proclamations of the two great parties are virtual admissions that the constitutional provision has not been recognized in the law, and pledges from both that it shall be.

No difficulty has hitherto been encountered in the enactment of laws for the taxation of individuals, and of most corporations. Evils of which just complaint is made of inequalities in taxation in some localities, result from the improper execution of the law—from the neglect or disregard by the assessors of its plain and simple requirements. The remedy for this lies with the people through the ballot-box.

But difficulties have arisen in the application of the constitutional rule to the property of railroad corporations.

Some claim exemption from taxation by virtue of irrepealable contract, others by reason of charter provisions; all demand discrimination in their favor over the property of individuals, and other corporations.

Where such a contract exists, plainly and clearly expressing the intent to exempt from taxation, it must, of course, be respected until abrogated in a constitutional way. But every effort should be made, and every proper measure adopted, in a legal manner to put an end to all such contracts. No ascertained sum can in justice either to the State, or the taxpayer, be arbitrarily and irrevocably fixed as a yearly tax to be paid, for the amount of such tax should be regulated by the exigencies of the State—the expense of Government is the reason for taxation, the necessities of Government should be its measure and limit.

But when no such contract exists, there should be no discrimination.

The power of the Legislature to classify property for taxation is undoubted—its exercise, affords a means to deal equitably and justly with all.

By it, the difficulty of properly and fairly assessing and taxing lines of railway running through several counties, with franchises varying in value, is overcome, it reaches the different and complex kinds of railroad property and classifies it in groups, it enables the Legislature to protect cities, in which large portions of property have been withdrawn from taxation by being taken up by railroad corporations, by subjecting such property to equitable taxation.

But when this branch of legislative power has been exercised—when the property of the railroad in taxation districts has been classified as property used for railroad purposes other than the main stem, and, thus classified, subjected to taxation for municipal purposes—when its valuation has been adjusted to the standard of value adopted by the local assessors of such taxing district as required by law, there can be no reason why the property of the individual, and the property of the corporation used for railroad purposes, in the same taxation district, should be taxed for the same objects, at different rates.

Fairness would prompt a reduction of rate by the percentage of tax already paid thereon for State purposes, but there is no justice in limiting the rate on such property for municipal purposes to one per cent. when the property of others in the same district may be taxed at two or three per cent. It is held to be constitutional, but it is a discrimination unjust and unreasonable.

It remains with you, gentlemen of the Legislature, whether this inequality shall longer exist.

LABOR AND CAPITAL.

The relations of labor and capital present for solution one of the most interesting and important questions of the day—for the prosperity of the nation depends on the harmonious co-operation of these two great elements of the people.

There is no natural conflict between labor and capital, there should be none between employer and employee.

Capital invested in the industries of the country, and the development of its resources, gives opportunity to labor. The employment of labor results in profit to the capital invested.

The industries are never so surely prosperous as when labor is contented. Ill paid, dissatisfied labor may bring [illegible] success to capital, but discontent breeds trouble, and dissatisfaction at the mine, the factory, the work bench, inevitably makes itself felt in the counting room and in the market.

The encroachments of aggregated capital upon the rights of the wage-worker have led to the organization of labor as a measure of self-protection. In an earnest effort to regain their rights by lawful methods they have the sympathy and aid of every impartial person.

The question of the relative rights and responsibilities of labor and capital must be solved. It should be solved in the spirit of justice and right.

All discriminations unfavorable to labor on the statute book should be removed. The demands of labor for its just compensation, the protection of the life, limb and health of the employee, the advantages of education to all, with the time and opportunity for improvement, and the enjoyment of education and home life, and all other rights should be secured.

The protection of government of the honest workingman from competition from convict, and imported pauper and contract labor, unjust and destructive of his proper remuneration, and from its character degrading to his manhood, should be absolutely assured.

They ask measures which appeal to one's sympathy and command his approval. Among such are laws establishing a labor holiday, fixing the liability of employers for injuries caused by their negligence, laws for the security of the life, limb, and the preservation of the health of persons employed in factories, the establishment of reasonable hours for refreshment. They ask for means for the more efficient execution of existing laws, and that the proper execution of laws framed for the protection of the wage-worker be secured by the appointment of labor men to State labor offices. The enactment of laws tending to operate upon a portion of the people in restraint of their mutual protection is unjust, and to make the exercise of such a right a criminal offence, is intolerable.

But the adjustment should be made with due regard to the rights of others—it should be undertaken in no spirit of vindictiveness—it is justice, equality, protection that labor demands, not retaliation, or invasion of the rights of others.

Labor owes it to the country—to the industrial interests—to itself—that its demands should not only be just to all, made with due regard to the legal rights of others, to be obtained by legal methods without infraction or violation of law and order, but that, when granted, the result should be accepted as final.

Continued agitation of differences unsettles the business of the country and is ruinous to all its interests—it affects, not only the capitalists, but the welfare of everyone.

Means certainly can be devised by which differences can be adjusted without friction, and without loss to the wage-worker or the employer. Strikes, with their periods of idleness, and contributions on others for support, injure not only the employer but the great body of labor. If arbitration is the solution let it be accepted, if not, let some other satisfactory plan be devised and carried into execution. Let peaceful means, with justice to each interest, make the lock-out impossible and the strike unnecessary.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Constitutions of several States require the question of constitutional revision to be submitted to the people every twenty years; unfortunately ours contains no mandatory provision for its amendment.

Disinclination to meddle with the provisions of the Federal Constitution is wise, but there is a marked distinction always to be remembered between the Constitution of the United States and that of the State. The former grants to the National Government all its powers, and all powers not delegated to the United States thereby, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people. On the other hand, the Constitution of the State provides for the division of the powers of government, prescribing the organization of its different departments, designating and restricting their respective powers—regulating the exercise of the sovereign power, and guarding the rights of the people.

The necessity for the change or amendment of the one arises only when an enlargement of national power, or a further restriction of the State rights becomes necessary and advisable.

The necessity for the revision or amendment of a State Constitution arises from time to time, from the changing conditions, and necessarily changing wants of the people, and interests of the State.

The present Constitution of this State was adopted in the year 1844. The Convention by which it was framed was formed of men of thorough information, of large experience, of distinguished ability. They did their work wisely and well; the instrument provided for the wants and requirements of the State and answered the demands of the time.

Conditions, however, more widely variant, than those of that day and the present, it would be difficult to realize.

By the next preceding census, that of 1840, but four years before, the entire population of the State was only [illegible]—within [illegible] of that number are now clustered in three cities—our present population reaching [illegible]. In 1840 the population of Newark was [illegible], now it is over [illegible]; that of Jersey City and Bergen together was [illegible], now Jersey City has over [illegible], and Hoboken has over [illegible]; that of Paterson was [illegible], now it is over [illegible]; that of Camden was [illegible], now it is over [illegible].

The relative proportion of the urban and rural population has changed.

In 1840 there were but nine cities or towns each with 4,000 inhabitants, their aggregate population being one-fifth of that of the whole State. In 1880 there were twenty-eight cities and towns of over 4,000 inhabitants aggregating [illegible], over half entire population.

This is emphasized by the fact that in 1840 the persons engaged [illegible]

In 1880, our foreign-born population was [illegible], by the census of 1880, it was over [illegible], within one-third of the whole number of inhabitants when the Constitution was framed.

The interests of the State, as indicated by its industries, have also materially changed.

By the census of 1840, [illegible] years after the adoption of the Constitution, the value of manufacturing products was [illegible]; by that of 1880 it was [illegible].

The capital invested in manufactures was in 1840 [illegible]; in 1880 it was [illegible]. The number of hands so employed in 1840 was [illegible]; in 1880, [illegible].

The annual amount of wages paid in 1880 was [illegible]

Although New Jersey ranks among the thirty-eight States as thirty-third in area and [illegible] in population, she is seventh in the amount of capital invested in manufactures, [illegible]

In 1844 the railroads of the State covered but a few hundred miles. [illegible]

The property of the various railroad systems in the State was then valued at [illegible].

The estimated value of the real and personal property in 1850 was [illegible]; in 1880 it was [illegible].

This great increase in population, in resources, in material wealth—these [illegible] changes in the industries, in the occupations, in the [illegible] of the inhabitants [illegible] wants and requirements which are not met [illegible] which were [illegible] forty years ago by the present Constitution.

Whether, however, these changed conditions require amendment of the organic law depends on the question whether it contains provisions which prevent the passage of laws demanded for the [illegible] of the State, [illegible]

In 1873 a Commission was appointed to suggest amendments to the Constitution. Acting on its report, certain provisions were passed by two succeeding Legislatures, submitted to and adopted by the people and then engrafted in the Constitution.

Among these were amendments restrictive of the powers of the Legislature over municipalities. The provisions of the amendments, as construed by the court, seek to prevent correction of specific evils in the charter of any municipal corporation by legislative action almost impossible. As construed, it is a [illegible] inhibition of legislative action over any special municipal charter. It matters not how glaring its defects may be, or how injuriously its provisions may operate, or how advantageous a change in some particular might be, the Legislature can only reach the case by the passage of a general law, affecting other places where the same conditions may not exist and the remedy is not required.

Effort has not been wanting to comply with the object of the amendments as stated by the court. But although a general law for municipalities was prepared by some of the ablest men in the State, and its passage urged, time and again, by the Executive upon Legislature after Legislature, it has not been passed. Such uniform action by the Legislature year after year can only be taken as conclusive proof that the people of the State do not desire such an enactment.

For eleven years the Legislature has been engaged in the effort by amendments to reach specific evils; with but few exceptions, its only result has been to throw on the Court the labor and duty of declaring the acts unconstitutional, and pointing out the only remedy through the passage of a general law.

When practicable, general laws should alone be placed upon the statute book. But it may well be doubted if any general municipal law can be adopted, suited to the diverse wants of the people or cities in the different sections of the State. What classification at all satisfactory can be adopted? Not that of population, for the wants of a community engaged in one kind of industry may not be similar to those of another differently employed. Ten thousand people in one section of a State may require a very different city government from the same number in another section. A charter suited to our seaboard summer cities with their shifting populations, at one time of the year being but a few in number, and at other times reaching to tens of thousands, would be illy adapted to our inland towns with their settled or steadily increasing population. No other classification seems any less objectionable.

We have the fact, that strange anomalies of law exist—provisions in city charters which work great injustice, and are of special wrong can easily be cited. By reason of same, offences which are crimes in the country, subject to indictment and punishment in one way, in cities are not crimes, but offences triable and punishable in another way. Cities loaded down with debt may be further hopelessly burdened with salaried officers—ineffective provisions for amusement, or injurious financial arrangements may be fastened on them, yet relief cannot be had, unless some general municipal law, satisfactory to all, is passed, which seems impossible, or the constitutional restriction on legislative action is removed.

The organization of the Courts has been and is a subject of grave consideration. Many contend there should be a change. The Court of Errors and Appeals as constituted by the Convention, and as it now exists, was an experiment. It would seem that a Court of Appeals should be composed of Judges who are not in any way members of the Courts from which the appeals are taken—that it should be a separate independent tribunal.

These are but two of the many reasons for the amendment of the Constitution. The limits of this address prevent their more extended consideration, or the suggestion and discussion of others.

How is amendment to be accomplished? The plan of a commission has been tried—it is far from satisfactory. The only method reaching the whole case is by a constitutional convention. The members, elected by the people under a law providing, as it should, for minority representation, will reflect the judgment, the interests, the demands of every section.

If the objection is urged, that the present Legislature was not elected with such purpose in view and should be considered incompetent, there can certainly be no valid objection to the passage of a law, submitting to the people at an election the question whether a constitutional convention shall or shall not be called and elected.

The nation through the strife and blood of civil war has perpetuated its system of government, by the arbitrament of the sword the supremacy of the National Government has been for ever established.

Let the white shaft of the battle monument ever record the names, and the grateful heart of the country ever cherish the memories, of those who gave their lives for the integrity of the Union.

The war over, so perfect was the adjustability of our system that every State following her allegiance, returned to her place in the sisterhood of States, not as a conquered province, but with every right assured, intact and unimpaired.

Peace established, the country resumed its majestic course of improvement. Although twenty years of prosperity had been enjoyed—though the stability of our institutions had been established, though our credit was unassailable, there were those who honestly believed that our interests could not be subjected to a political change of administration without disastrous consequences.

But the peaceful revolution of the ballot box has been achieved—another party has for two years been at the helm of State—and the dire forebodings of political prophets have not been realized. The change has been effected without a jar or a shock to our governmental system; the prosperity of the country has not been retarded; her finances are more than flourishing; her industries are successful; the liberty and freedom of the citizen are protected; the Treasury is not depleted; the land is blessed with peace, prosperity and happiness.

President Cleveland, despite the cavil and complaint of politicians, commands and enjoys the confidence of the people, for his steadfast devotion to pledge and principle; his determined execution of the law; his sterling integrity; his unquestionable honesty of purpose; his manly sincerity and his strict observance of his rule, that "public office is a public trust."

Men of New Jersey, ours is a priceless heritage. In the vanguard of the Colonies, New Jersey's first Constitution was adopted by its provincial Congress two days before the Declaration of Independence. Though her territory is small, glorious recollections of the past cluster round her every field. In every national trial her sons have added to the lustre of her glory. No stain mars her history; no spot ever sullied the purity of her ermine.

Keep her escutcheon clean, and pure, and bright. Let no act of ours bring discredit to her fair name—advance her in her prosperity, industries and development. Hasten the day when inequalities and unjust discriminations shall no longer exist—when it can be truly said, that under the law and by the law every Jerseyman is the equal of his brother, from the iron mountains of Sussex to where old Ocean breaks in ceaseless music upon the sands of Cape May.

PROF. SMITH, of Wittenberg College,

Recommends Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and condemns the use of Ammonia in Baking Powder.

This is to certify that I have examined Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, samples of which I purchased in open market, and that I can recommend it as a good, wholesome, and unadulterated article. It does not contain ammonia, an ingredient of many baking powders, and one which I regard as highly objectionable, since it seriously impairs digestion. I have examined biscuits baked with an ammoniated powder, and have found, as has been repeatedly declared, that the ammonia was still there. Cleveland's powder gave the amount of pure carbonic acid claimed for it by the manufacturers.

It rejuvenates the HAIR and cleanses it. It restores to the HAIR that, either by reason of age or diseases of the scalp, has become dry, harsh and brittle, a pliancy and glossy silken softness of extreme beauty. There is no dye in Ayer's Hair VIGOR and the good it does is by the VIGOR it imparts to the follicles, and the cleanliness and healthfulness of the condition in which it maintains the scalp.

AYER'S Hair Vigor renews the hair. Hair Vigor is the best cure known for Brashy Hair, Scald Head, Itching Humors, Tetter Sores, Torpid Follicles, and all other diseases of the scalp that cause the falling of the HAIR and its fading. Nothing cleanses the HAIR of the nuisance of dandruff so perfectly, and so effectually prevents its return, as AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. In addition to the curative and restorative virtues peculiar to Ayer's Hair VIGOR it is a toilet luxury. The Hair VIGOR is by far the cleanliest hair-dressing made. It causes the hair to grow thick and long, and keeps it always soft and glossy.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Contains no deleterious ingredients. Its use prevents all scalp diseases, secures against the hair growing thin or gray, and surely cures all baldness that is not organic.

OH, for a paid fire department.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

NEW moon again, Sunday, and Jupiter begins his duty as an evening star the following night.

ONE month of Winter has gone. Spring will begin at eleven minutes after five, Sunday afternoon, March 20th.

ONE of the finest farms in the State is offered to rent or lease for a term of years, as described on the opposite page.

DURING the warm days when the snow and ice melts, pedestrians carry umbrellas to hoist as they pass under the railroad bridges.

TUESDAY night was the coldest of the Season. Some thermometers reached zero, but the greater number registered three degrees above.

HE who accepts a nomination and election to the office of Chief of the Fire Department, steps into a position of little honor and not the slightest authority.

THE recent rain accomplished something the municipal authorities stubbornly neglect. By its means many sidewalks were cleaned of accumulated snow and ice.

No matter what the frivolous and intemperate may say to the contrary, the City Clerk does more work for his money than any other officer in the municipal service.

THE Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield will meet in adjourned meeting, this evening. Further action on the Water Supply ordinance is probable. Go a little slowly, gentlemen, in granting that franchise.

THE Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational church, entertained as their guests a similar association from the Trinity Reformed church, Wednesday evening. The event was a social and musical affair of much success.

DURING the past week we have been sending out subscription bills alike to the just and the unjust—those long past due and those to come. The former can favor us by prompt remittance, and the latter by similar remembrance at the proper time.

THERE is to be another organ concert given in the Crescent avenue church, at a date in the near future not yet fixed. It will probably take the place of one of the Young People's Association's sociables. Mr. Taft, the most pleasing of the two organists that inaugurated the new instrument, will be the principal performer.

ADDITIONAL room will be added next month to the present quarters of Messrs. J. P. Laire & Co., at Park avenue and Front street. This will give this enterprising firm of dealers in hardware, farming implements, wood and willow-ware etc., more chance for a display of their large stock, and for the accomodation of their increasing patronage.

NEXT Thursday evening at Music Hall, the reappearance of Mme. Modjeska is to take the shape of a real society event. The upper ten will appear in full dress, and many brilliant evening costumes with opera bonnets will be displayed. Accomodations are to be provided, that the ladies so desiring may lay aside their hats and arrange their toilets.

A FIRE in the stove on the top floor of the building at Park and North avenues, emitting sparks from its chimney, was excuse enough for the ringing of the fire bell and the turning out of the Department, Sunday evening, about seven o'clock. All the damage occasioned by fire, however, was the burning of half a ton or so of coal for the purpose of seeing "who could get first water."

A GREAT deal just now depends upon the outcome of the suit brought to test the constitutionality of the power assumed by the Board of Managers of the Fire Department to levy and collect taxes in the manner and by the methods that have always been adopted. The whole matter is to be argued before the Supreme Court at Trenton, next month. It is a step towards a paid fire department.

THE anti-license citizens of Burlington are setting others of their kind an example. They propose to raise—among those in earnest, heart and soul (and pocket), in the cause—a sum equal to the amount received from the liquor sellers, and by presenting such fund to the city overcome its necessity of licensing for revenue. But this is an example of sincerity and devotion that costs money.

PROF. HOLMES gave a Preview of English History, Saturday evening, under the auspices of the local circle of the C. L. S. C. This was the address announced by us before, but postponed on account of the weather. Had Prof. Holmes' intention of Saturday evening been known to others than those present, a larger audience would have had the good fortune to hear a lecture of great merit and credit.

THE Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield are carefully considering, altering and amending the ordinance by which a franchise is to be granted for a monopoly in the matter of furnishing the Borough with water for domestic and manufacturing purposes, and the extinguishment of fires. But when the time comes—no matter how carefully worded may be the ordinance, nor how clearly defined is the intention of an opposite relation between the parties of the first and second part—the "Water Supply Company" will be found on top.

BY referring to the announcement of Dr. Dupree, in the "want" column of this week's paper, it will be seen that this popular chiropodist is not only faithful to his promise, but responds quickly to the letters which have been sent him, and for the fifth time will visit Plainfield, so that all who wish, can call on him and have their sore feet cured by his gentle and unfailing method. That he is honorable and reliable, five successful visits, all within a year, are a sufficient guarantee. He is endorsed by the very best element of our population. Dr. Dupree will be at the City Hotel, five days commencing Tuesday next, Jan. 25th.

THE seven children of Peter Brown of Bull Frog City on the outskirts of the Borough of North Plainfield, are all recovering rapidly from the sickness that afflicted them. The father, however, has since been prostrated, and the family would have suffered from destitution, but so many generous people have liberally donated towards their necessities that they have almost more than they know what to do with. Brown's former employer is paying his salary as usual, and the quantities of food and clothing collected through the earnest efforts and solicitations of Mrs. Wm. R. Maddison, Mr. Charles Dobie and others, will provide comfort for a long while to come.

THE ice dealers have already harvested a very large crop of the thickest and cleanest ice in many Seasons.

THE January thaw has come and gone, and with it has almost entirely departed traces of the fine sleighing of a week ago.

LAST evening the Ladies' Aid Society held a reception in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church, and special efforts were put forth to make the newcomers of the congregation at home.

AT his stables in New Brunswick, Mr. John W. Morris is always to be found during Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays. His stock of horses for sale or exchange, includes all kinds, all sizes and all prices.

WE are authorized by Foreman T. H. Keller, of No. 2 Engine company, to publicly announce that he most emphatically declines a nomination for Chief of the Fire Department, and would refuse to serve if elected.

THE toboggan slide is in the finest condition, and is being patronized extensively. The Bicycle Club's benefit has been postponed from last Monday evening—on account of the weather—to some future date to be fixed upon.

WERNER is about to remove to the commodious new store opposite his present location, and intends to fill it with a fine line of brand new styles and patterns of clothing. Consequently for a few days he is selling off his present stock at wonderfully low prices.

AT the annual meeting for the purpose of choosing Trustees of the Crescent avenue church, held Monday evening, the members of the present Board were unanimously re-elected. It was also voted to increase the salary of the pastor to $4,000 per annum, with the occupancy of the parsonage.

As fast as an increased force of men can complete the work, the lamps and fixtures are being placed in the stores of such merchants as have contracted for the incandescent lights. Already many are connected, and by to-morrow night it is believed that at least 300 of the little lamps will be glowing.

THE young men of the city are cordially invited to be present at Y. M. C. A. Hall, next Tuesday evening, when Col. Julian Scott will give a "War Talk." We are assured by an officer of the Association that the "Colonel will draw upon his fund of personal reminiscences as well as upon his stock of interesting relics."

THE funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Mary Crawford, who died recently after a long illness at Trenton, were held at the residence of her son-in-law, Counsellor John H. Jackson, on Duer street, North Plainfield, Sunday. The Rev. T. Logan Murphy of the Church of the Holy Cross, officiated. The remains were interred in Evergreen cemetery.

THE reappearance of Mme. Modjeska at Music Hall, Thursday evening of next week, will be in Schiller's historical play of "Mary Stuart," in five acts, adapted especially for the Polish star. She will be supported by Maurice Barrymore and her own company. Increasing the prices slightly for the occasion, will prove to be a mistake.

AN excellent opportunity is open for a young man of the requisite qualifications who desires to become a lawyer, and to earn his living while pursuing his studies. Corporation Counsel Marsh's advertisement will be found in another column. We know of no better school that the office referred to would be for a law student.

AT a meeting of the Methodist church people, Wednesday evening, a large sum was raised by individual subscriptions from $1,000 down, which will be used for the erection of a commodious addition to the church building, to contain Sunday school and lecture rooms. When completed, the basement at present in use will be abandoned.

THERE are fashions to follow even in the reading of poetry. A club with the latest craze in this particular has just been formed in this city to study the works of an author who wrote miles of poetry he didn't understand himself, and yards more that no human being who loves the truth would claim he could discover sense or meaning in.

THERE was only a "hand-full" of people in attendance at Reform Hall, Monday evening, but those present were rewarded for braving the storm. The Till Family gave a programme of novel, peculiar and other interesting and pleasing music, on rocks, strings and glasses. Their efforts as vocalists were well meant, at least, and added variety to the evening's entertainment.

MR. A. E. PEARSALL, an elocutionist much newer to the profession than his selections, entertained a small audience in Reform Hall, Tuesday evening. He proved himself to be a gentleman of breeding, something of a humorist by nature, the possessor of more talent as a vocalist than would be expected, and with great ability as a reader of compositions demanding dramatic power and effect.

THE recently appointed Board of Health of North Plainfield, met in the Borough Council room, Monday evening, and organized by the election of P. M. French, Esq., President, and Dr. J. H. Carman, Secretary. The President of the State Board of Health, Dr. Ezra Hunt, was present and gave an instructive review of the laws in force governing and authorizing the powers of Boards of Health in New Jersey.

THE organist is not yet announced who is to display the qualities of the beautiful new organ recently built in the Congregational church. The public concert for such purpose is to take place, Thursday evening, February 17th, for which tickets are to be sold. Mme. Clementine Lasar-Studwell, soprano, is to be the vocalist, and the occasion promises to be one of the most brilliant in a musical way, ever given in this city.

WE noticed at the freight house the other day a new upright piano boxed and directed to James McGee, Esq., for the North Plainfield public school. The primary department has long been striving to get together by contributions money sufficient to purchase an instrument of that sort, but had no hopes of such success for months yet. It would now seem that the generosity of the gentleman referred to above, has again displayed itself to the school's great benefit.

A SMOULDERING fire that may have started some days before, crept along under the floor of the second story of the house at No. 28 New street, owned by Mr. William Mulligan. Reaching the outer sheathing it spread upward under the boards until it burst into flames, Sunday afternoon, and the fire department was rung out. Before its service was necessary, however, some gallant members of the Hook and Ladder company stopped the fun. The damage was about fifty dollars, and fully insured.

THE latest appliances and inventions for the milling of corn have just been placed in the mills of French Bros., on Somerset street, at great expense but with correspondingly increased profit in the securing of the highest grade of goods. The corn is cleaned, cut up, carried from one bolt to another, separated and sorted, sucked through aspirators, and run off into different bins as samp, or hominy, or meal, dry and sweet, with each grain, even the finest, polished sharp and clean. It is a remarkable sight alone to see the miles of tubing through which the grain travels from the beginning to the end of the process.

THE Fourth Annual meeting of the State Board of Agriculture will be held in the Supreme Court room, Trenton, during Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

THE Dime Savings Institution has declared the 8th dividend to its old depositors, that makes a total of 97 per cent. Those holding unbalanced books are requested to present them for settlement at once.

THE Fire Board held an "executive session", before its meeting of last Saturday evening, and considered in secret the law-suit impending that questions the Board's right to assess and collect taxes for fire purposes.

BEING snow-bound on her way from Chicago, Miss Lucia Kimball, National Superintendent of the Department of Sunday School work of the W. C. T. U., was unable to be present as announced to address meetings in this city last Sunday. Next Sunday, however, she will be present at Trinity church in the afternoon, at four o'clock.

ON the authority of every professionally electric man that visits this city, including the Superintendents of plants in much larger cities, it may be asserted truthfully that Plainfield has the handsomest and most perfect-running electric light Station in the United States. This success of Mr. A. P. Wright the designer, creator and Manager of the plant, will be noted throughout the country. With Mr. John H. Taber in charge at the Station, also faithfully serving the company and its patrons, the perfection of the plant and the satisfaction of its service will never lessen.

AN adjourned meeting of the Fire Board was held, Saturday evening, with all members present. Commissioner Knowland acted as secretary in the absence of his deputy. A claim from Engine company No. 1, for the services of its horse from October 1885 to December 1886, was presented but subsequently withdrawn at the request of the Board and its promise to pay when able. Commissioner McClure protested against such assurance, and moved to lay the claim on the table indefinitely. His motion was not seconded, and he withdrew from the meeting. After the usual routine business, the Board adjourned.

The Bicycle Club Pool-Championship.

The winners of the first set of games in the Pool Tournament for a prize cue and the championship of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, were Messrs. R. Murray, Gillett, Marsh, H. Martin, Beebe, Stevin, McKinney and Ackerman; second set, Messrs. Murray, Gillett, Marsh, Martin, Stevin and Ackerman; Third set, Messrs. Murray, Gillett and Marsh. The final winner at the closing match, Tuesday evening, was Mr. A. L. C. Marsh.

Gratitude Expressed.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Permit me, through your paper, to express, in behalf of Mr. Brown and his family, most grateful thanks for the kindly and generous aid which has been extended to them in this their time of sore need. May the blessing of Him who says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me," be their abundant reward.

FRANCES MATTISON.

When and Where, But Why?

The reception that is being arranged by the Young W. C. T. U., will take place during Monday evening the 31st inst., at the residence of Charles Potter, Esq., on Seventh street, West. The programme will consist principally of vocal music entirely by members of the association, social intercourse and refreshments. As the Y's have lots of money in their treasury, and no other way of spending it, it was supposed they intended giving entertainments that would attract those they aim to reach at places the latter would not (by reason of their station in society) feel shy of entering.

Trouble in the Fire Board.

It is probable that after the next meeting of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department, there will occur another vacancy in that body. Commissioner McClure, who withdrew from the Board meeting of Saturday evening last, says he will resign and only postponed such action that he might not be accused of taking it hastily. The cause of it all was simple enough, seemingly, but sufficient in the estimation of the retiring Commissioner to demand the step he took. At a meeting, some months before, Mr. McClure's absence was taken advantage of—he has boldly claimed to the faces of his colleagues—and an appointment made by the Board to which they knew he was opposed, and which appointment a member of the Board gave Mr. McClure his word of honor would not be considered in his absence. But to this discourtesy he submitted. Now, he declares, he will no longer sit in a Board that wilfully wastes the people's money by promising substantially to pay a claim for services willingly and voluntarily given with no intention or expectation of payment thereof.

A Warning to the Borough.

In the 22d annual report of the Board of Water Commissioners of the City of Hartford, for the year ending March 1st, 1886, appears this clause which we quote for the benefit of the Borough Council of North Plainfield:

"The cement lined sheet iron mains have caused much trouble the past season, breaks being more and more frequent, creating not only damage to streets and inconvenience to water consumers in the vicinity, but involving a heavy expense in repairs to this department. In our opinion the time has arrived for systematic action to effect their removal. We propose making the change as fast as our financial condition will permit. A new peril to this sort of pipe has lately developed, and that is its exposure to lightning stroke. In Norwich, which has, and recognizes the misfortune of having, considerable of the cement pipe, it was struck by lightning on four different days last summer. The last time it actually damaged 1,445 feet of pipe, or more than a quarter of a mile. Cast iron pipe does not suffer from this cause, probably by reason of its better conducting and diffusing powers."

Barbed Wire Fence Must Go.

Judge Magie, at Trenton, has just laid down some new law in reference to barbed wire fence, in the case of Karl Polak, of this city against Samuel Hudson and his wife. The Hudsons own a field with barbed wire fence around it, and Mr. Polak owned a fine colt which he put to pasture in a field adjoining that of the Hudsons. The colt had a fight with the fence and received injuries which made it necessary to kill it. Mr Polak wanted the Hudsons to pay for his colt, and Corporation Counsel Marsh insisted that the barbed wire fence, in law, was a device of the devil and entitled to nothing but judicial execution. Judge Magie coincided with him so far as to rule that no owner had a right to erect any fence without taking into consideration the natural habits of the animals that were likely to be kept in the adjoining field, "their habits in their playfulness, their disposition to stray, even their disposition to break through," and that any fence which was likely, from the habits of the animals, to produce injury to them, was illegal, and the person erecting it is liable for the damage it did. It is supposed the issue will be contested by the barbed wire fence manufacturers.

John Roach, the great ship builder, despite all the stories about his financial ruin, leaves about a million of round dollars to be divided among his wife and children.

Personals.

Mr. John Robinson, of Perth Amboy, spent Sunday last with friends in North Plainfield.

Miss Jean and Miss Gussie Murray leave to-day for a few weeks' visit with relatives in Dundas, Ontario.

City Judge Ulrich has been presented by Jerusalem Lodge F. and A. M., with a handsome "Past Master's Jewel."

Mrs. John M. Clark of Park avenue, will give an afternoon tea, Thursday of next week, from five till seven o'clock.

Mrs. Daniel Ball, (nee Cooper) formerly of this city, but now of New York, spent Tuesday last with her parents on East Second street.

Postmaster Wiley, of Elizabeth, has the sympathy of many friends in this city, in the loss of his aged mother by death, which event occurred a few days since.

Mr. George H. Demarza, one of the oldest and best known of Plainfield's citizens, died at his residence in Elm place, this city, Wednesday evening, at nine o'clock, of pneumonia.

Mrs. E. S. Clark, of Front street, West, will give a large reception, next Thursday evening, that will be the occasion of the ceremonious entering into society of her accomplished daughter.

Mr. A. C. Bushnell and wife of East Second street, and Town Committeeman R. B. Fairchild, of North Plainfield Borough, wife and son, are visiting at the National Capitol, stopping at the Tremont House.

The Park avenue Baptist church has engaged a new organist, Mr. D. S. Bennett of Cranford, who is spoken of as a very able choir leader, and under whose direction already a competent chorus is in training for church service.

Alpha Club will give its fourth evening sociable, Wednesday evening of next week. It will be held at the residence of Mrs. J. E. Hunter, Broadway near Fifth street, and will be tendered Mr. Frank Vosseller, nephew of the hostess.

Mr. J. H. Olhausen, the new appointee to the position of General Superintendent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, was in Plainfield recently, and as he has authorized the search of a place of residence for himself and family in this city, we are possibly to be incalculably benefited by his permanent location amongst us.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company has been most fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Frank Barclay, formerly Superintendent for Messrs. Glover, Davis & Hitchcock, the contractors who originally did the wiring of the city. The company has now taken this branch of the business in its own hands, and under the direction of the genial Barclay it will be most satisfactorily accomplished.

A meeting of the Consistory of the Trinity Reformed church was held Monday evening, and received from its pastor, the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond, his resignation to accept a call from the Fourth Presbyterian church of Albany. Mr. Raymond will vacate his pulpit here after next communion Sunday, Feb. 6th. He thus sunders all personal ties in Plainfield with sincere regret, and resigns in deep sorrow the pastorate of a church that has been blessed with an added membership of over three hundred since he first occupied its pulpit. During his residence here, apart from the remarkable success of his own church work, no one has been so active in outside matters. Always ready to preside over or address public meetings, he has been called upon for such service more than any other city pastor, and his absence for this reason also will long be felt. The church can not as yet fully realize the fact that it has lost him, and must look about the world for another. How can he be fully replaced?

New Jersey Editorial Association.

The New Jersey Editorial Association on Monday last made its annual trip to Trenton and held a very agreeable meeting at the State House. It is the thirty first year of the Association's history. President Robinson took the chair and Secretary Bechtel called the roll. The following names were proposed for membership: Hugh Boyd, New Brunswick Home News; J. F. Kempson, Metuchen Inquirer; John S. Gibson, Dover Index; John J. Curley, of Camden; Halsey Jennings, Toms River Courier; Edwin Fitzgeorge, Trenton Times and Wm. S. Taylor, Woodstown Register. They were referred to the Executive Committee and favorably reported, after which they were elected to membership. President Robinson appointed the following committee to nominate officers: Messrs. Ketcham, Babcock, Gwynne, Brown and Pierson. The Treasurer's report which showed the state of the finances of the Association, was then read and adopted. The committee on Nomination of Officers reported as follows: President, H. D. Winton, of Hackensack; First Vice-President, E. W. Humphreys, of Morristown; Second Vice President, James P. Logan, of Burlington; Third Vice-President, Joseph T. Crowell, of Rahway; Fourth Vice-President, John Simerson, of Belvidere; Fifth Vice President, Joshua Brown, of Morristown; Sixth Vice-President, F. W. Baldwin, of Orange; Seventh Vice-President, E. Gardner, of Bayonne; Secretary, Chas. Bechtel, of Trenton; Treasurer, Jas. S. Yard, of Freehold. Messrs. Gwynne and Ketcham conducted the President to the chair, after which the order of business was resumed. Several members, among whom was President Winton, read papers. Hon. Joseph T. Crowell, of the Rahway Censor read an interesting historical paper. Papers were ordered to be prepared on the death of the following members: J. Howard Clothier, Mt. Holly News; T. B. Williamson, Cape May Wave; Samuel Jennings, Toms River Courier, and Roland Johnson, Orange Journal. A lively discussion concerning the issuing of annual tickets then took place. The question was discussed at length by several members. It was held that many persons unconnected with the press, and not, therefore, entitled to tickets, go every summer on the excursion. A motion was made to have all tickets hereafter issued signed by a member of the Association, when it was found that there was a rule to the same effect. Mr. Vance submitted the following question: "In accepting foreign advertising from agents not in New York or Philadelphia, and with whom newspapers have not an open account, should the rule not be adopted of pay in advance?" "Suppose a party newspaper finds itself unable, conscientiously, to support a nominee of its party, is it required by party usage to place his name at the head of the paper?" In answering the first question the members agreed that under such circumstances, the rule of "pay in advance" should by all means be enforced. Concerning the second question, it was agreed that when a newspaper cannot conscientiously support a candidate of its party, the name of the said candidate should not be placed at the head of the paper. Mr. Honeyman moved that a special committee of five be appointed to consider Mr. Vance's first question. The motion was carried and President Winton appointed the following members to constitute the said committee: Messrs. Honeyman, Morrison, Gibson, Boyd and Hyer. The President announced the following committee on questions, for next year: Messrs. Gwynne, Babcock, Ketcham.

Old and mutilated bank notes when returned to the United States Treasury are chopped up and made into a pulp which is moulded into various shapes and forms. The latest design is a miniature bust of Mrs. Cleveland, which has a ready sale. It takes $10,000 worth of old bank notes to make one of these designs.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Attention is directed to the advertisement in another column of the Grand Tournament to be given by the Middlesex Gun Club next month. It is expected that a number of the crack shots of the country will enter in the sweepstakes. The occasion promises to be an enjoyable one.

A team of the Middlesex Gun Club visited Kingston, N. J., on Wednesday, to shoot a return match with the Kingston Gun Club, at clay pigeons. The first match, on the Middlesex grounds at Dunellen, last September, resulted in a victory for the Middlesex boys. This time they could muster but nine shooters when they arrived on the grounds, and consequently each club shot teams of nine men each. The Kingston Club won the match by a score of 76 to their opponents 66. Each man shot at fifteen clay pigeons, eighteen yards rise, five traps. The Middlesex Club was handsomely entertained by the Kingston boys.

LITERARY NOTES.

James Otis, author of "Toby Tyler," will begin a serial called "Jenny's Boarding House" in the February St. Nicholas. The boarding house was kept on business principles and was the home of thrifty newsboys. The same number contains a story of Iceland by Hjalmar H. Boyesen.

Walt Whitman and the Rev. C. A. Bartol contribute papers on the powerful and original Boston sailors' preacher, Father Taylor, to the Midwinter Century. Numerous anecdotes in the latter's article show the unique, strong character of the man, while the poet writes particularly of his oratory.

The Golden Argosy for January 15 contains the opening chapters of a new serial by Oliver Optic, the famous writer for young people. Serials by Horatio Alger, Jr., Edward S. Ellis, Frank H. Converse and Captain Ashley are also running in this popular periodical, as well as a second by Oliver Optic. Sketches of George W. Childs, "M. Quad," and Colonel Taylor, of the Boston Globe, have appeared during the month, as well as many short stories and other matter of general interest. The Golden Argosy, is published by Frank A. Munsey, at 81 Warren Street, New York.

The two series of articles, "How I was Educated," and "Confessions" of members of several religious denominations, which have attracted a good deal of attention in the Forum, are to be followed soon by two other series. In one of these will be presented the views of many different schools of thought, as the Agnostic, the Evolutionist, the Positivist, as well as those of Christian theology, Protestant and Catholic, upon the question, "What is the Object of Life?" In the other, many of the most notable men of the day will contribute instructive and interesting chapters out of the history of their own lives, under the title, "Books That Have Been Useful to Me."

An Elegant Holiday Book; Mother, Home and Heaven. Edited by Rev. Theo L. Cuyler, D. D., and others. From an examination of its merits we heartily endorse the sentiment of Wm. M. Taylor, D. D., Pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, expressed in a personal letter to the Publisher, E. B. Treat, 771 Broadway, N. Y. "This book is as valuable in its contents as it is beautiful in its external appearance. There is something here for almost every experience, and the lessons for earth are all made to point toward the rewards of heaven. The book, as a whole, is worthy of all acceptation, and is especially timely in an age when the glory of the home is so frequently forgotten in the glitter of what is called society." Price, $2.75. Teachers, Ladies and Agents are wanted to introduce it.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

The ice harvest has been temporarily suspended, but the frost king will soon enable the resumption of the work, as we are hovering around zero weather again.

The scholars in the Public school were a disappointed crowd last Friday, the sleighing having mysteriously disappeared during the previous night and if there is any truth in the maxim that the pleasure of anticipation is greater than the reality, they will certainly have their fill before they have their ride.

Last Saturday evening a number of the new colony went down to the depot intending to skip out of New Market, but as some difficulty occurred about taking their sewing machines along only a few got away—some taking the machine off the stand and leaving the latter on the platform. The trouble arose from dissatisfaction at the pay they received for making clothing and if one can judge from the deplorable way in which they exist, (for you cannot call it living) there is probably good cause for complaint. At "Castle Thunder" as it is called, some fourteen occupy two rooms, in which they work, eat and sleep, their living consisting chiefly on bread and onions. They have little or no furniture and none of the appliances of ordinary civilization—sleeping, so common report says, in their clothes on the floor, with a bundle of straw for a bed!!! Just fancy working early and late and being enabled with assiduity to make sufficient to enable them to indulge in the luxuries enumerated!! Two hundred and fifty dollars paid out last Friday for labor—the largest sum said to be ever paid in one week for the manufacture of clothing in this place and I presume the largest amount of work done for the money within a circuit of a good many miles. The addition of this colony is not looked upon with favor. Whilst it is true we want some industrial enterprises in our midst, we should rejoice to see one that enabled a man to earn a fair day's wages for a fair day's work. The system is the outcome of a quarter of a century's Republican misrule of execrable protection—protection for the manufacturer—for the capitalist to become a monopolist—driving small traders out of business and placing them in the category of employees for whom no protection has ever been thought of further than to grind them down to the lowest level of pay that ingenuity in the introduction of the dregs of European pauper labor could depress the wages of the honest American workman. Let us Democrats hoist the standard afresh—the Republicans must go and with them the iniquitous system of Internal Revenue which robs us of many millions a year, besides keeping in clover a horde of hungry office holders to fatten upon the hard earned wages of the people. Sound the bugle of not only "Tariff Reform" but the entire system of unnecessary taxation which piles up millions of dollars annually for which the Government has no use, making the rich richer and the poor poorer under the plea of fostering industries when in point of fact it is sapping the life blood of the nation and concentrating our enormous wealth in the hands of the few who do not hesitate to use it to perpetuate a system repugnant to honest Americans. BROAD BRIM.

The new postal card is not admired as an artistic production, besides it is conducive to profanity. The vignette stamp is placed in the centre of the card, and a new cancelling machine will be needed in the large post offices, while the country clerks will miss [illegible] it about [illegible] out of ten. It is an improvement in quality of card used.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Charles B. Farwell has been elected successor to Gen. John A. Logan for the U. S. Senate from Illinois.

It has been deemed proper by the United States Senate that the widow of ex-Senator Logan should receive a pension of $2,000 a year while she lives, because her husband died from rheumatism contracted during the war.

Hon. William Walter Phelps introduced a bill in the House on Monday to reimburse ex-Governor Price the $75,000 of which he was robbed while acting as confidential agent of the Navy Department during the Mexican war. The ex-Governor is now in reduced circumstances.

The Electoral count bill is at last in shape for final passage. The Conference Committee of the two Houses have agreed upon the bill which is substantially that passed by the Senate, except that the President of the Senate is to announce, not the name of the candidate elected, but merely the state of the vote which has been compiled before him.

The effort that is being made to secure the pardon of Oscar Baldwin, who was sentenced to five years imprisonment on each of three counts, ought to and probably will meet with popular approval. The moral effect of the punishment already imposed is as great as though it were trebled in duration, and there are extenuating circumstances connected with it which would justify a commutation of the sentence.

The Supreme Court of the United States has rendered a decision in the case of King of the Belgians et al. versus Mali, counsel. The question involved related to jurisdiction of the courts of New Jersey, and is of international importance. A murder was recently committed on a Belgian vessel lying at a New Jersey wharf. The culprit was arrested and lodged in a New Jersey jail. The King of Belgium demanded custody of the prisoner on the ground that the crime was committed on Belgian property, and not on the soil of the United States. The courts of New Jersey held that while the crime was committed on a foreign ship, the latter was in American waters, and that the courts of the State of New Jersey had jurisdiction. The Supreme Court has affirmed this decision.

MISCELLANEOUS READING

THE PROFESSOR'S NEW COAT.

BY HELEN FORREST GRAVES.

"Is it really true, Max, that you are going to have a dinner-party at the Grange? Of learned gentlemen? And that papa is to be invited?"

Fanny Leslie flung her little crochet cap into the air, and caught it again with the dexterity of a sleight-of-hand performer.

Max Lynfield, who was sitting on the low stone stile that separated the well-kept grounds of the Grange from the weedy wilderness of the Leslie estate, with a gun balanced on his shoulder, and a game bag slung over his back, nodded emphatically.

"All the scientific lights of the convention are to be invited," said he. "Spectacles and bald heads will be at a premium. Don't you wish you were a learned old fudge—eh, Fan? Of course your governor is to be invited. Doesn't he know the most about Egyptology, and ancient Roman lettering, of any old gentleman in the land? Isn't Prof. Tolmaine especially anxious to make his acquaintance? And isn't Dr. Lebrun going to bring, in his waistcoat pocket, a slab of stone chipped off from the nose of some Assyrian statue or other for him to identify? What are you looking so sober about? Jealous because you can't join the company? I'm sorry for you, Fanny; but you had no business to be a woman."

"It isn't that," said Fanny, with ludicrous solemnity. "What day is the dinner to be, Max?"

"The seventeenth. Just two weeks from to-day. But I say, Fan, what are you in such a hurry for?"

"It's almost sundown," said Miss Leslie, gathering her scarf about her shoulders in a hurried way. "And I have wasted ever so much time here already. Good-by, Max!"

"Yes; but I say, Fanny"——

The only response to this appeal was the light, quick sound of the girl's footsteps, as she flitted away over the carpet of autumn leaves that covered the path, into the yellow mist of the October afternoon.

"What a pretty girl that is!" Max Lynfield murmured to himself. "Her eyes are exactly the color of a hazelnut. But I don't see why she need be in such a hurry."

And he disconsolately picked up the game bag which he had unbuckled from his shoulder, and strode away whistling.

Meanwhile, Fanny had sped to the dreary old-fashioned stone house, blotched with mildew and full of a spectral silence, where old Mr. Leslie sat, spectacled and absorbed, among his books, and Alma, the eldest daughter, was in the kitchen making a damson pudding for dinner.

She looked up as Fanny came flying in.

"I thought you never were coming, Fan," said she. "Did you bring the powdered sugar?"

"Here it is," and Fanny flung a little paper on the table. "But oh, Alma! the dinner-party at the Grange is to be on the seventeenth, and papa is to be one of the invited guests!"

"Oh, Fanny!" said she. "But of course he can't go. He has no coat fit to be seen at a dinner party in Colonel Lynfield's house."

"Alma, he must go!"

"How can he, Fanny?"

"It will be such a treat for him, Alma, to meet those scientific gentlemen, and get a glimpse of the world he has left behind him," pleaded Fanny. "We must manage it, somehow!"

Alma knitted her black brows together.

"How much money is there in the drawer, Fan?" she asked abruptly.

"I don't know—fifteen dollars, I think."

"That proves the impossibility of our fine dinner-party, Fan," said Alma, shrugging her shoulders. "Fifteen dollars would just about purchase the cloth for a new coat."

Fanny looked gravely at her sister.

"Well," said she, "that is all I want; give me the cloth, and I'll make the coat."

"What nonsense, Fanny."

"It isn't nonsense at all."

"You make a broadcloth coat!"

"Why shouldn't I? Didn't I make a cloth ulster for myself, and make it well, too?"

"But you are not a tailor."

"I'll be a tailoress, which is just as good."

"You have no pattern, Fan."

"I can rip papa's old coat apart, and get the pattern from that. Where is it? Is he wearing it now?"

"He has got on that old dressing-gown of his," said Alma.

"Then get the coat—that's a dear—and rip it carefully apart," said Fanny, "while I go down to the store and buy the broadcloth. We haven't a second to lose."

The next two days were days of cutting, stitching, pressing, calculating, in the big, sunny south room which the Leslie girls called their boudoir.

Old Mr. Leslie sat among his dusty tomes and ponderous dictionaries, with pencil behind each ear and a pen in his hand, making notes and scribbling off paragraphs, all unconscious of what was going on around him.

"If I'm to be at that party of savants," he said to Alma, "I must settle this question as to the authenticity of the Eudic monographs."

"Certainly, papa," said Alma, in an abstracted way, as she hemmed a new black silk cravat, and pondered as to the practicability of new gloves, and whether her father would wear them if they were bought.

"Papa," said Fanny, the evening before the eventful day, "we want you to try on your coat to-night."

"To try on my coat!" vaguely repeated the philosopher. "What coat? What for?"

"Oh, just to see if it's all right!" said Fanny, not without a qualm of terror lest her father should discover the pious fraud and object to wear home-made garments.

Absently, Mr. Leslie rose up, divested himself of his faded dressing-gown, and put on the new coat. Alma and Fanny viewed him with critical eyes, and exchanged glances of satisfaction.

"Does it feel quite comfortable, papa?" said Alma.

"Very nice, my dear, very nice," said the philosopher. "Really, I didn't know that old coat looked so nice. Take it away, daughter, and brush it thoroughly, and have it ready for me to-morrow, with a fresh neck-tie and a clean pocket-handkerchief."

And once more he plunged into the depths of the Eudic monography question.

"Fanny," said Alma, in a low voice, "it's a success!"

"Alma," said Fanny, in the same tone, "I knew that it would be!"

Mr. Leslie went to the dinner-party at Lynfield Grange, and astonished several dozen other old gentlemen by the depth of his learning, and nobody discovered that the home-made coat was not the chef d'œuvre of a New York clothier.

But Fanny Leslie was not destined to hear the last of the coat. Miss Helena St. Jacquin, who had chanced to surprise them in the task, whispered it mysteriously to her dearest friend Mrs Emerson Fielding, and every one knew, presently, that the Leslie girls had turned tailoresses and taken in work by the day.

"It was Fanny," said Miss St. Jacquin. "I saw her myself, pressing out the seams of a coat with a prodigious smoothing-iron—a man's coat! They tried to shuffle it out of sight as soon as possible, but they weren't quick enough for me!"

"Well," said Max Lynfield, carelessly, "why shouldn't they sew on men's coats as well as on worsted work?"

Mrs. Emerson Fielding elevated her pretty little nose.

"I'm afraid," said she, "we shall have to leave the Leslie girls off our list for the charade-parties next winter."

Max Lynfield rose up in exceeding great wrath.

"Then you may leave me off, too!" said he, and started out of the room.

He went straight to the old stone house. Fanny was there in the garden, gathering chrysanthemums, great white fringed beauties, and the buds that were like balls of gold, and brick-red blossoms full of a strange aromatic fragrance like Eastern spices.

"Fan," said he, "if you had wanted money, you ought to have come to me. Haven't we been friends long enough to induce you to put any confidence in me?"

Fanny looked at him in serene surprise.

"But, Max," said she, "we don't want money—no more than usual, that is to say. Everybody wants money, I suppose."

And she clipped off a stem of rich maroon flowers, and laid it lovingly among the rest of her floral trophies.

Honest Max, who had no idea of diplomacy, plunged headlong into the subject.

"Then," said he, "what's all this talk about taking in tailor-work?"

"About my taking tailor-work?"

"Yes. Miss St. Jacquin saw you working at it."

"Did she?" Fanny's cheeks flamed scarlet. "Miss St. Jacquin had better have been attending to her own business. But since she has told you half the story, I may as well tell the other half. I am sure it's no secret." And she told Max Lynfield the simple tale.

"Fan, you're a trump!" said he. "And you really made that coat yourself?"

"I really made that coat myself—with a little help from Alma!" proudly spoke Fanny.

"I should like a daughter like you—that is to say, when I develop into an old gentleman of scientific tastes," said Max.

"Oh you'll never develop into an old gentleman of scientific tastes," said Fanny. "You are not half wise enough."

At this Max's honest countenance fell.

"I knew it," said he, sorrowfully. "You despise me. You think I am a dunce."

Fanny dropped all her flowers in consternation.

"O Max," she cried, "I don't despise you at all. I like you."

"That isn't the question," said Max, moodily. "The question is, do you love me?"

"Max!"

"Fanny! No—stay here!" posting himself with lightning rapidity in the doorway. "Unless you jump down the terrace, you can't get away from me. And I am determined to have an answer."

He had the answer. And the answer was "Yes."

Mrs. Fielding, the pretty widow, was deeply annoyed; Miss St. Jacquin raved.

"But, you see," Mr. Lynfield afterward said, "I never should have known how much I cared for Fan, if I hadn't heard those spiteful cats criticising her."

Mr. Leslie wore the self-same coat to his daughter's wedding. But, to the end of his learned and scientific life, he never knew who made it. Savants are not wise in the ordinary events of every-day life.

FOR THE LADIES.

Seldom do we find so much wisdom on the dress question in so few lines as is contained in the following paragraphic advice:

Stiff materials are less manageable and graceful than soft ones.

One dull stuff and one glossy stuff unite better than two glossy or two dull ones.

Colors near the face should be soft and indescribable.

A woman to be well dressed and to look her best must concentrate her efforts on tints few and good.

Antique lace will last forever, remend and reclean it as much as you please. Being yellow, instead of snow white, it scarcely ever shows dirt. Modern lace, however good or costly, soon wears out.

The worst extravagance is to buy "shoddy" materials got up by unprincipled traders to deceive the eye.

One or two really fine jewels are in far better taste than a quantity of mediocre ones.

Experience shows that all dull, rich silks wear greasy, that a good satin outlasts three silks and three cheap satins, and that black velvet lasts longer than colored.

A set of good fur is never any loss, as it can be cut, rejoined, dispersed, united, worn on an evening dress, or a mantle, at will, without harm.

A dress or jacket properly made and properly fitted by a good dressmaker, though this costs more than one made by a novice, will look and hang well to the end, while the other will not.

It is indispensable in buying dresses to remember what your wardrobe contains, as two dresses can often be combined into one nowadays if the colors are happily chosen, which is a great economy.

Ladies who study economy will never adopt the outré in anything, for outré fashions never last long.

Women of taste are content with a few things—and those good—in lieu of a quantity of cheap finery.

Never buy a bonnet that will not go with all your dresses and jackets likely to be required while the bonnet lasts—unless you can afford to wear one to match each suit.

Extravagance in dress means not only spending too much money on it, but also the patronage of foolish fashions devised simply to waste materials.

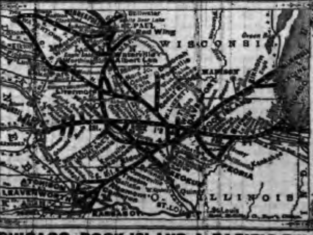
A MAN
WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE



CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y
By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific. The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE
Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.
ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLEEPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE
Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown. A short desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points.
All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly attention.

From Pole to Pole
AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has demonstrated its power of cure for all diseases of the blood.

The Harpooner's Story.
New Bedford, June 1, 1883.
DR. J. C. AYER & Co.—Twenty years ago I was a harpooner in the North Pacific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums swollen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and our breath seemed rotten. Take it by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime-juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seen men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and I've seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanac of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ought to know of this, and so send you the facts.
Respectfully yours, RALPH Y. WINGATE.

The Trooper's Experience.
Masera, Basutoland (S. Africa), March 7, 1883.
DR. J. C. AYER & Co.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure to testify to the great value of your Sarsaparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live in tents. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veldt-sores." I had those sores for some time. I was advised to take your Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.
Yours truly, T. E. BOWKER,
Trooper, Cape Mounted Riflemen.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
Is the only thoroughly effective blood-purifier, the only medicine that eradicates the poisons of Scrofula, Mercury, and Contagious Disease from the system.

TOO OLD TO KISS.

"Too old to kiss! Too old to kiss!"
Alas! and has it come to this?
Have feelings thus so sadly changed,
That youth and age thus be estranged?

'Tis true my faded eye is dim,
And bowed my heart with trembling limb;
My heart beats slow, but still, in truth,
It quickens at the sight of youth.

"Too old to be kissed!" I would forego
The bitter pangs those words bestow;
For memory sends those scalding tears,
As it returns to former years.

Three little lovely ones had we;
I prayed that they might be spared to me,
As mothers ever pray;
My prayers were vain—they passed away.

And now all earthly joy is gone!
Poor, old, and friendless, and forlorn,
My soul by bitterest grief oppressed—
But soon I, too, shall be at rest.

Your little Lou, so full of glee,
Brought back those loves lost to me;
And this is why, my little Miss,
I just now asked you for a kiss.

Miscellaneous Reading.

A LESSON IN PALMISTRY.

It was one summer day by the sea, years and years ago—almost an age ago—so it seems now. Just how many years ago need not be said. Years never are what they seem to be after they are gone. They are either shorter or longer than they were, and these years of mine were like all the rest. She was fourteen and I was sixteen. She was pretty, graceful and slender. Her hair was dark and came down low over her forehead. Her eyes were brown, and when she laughed they laughed, when she was sad so were they, and when she wanted them to they could speak, as they did speak to me once that summer by the sea. But I am anticipating my story. Her cheeks were rich with color and so were her lips. She was pretty, was Phillis, and I was a boy of sixteen, as awkward, as blundering and as impressionable as boys of sixteen are are apt to be.

It was Phillis who gave me my first lesson in palmistry. She was romantic at that age, as most girls are, and loved poetry and caramels, was devoted to romances, and had an affection for mysteries, which came from deep down in her heart. Phillis had a heart—when she was fourteen I loved simply her. To her only was I devoted, and upon her alone all the youthful affections of a growing boy was generously lavished. She didn't love me then; there was no mystery, no romance, no poetry about me; but there were caramels, and I was the only boy in all Portsmouth that she knew that summer by the sea. Accordingly, under these circumstances, I was made to feel that life was a very pleasant thing and I a very passable creature for my age.

In the attic of the old house where we lived, my aunt's—we were kinsfolk, far removed, Phillis and I—there was an antiquated book on magic, with a dingy cover, cracked open at the back and redolent of must, which gave to its contents a certain flavor of veracity as though its yellow pages had been pored over by many an astral scholar in ages gone by. And would they have studied it so deeply had it not told the truth? It contained figures of hands, roughly drawn, with labyrinths of lines upon the palms, crossing and recrossing each other like the creases in a crumpled piece of paper. These mysterious lines were defined in the text and their significance for weal and for woe were pointed out at length. In this book Phillis fairly revelled, and to unravel its mystery and master its definitions she devoted herself with ardent zest, until finally she knew enough of its lore to give me my first lesson in palmistry. The same to which I have alluded before. It was one afternoon in June. We had wandered far away from the house and sat down on a rustic bench on the lawn overlooking the sea.

"Chub," said she (I was called Chub when I was sixteen—because I looked as little like a chub as a trout looks like a dolphin—as some men nowadays are called great), "shall I read from destiny in your hand?"

"Something you learned in that old book?" was my romantic reply.

"Yes," she said, "and it's simply wonderful what it tells. Do you know," she added confidentially, drawing a little closer to my side and speaking almost in a whisper. "Do you know—"

"What?" I asked, interested but not enthused—that is, not just then.

"Why it has told me all my life, everything I ever did almost, and it shows me the most beautiful future you can think of. Isn't that nice? Of course it must be true."

I may have looked skeptical, but I wisely kept silent.

"Well, it is true. I know it, for—" this triumphantly—"if it tells the truth about the past, why shouldn't it tell the truth about the future?"

Having no answering argument at my disposal at that moment I made no reply.

"If you don't care to have your fortune told, though—" she continued with a touch of disappointment in her displeasure as she arose with quiet dignity and prepared to go.

"Don't go, Phillis," I exclaimed penitently. "You can tell my fortune if you want to. You can tell it a hundred times I don't care. Indeed I don't. I'd rather enjoy it. Come, now, don't be angry, Phillis. How do you begin? See, here are my hands both of them."

"If you will promise to be real good—" Phillis spoke slowly and with emphasis.

"I'll promise anything," I interrupted.

"And if you will not scoff at the art," she continued like a true victor, without noticing my comprehensive but ill-timed assent to her terms of conquest. "If you will be quiet and respectful and remember all I tell you I will read your hands. otherwise—"

My promise, this time, was so earnest and so contrite that the palmist relented at once, and after grasping the tips of my outstretched hand in one of hers and pointing with a dainty finger tip to the largest of the lines which crossed the palm she began drawing aside the curtain which hid from unlearned eyes my future and my past.

"What a big hand you have, Chub" she observed by way of a preface, "and how hard it is."

My hand did look large when clasped by her dainty fingers—larger than it ever looked before, and as I gazed upon it it seemed to grow even larger still and my face reddened with shame.

"That doesn't make any difference, though," she continued, "I can read it all the better for that. The lines are bigger you know."

I didn't know, but I felt grateful all the same.

"This long line," went on the sibyl thoughtfully and seriously, "is your line of life. See how long it is? You will live to be very old. I wouldn't be surprised if you lived to be fifty, forty-eight at least. I am sure of that—"

Forty-eight doesn't seem a very Methuselah of an age when one is sixteen or thereabouts.

"This line is your line of head. How very deep it is and long! You are going to be very smart some day, Chub. You shouldn't be discouraged at anything. Even if you should be arrested some day and sent to state prison don't despair, no matter how long you have to stay there, for this line says you are going to be great and good and your life will be prosperous and happy—every bit of it."

"I won't despair," I remarked heroically. And at that moment I don't believe I would have despaired even if my happy and prosperous career had been willed by the fates to be passed forever in state prison.

"You have been bad, Chub," continued the pretty soothsayer, "very bad, a little line under your second finger tells me it was you who sank the sailboat on the rocks, besides that, your clothes were all wet the next morning."

I blushed deeply, but said nothing. Was it for me to deny what the fates revealed? It was not—not then.

"I knew I was right," Phillis added, "but I shall never tell. That wouldn't be fair, considering how I have found it out. But I won't go into your past, I will read the future for you."

Again I looked my gratitude while she went on—

"This lot of lines below your thumb, and there is such a lot of them, tell me you are going to be famous—very famous. I almost fear that you won't speak to me when you are so great. You men are so ungrateful. Well, don't squeeze my hand so hard; perhaps you will be different from your sex. I'll try and believe you anyway. This line in the middle of your hand is the line of fortune. You are going to be very, very rich, Chub. I wouldn't be surprised if you could afford to go to Europe some day and have a horse and carriage and own a house when you grow up."

"Will I ever marry?" I asked.

"Yes, this funny little line right below that hard spot says you are going to marry—but you must not be foolish with your money, Chub."

"Never mind the money, Phillis, tell me who I'm going to marry," I exclaimed growing bolder and bolder as she grew more timid.

"I can't tell you everything, you foolish boy. I haven't got that far in the book," explained the little maid, her eyes downcast and with a diplomacy worthy of a greater age.

"I'll read that part of my life myself, Phillis," said I with a valor I had never had before nor have had since. "Here, don't go away. I can't read it alone. Keep hold of my hand. There. Now let me take your other hand—only to point out the lines with. My fingers are too big you see. Now I'll tell you who I'm to marry some day, if she will wait for me."

"Perhaps I don't want to know. I don't care who you are going to marry. Probably it is Jennie Miggs or some other girl you know at home," interposed the sibyl, prophetess no longer.

"No, it isn't Jennie Miggs," I retorted warmly. "I am going to marry a beautiful girl with brown eyes and beautiful red lips, and dark, curly hair. I'm going to marry the prettiest girl in all the world. Can't you guess who she is, Phillis?"

If my description lacked definiteness my manner didn't. In snatching her hands away from mine little Phillis slid off the bench and darted away from the scene of my prophecy into the grove. But I was too earnest a seer to be thus robbed of my auditor and in a moment I had overtaken her.

"Will she wait for me, Phillis?" asked I as I put both arms around her to stay her flight.

"Oh, Chub," said she a half hour later, "just think of it."

"Of what?" asked I, ready to think of anything, but able only to think of her.

"Just think how nice it will be when you are great. We will both be rich together, won't we?"

* * * * * * * *

Did I say it was many years ago? If I did, I certainly was mistaken. As I sit at my desk to-day and look at her pretty, girlish picture in its frame of blue and gold it seems only yesterday. Yet it must have been longer than that for I met Phillis on the street last week. She is over thirty now and has four children. She is stout and dresses in loud colors. She is the wife of a rich Chicago pork packer, who hasn't any more lines in his palm than one of his canvas backed hams.

And I—well, from me fortune, fame and prosperity are as far away—yes, even further away, like Phillis—than they were that day in June in that Summer by the sea.

RIDDING HIMSELF OF A CHARGE.

On a certain occasion Robert L. Twitchell, a Vermont Methodist clergyman, was wending his way towards the seat of the annual conference of ministers, in company with another clergyman. Passing a country inn he remarked to the other clergyman:

"The last time I stopped at that tavern I slept with the landlord's wife."

In utter amazement his clerical friend inquired what he meant.

"I mean just what I say," replied Bob; and on went the two travelers in unbroken silence until they reached the conference.

In the early part of the session the conference sat with closed doors, for the purpose of transacting some private business, and especially to attend to the annual examination of each member's private character, or rather conduct during the past year. For this purpose the clerk called Bob's name.

"Does anyone know aught against the character of Brother Twitchell during the past year?" asked the bishop, who was the presiding officer.

After a moment's silence Bob's traveling companion arose with a heavy heart and grave countenance. He said he had a duty to perform—one that he owed to God and the church and himself; he must, therefore, discharge it fearlessly, though tremblingly. He then related what Bob had told him while passing the tavern—how he had slept with the landlord's wife, etc.

The grave body of ministers were struck as with a thunderbolt, although a few smiled and looked first at Bob, then upon the bishop.

The bishop called upon Brother T. and asked him what he had to say in relation to so serious a charge. Bob arose and said:

"I did the deed! I never lie!"

Then, pausing with an awful seriousness, he proceeded with a slow and solemn deliberation: "There was one little circumstance, however, connected with the affair. I did not name to the brother. It may not have much weight with the conference, but although it may be deemed of trifling importance, I will state it: When I slept with the landlord's wife, as I told the brother, I kept the tavern myself."

INEXCUSABLE STUPIDITY.

"Your beau seems very bashful," said a North avenue mamma to her daughter.

"Bashful," echoed the daughter, "bashful's no name for it."

"Why don't you encourage him a little more? Some men have to be taught how to do their courting. He's a good catch."

"Encourage him?" said the daughter; "he cannot take the most palpable hint. Why, only last night, when I sat all alone on the sofa, and he, perched up in a chair, as far away as he could get, I asked him if he didn't think it strange that a man's arm and a woman's waist seemed to be the same length, and what do you think he did?"

"Why, just what any sensible man would have done—tried it."

"He asked me if I could find a piece of string so we could measure and see if it was so. Ain't he horrid?"

AN EXCITING TALE OF A COW.

"You remember," said Tom Gallagher, "that young brindle heifer that old Sam Sidenbender sold to Dick?"

"Yes," I replied. "What of it?"

"Well, that was the wildest cow I ever saw, and Dick undertook to milk her. He corralled her in a fence corner and proceeded to extract the lacteal fluid You know that Dick wore his hair long, and the first whisk of the heifer's tail, which was full of burs, caught fast in Dick's hair. The cow jumped and jerked Dick down. Then she dragged him around the cow-lot, and finally jumped a high board fence. There she stood, pulling and bellowing, and Dick's wife, taking in the situation at a glance, ran to his assistance. She jerked up an axe and blazed away at the cow's tale stretched across the top board of the fence, and—"

"Cut the cow's tail off," I interposed.

"Not much," replied Tom. "Just as Dick's wife struck with the axe at the tail stretched across the top board, the cow gave a lurch and drew Dick's neck across the board and plump under the axe."

"Conscience!" I exclaimed. "Dick's wife cut his head off, did she?"

"No, sir," replied Tom. "Dick's wife struck such an awkward blow that it tickled the cow into a spasm and scared Dick to death. The old woman hit a corn-crib, seventeen feet away, with the handle of the axe, and I quit the scene of her exploit, lost in admiration.—Bill Nye.

FIXING UP THE FIGURE.

"What is a perfect figure?" repeated a popular Henry street modiste. "Well, a perfect figure is a rarity. There are many good figures in Detroit, but I should say very few perfect ones—that is, of just the required proportions."

"What are the proportions?"

"Thirty-six inches bust and twenty-two waist, thirteen inches chest and fourteen back, is a perfect figure. The average good figure is thirty-eight bust with twenty-seven waist, or thirty-two bust with twenty-five waist. Of course I am not speaking of little, ordinary figures, but of women five feet five inches to five feet seven or nine inches in height. Now, Fanny Davenport has what may be called an extraordinary figure; she measures twenty-six inches waist, thirty-six bust and seventeen inches in the length of her bust, where siffleso is called the perfect length."

"Have you a perfect figure among your customers?"

"I have one, a young lady on Sibley street. She has a perfect figure, round and proportionate, and needs no padding."

"Padding! Do most figures require padding?"

"Bless you! There is not one in fifty that is not built up more or less. Some are crooked, others are hollow-chested or have vacuums under the arms, one shoulder higher than the other, or too high collar-bones, and these defects have to be remedied in some way, you see. No good dressmaker wishes to turn out work that looks like a crazy-quilt. Half the world would say it was the dressmaker's fault, instead of seeing that it was the figure which needed rounding out. Ladies often say they will not wear a dress, but when they have a few bad fits they are glad to leave it to the dressmaker's judgment."

"Which is the better, wool or cotton, for padding?"

"Both answer the purpose. Actresses like wool; it does not flatten out. If we have to build up only some particular part we use cotton. Some have an entire harness of either cotton or wool. One objection to wool is its warmth, especially in hot weather. There are few figures so free from angles as to do entirely without some artificial plumpness, but it is very funny how few women see their figures as others see them. They usually think their own forms devine, and the poor dressmaker suffers for it, when the truth of it is that not more than half of the American women have even passably good figures. The other half are positively bad, and the dressmakers have to pad up to make them at all presentable. Why, the very number of manufactured articles for the improvement of woman's shapes shows this. There's always coming out a hip-bustle, a dress improver, or a hip-extender, or some new kind of corsets."

"What kind of corsets do you consider the best?"

"A long corset which holds the hip down without pressure. A corset should not be worn over the bust, except merely as a support, but it should go over the hips, unless the figure be very slight."

"What is the best style of dress for a bad figure?"

"Something full, which will cover the defect. A plain 'princess' is becoming for an ordinary figure. A good figure looks best in a perfectly plain dress."

"How many can wear a plain dress?"

"About five out of twenty. Of course, any one can if she will consent to be built up."

"Was there as much lacing twenty years ago?"

"There has always been lacing since my day. I don't think the tight lacing that there is so much talk of hurt as bad as the high-heeled shoes. Fashion in foot-wear has made more weak spines than lacing ever has. There is nothing that ruins a figure like a high-heeled, narrow-toed shoe."

"Do you think the athletic craze has anything to do with the present shape?"

"Not yet. Neither that nor the esthetic rage has run long enough to make any change. I think the next generation will be benefited by these outside sports. If parents would only see the necessity of watching their growing children the next generation would need fewer pads and panniers. Men talk about tight lacing and its being the cause of the American woman's ill-health, but I don't believe it. The English women, who are very healthy, lace much tighter. I think the stooping position children get into at school, doubling up their spines and compressing growing organs, and the long flights of stairs they climb, are more to be censured.

"DID THIS TURKEY WEAR A SHIRT?"

"What does this mean, Mrs. Wilkins?" asked the new boarder. "Did this turkey wear a shirt?"

"What do you mean, Mr. Brown?" returned the landlady severely.

"Here is a shirt button in the stuffing, and I merely wanted to know if it belonged to the bird," said Brown, carefully placing the button at the side of his plate.

"Now I think of it, Mr. Brown, it may be all right; I bought that turkey already dressed."

THE ROAD TO MORAL WRECK.

It is not always gambling nor the haste to be rich that leads to moral wreck. It is much more often the mere moral restlessness that is a part of the spirit of this age. Contentment, obedience, a religious devotion to one's daily duty, are no longer looked upon as necessary virtues. On the contrary, these things are rather spurned as incompatible with modern aspirations. Every man's duty is to get into some other man's place, to "rise in life" and to be, or appear to be, something other than he is. The rich man must make more riches; the poor man must have more than he has earned; we must all be moving about in a state of constant unrest and discontent, amid which the old notions of religion, virtue, honor, contented industry and domestic simplicity have no chance to exist. When every man is reaching out for something that does not belong to him—whether in position, in wages, in corporate privileges or public office—it is no great wonder that so many take the shortest way and transfer their employer's money to their own pockets.

CHARACTER IN A MOUSTACHE.

There is lots of character in a moustache—an immense amount of bad character in many of them—not, perhaps, in the moustache proper, but in its surroundings. One does not realize how necessary is this aid to male beauty until a moustache wearer sheds the ornament. Then we see the mouth and chin in all its unpleasantness, and most of them are unpleasant. The mouth is said to indicate character more thoroughly than any other feature. It is odd, then that men so often give themselves away. Society men—by men I compliment the supper cubs and cane suckers—like society women run in grooves. If one simpleton returned from the east leaves his beauty with the barber, our resident simpletons rush to their barbers, and we have a colony of nude-liped youths in no time. With most of them, their face is not their fortune, so a trifle more or less of ugliness does not matter. The only class who guard their moustaches as carefully as a mother a sleeping infant are actors. It is money in their purse.

WHERE THE UMBRELLA WAS.

"Good morning, professor," said the landlady, sweetly, as that individual entered the breakfast room and took charge of all the morning papers.

"I hadn't noticed it, madame," replied the professor, seating himself on the papers to keep the other boarders from getting them.

"Hadn't noticed what?" asked Mrs. Fog.

"That it is a good morning," retorted the professor amiably. "It's raining cats and dogs out. Where's my umbrella, Mrs. Fog? I left it in the corner of my room on going out yesterday morning, and it's not there now. I can't understand why it is that the morality, integrity, the—the common every day honesty of life seem to disappear when one gets within the portals of this house. Where, madam, I demand to know—where is my umbrella?"

"Where!" replied the lady, striking a high G and pouring hot water over her oatmeal in her excitement. "Where? Why, the owner came here yesterday and recovered it!"

And the silence that came over the meal was so hard that no one could break it.

WHAT PLEASED HER MOST.

A damsel from the wilds had the good fortune to marry a young ranchman who had suddenly become rich. A bridal tour of all the large Eastern cities was planned, and away they went, jubilantly happy. On their return the bride was asked if she enjoyed herself.

"Well, I should smile," was her positive reply.

"What did you think of Niagara Falls?"

"Oh, they was real nice, but I didn't care much for them."

"How do you like Washington?"

"Oh, just tolerable; the Capitol was pretty fine, but I don't take much stock in such things."

"Did you go to New York?"

"Yes, we dawdled 'roun' there a week and got tired of it. Brooklyn bridge was a good deal of a show, but I didn't see anything else I cared for much."

"Well, do tell me—what did you see that you'd like most to see again? What pleased you more than anything else?"

The young bride's face brightened visibly, her eyes twinkled joyfully as she said: "Well, when we were in Chicago we went to a dime museum, and we see there a calf with two heads and two tails; it was born that way; I tell you, it beats everything we ever heard of; John and me, we've both said many a time since that we'd rather see that calf agin than all Washington and New York and Niagry Falls put together; it just beat all!"

HOME LIFE IN THE COUNTRY.

Too many of our farmers' homes are merely so in name. They are not homes—only places to stay. Do not think we are insinuating that you must rush right off and spend $1,000 in buying new furniture, carpets and an organ. Not at all. One of the "homeyest" places we ever saw was one that was entirely innocent of any extravagance in that line. Three hundred dollars would have covered the cost of all the furniture in the house; but it was a place we always enjoyed visiting. The head of the family was always jolly and ready to take a hand in a game, and his nine children, always hearty and full of fun, did not dare to be out in the evenings. The girls did sewing and knitting as they grew old enough, and the boys were often found "making something," but no evening passed that some one did not have something to read to the others—an anecdote or a story—something to instruct. But the main secret of their happiness, if it was a secret, lay in the fact that worrying and fretting were banished. One growler or fretter will spoil a whole family. Fathers, mothers, don't allow a fault-finding spirit to spoil the pleasure of your family circle. Don't indulge in it yourselves. Have as cosy and comfortable a home as you can afford, but don't mourn over what you have not. Rather rejoice in what you have and be thankful.

NATIONAL REFORM.

"Do you wish your Senators to be paupers?" is the reported saying of one of the numerous millionaire members of the upper branch of the National Legislature.

No sir!

The people want nothing of the kind, and furthermore, there is not the slightest reason why any man should be a pauper on $5,000 a year, the proper and legal salary of a member of Congress.

The people have no objection to a rich man being in the Senate, provided, his wealth has been honestly obtained, and never used for corrupt political purposes.

Pauper Senators are not wanted, but honest, competent and patriotic Senators.

Senators who would rather lose a right arm than, either directly or indirectly, involve themselves in the guilt of procuring an election through the instrumentality of money.

Senators who would spurn the ignomy of sitting in that once august body as either the co-partners, or feed representatives of grasping and unprincipled monopolists.

Senators who possess brains sufficient to know and to discharge the duties of statesmanship, and patriotism enough to care for the public good in preference to personal gain.

A Senate of the United States such as it was, on the score of personal character and ability, when Clay, Calhoun, Webster, Marcy, Cass, Southard, Preston, Crittenden, and the like sat there, is now the urgent demand of well directed REFORM.

SOUND THE ALARM.

If the present vicious and dishonorable system of securing Senatorial and other positions of high governing influence, through the corrupt outlay of money, is not speedily and effectually stopped, a fatal wound will be inflicted upon the great American Republic.

Millionaires and monopolists would laugh down, if they could, the idea of danger from the power of political wealth, combined for the attainment and maintenance of mercenary designs.

But they cannot.

It is the truth of history, and accounts for the downfall of many a fair national edifice.

The Republic of the United States is not the first Government of the kind the world ever saw.

Long centuries before that heroic navigator, Columbus, dared the peril of unknown seas in quest of a realm, which proved to be this continent, grand Republics had flourished, and through infidelity to virtue and civic freedom, had fallen into irretrievable ruin.

Aye, there were grand Republics in those early days, but, when personal ambition trampled patriotism under foot, and the might of ill-gotten wealth procured for unworthy men places of ruling power, down, down they went, and upon their ruins arose the merciless form of despotism.

History will repeat itself.

Principles never change.

Virtue is the same to-day as it was in the palmy days of Greece and Rome.

No nationality can prosper without virtue, and without that essential prin[illegible]le practically observed, no Republic [illegible]

[illegible]y, corruptly swayed the [illegible] Rome virtue fled, and [illegible]ts in the American [illegible] to be bought for [illegible] the people of the [illegible]lly regardless of partisanship, to seriously consider the growing encroachments of a moneyed oligarchy and to apply the remedy.

A jury of twelve men were secured on Monday last, to try the next of the New York boodle Aldermen, John O'Neil.

New Jersey can no longer properly be called "the State of Camden and Amboy." She has turned the tables on her railroad companies, and she now rides the elephant she used to carry.

The tail of the English lion was twisted in the U. S. Senate last Monday, and the retaliatory fishery bill passed by a vote of 41 to 1. Warlike speeches were made by Messrs. Frye, Ingalls and others.

Chief Justice Beasley, on Monday last sentenced Jas. F. Titus, convicted of the murder of Tillie Smith at Hackettstown, to be hung on Thursday, April 14. The prisoner asserted his innocence of the crime. His counsel have filed bills of exceptions, and will apply to the Chancellor for a writ of error.

A lot of Pinkerton's detectives have been quartered about the docks in Jersey City for some time past, ostensibly to prevent a riot of the coal handlers, who are on strike. A number of boys got to snowballing these officers on Thursday last, and one of them, Patrick Sheedy, drew his revolver and shot Thomas Hogan, one of the boys, killing him instantly. Great indignation prevails in Jersey City over the wanton deed.

Never in the history of the State of New Jersey have the people been so disgraced and humiliated as they have been the past two weeks by the action of the Republican minority of the State Legislature, aided and abetted by traitors from the Democratic ranks. What justification can the Republican majority of the Senate have for not organizing that body, and what reasonable excuse can the Democratic bolter, Baird, and the two labor members of the House, have for their affiliation with the Republicans, and in opposing the election to the United States Senate of such a man as Leon Abbett, who has justly earned the right to that title and distinction by his unswerving devotion and aid to the Democratic party? That the action of the Republican Senators is revolutionary and illegal, in not organizing their branch of the Legislature, is plain, while the aid given them in their action by the Democratic bolters is shameful. No such disgraceful scenes has ever before been enacted at the State's Capitol like those of the past week. An outraged public should remember this, and by their votes next November, put it beyond the power of the Republican managers to have the chance to again so flagrantly violate law and decency, by electing a Democratic majority in both branches of the Legislature.

THE LEGISLATURE.

On Tuesday last the Democrats made a move which upset the calculations of the Republican revolutionists in the Senatorial fight, making the Democrats feel more jubilant and confident and the Republicans correspondingly despondent. The Senate met at 10 a. m., and Secretary Reading called the body to order.

Senator Livingston, of Union, arose and stated that he held in his hand the credentials of Senators-elect Werts, of Morris, Baker, of Cumberland, and Edwards, of Hudson, all Democrats, and he desired that these gentlemen should be sworn in and their names be placed on the roll.

Secretary Reading said the roll-call was the first business in order.

When the roll-call had been completed, Senator Livingston renewed his request.

Senator Griggs at the same time moved that the organization of the Senate be postponed to Friday noon, and that the Senate adjourn to that time.

Senator Moon moved that action on Senator Griggs' motion be deferred till the credentials in Senator Livingston's hands be disposed of.

Senator Griggs replied that a motion to adjourn takes precedence of all other business, and he added that his motion must first be voted down before other business could be taken up.

Senator Livingston raised the point that Senator Griggs' motion was to postpone, and that it differed from a motion to adjourn and did not take precedence.

Secretary Reading, however, took Senator Griggs' view and put that Senator's motion. It was carried by 8 to 3 (Senators Livingston, McBride and Moon.)

After the Republican majority of the Senate had refused to accept the credentials of the Democratic Senators-elect, the latter retired to a convenient part of the Chamber and proceeded to take the oath of office independently of the Republicans. The Senators-elect were William J. Edwards, of Hudson, George T. Werts, of Morris, John W. Bogert, of Bergen, and Philip P. Baker, of Cumberland. Senator-elect Werts first received the oath of office from Senator Livingston and then from Senator-elect Edwards. Senator-elect Edwards in same way was sworn in by Senator Livingston and Senator Werts; Senator-elect Bogert by Senators Edwards and Livingston; and Senator-elect Baker by Senators Livingston and Werts.

In pursuance of this oath the Senators will take part in the joint meeting to be held for the purpose of balloting for United States Senator. The same day the Democrats in caucus decided that the day fixed by law for such balloting having arrived, they should place a nominee before the Legislature. On a ballot for choice Leon Abbett received every one of the 36 votes in the caucus. Speaker Baird had not gone in caucus, and Assemblyman Throckmorton and Senators Chase, Chattle and McBride were also absent. Subsequently in the House, a ballot was taken and Leon Abbett received 30 votes. The Republicans made no nominations and voted for no one. Neither did Speaker Baird or the two labor men (Donohue and Carroll.)

At noon on Wednesday thirty-nine Democratic Senators and Assemblymen met in joint meeting and balloted for United States Senator. Speaker Baird and Senator Chattel did not meet with their colleagues. The Republicans left the chamber and refused to recognize the validity of the meeting. Assemblyman Beckwith nominated Leon Abbett, "a man who," he said, "is endeared to the working Democrats, and who, if his election as Senator was left to the people, would have an incalculable majority." Assemblyman Throckmorton, of Monmouth, declared that he did not think the Legislature was yet legally organized. After counselling his fellow-Democrats to postpone further action in the matter until the Senate should organize, he placed in nomination ex-Governor Jos. D. Bedle, of Hudson. A ballot was taken and Abbett received thirty-eight votes, three short of the necessary number. Throckmorton voted for Bedle and said he would continue to do so until the interests of the Democratic party required him to change his vote. The Democrats will hold another joint meeting on Thursday and take another ballot.

New Jersey Masons.

Trenton was visited by several thousand Masons on Tuesday, the occasion being the centennial celebration of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey. There were private and public ceremonies, the latter being held in Taylor Opera House in the afternoon. Grand Master Joseph W. Congdon held a reception from 11 until 2 o'clock in Masonic Hall. Among the guests present were: E. M. L. Ehlers, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of New York; John F. Collins, District Deputy Grand Master of the Fourth Masonic District of New York; Grand Master Joseph Eichbaum; J. Simpson Africa, Senior Grand Warden; Thomas R. Patton, Grand Treasurer; Michael Nesbit, Grand Secretary; Richard Vaux and Conrad Day, Past Grand Masters, and William Sine, Grand Marshal of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. Gov. Green and ex-Gov. Abbett were at the public exercises together. These consisted of an address of welcome by Grand Master Congdon, an oration by Past Grand Master Hamilton Wallis, and the singing of a Masonic ode written by the Rev. Henry Vehslage, Past Grand Master. In the evening there was a banquet in Taylor's Opera House, which 250 Masons attended. The theatre was prettily decorated with palms and laurels. The table decorations were purple as far as possible, that being an appropriate Grand Lodge color. The toasts were responded to in the following order: "Our Country," Gov. Robert S. Green; "Grand Lodge of New Jersey," Past Grand Master Pembrook, of New Jersey; "Grand Lodge of the World," Past Grand Master Edward J. Simmons, of New York; "Our Guests," Past Grand Master Richard Vaux, of Pennsylvania; "The Occasion We Celebrate," Past Grand Deputy Senior Warden J. C. Fitzgerald; "The Moral Culture of Freemasonry," Grand Chaplain C. D. Shaw, D. D.; "The Social Influences of Freemasonry," Charles T. McClenachan, of New York; "The Mysteries of Freemasonry," John T. Collins, Deputy Grand Master, of New York.

The postal law makes it larceny to take a newspaper and refuse to pay for it. A newspaper in Illinois recently brought suit against forty-three men who would not pay their subscriptions, and obtained judgment in each for the full amount of the claim. Of these, twenty-eight men made affidavit that they owned no more property than the law allowed them, thus preventing attachments. Then they, under the decision of the Supreme Court, were arrested for petty larceny, and bound over in the sum of $300 each. All but six gave bonds, while six went to jail.

Hon. Frank Hurd, of Ohio, lost his seat in Congress through too much eloquence in behalf of Tariff legislation. He is very anxious for an extra session, so that the Tariff fight may be brought on as soon as possible. He asserts that public interest in the subject is growing stronger. A few years ago when he talked tariff no one would listen. Not one man in a hundred cared the cent rap about the tariff. Now he says he gets letters every day asking him to deliver lectures on the subject. He thinks the Administration will hardly dare to let the Treasury surplus go on piling up until next year. "Tariff reform has got to come," said Mr. Hurd, "and the sooner the question is met the better. Let us have an extra session."

Dover is to have water works. A company has been formed with a capital of $60,000, and work will be commenced at once.

When a man rebels against, and abandons his political principles, there is very little of the man left, and that little needs watching.

The Grand and Petit Jurors of the United States District Court have been drawn, and will meet, the former on Tuesday, February 1, and the latter on the following Tuesday.

A matrimonial cyclone is now sweeping through this fair land, and is striking the long, the short, the slim, the thick, the young and the old in its onward course. Who'll be the next?

You can't tell by a man's house the size of his happiness. We have seen a house with thirty rooms in it that was the home of perdition, and one of only two rooms that was the home of heaven.

Mark Twain said recently, when asked whether it was true that he proposed to start a newspaper in Hartford: "Heavens, no! I shall never start a newspaper so long as I can buy three for less than it costs to have my boots blacked."

A pumpkin grew to weigh 250 pounds at Newburg, N. Y., by being fed on milk. One of the roots was allowed to rest in a basin of milk, and it consumed a pint of the liquid each day. It strikes us as rather an expensive way to raise pumpkins.

According to latest revised returns the Prohibition vote in twenty States increased from 135,752 in 1884, to 268,769 in 1886—or nearly one hundred per cent. No wonder that Mr. Blaine is striving desperately to kindle a back-fire with Labor vote for 1888.

Attorney-General Stockton sets at rest all controversy about making him Chancellor by saying that he is not a candidate for the Chancellorship, and would not accept it. He is very well satisfied with his present position, which pays a salary of seven thousand dollars per annum.

The Patterson Guardian thinks that the necessity of building a new insane asylum or enlarging the old ones could probably be obviated by legislation requiring all incurable inmates to be cared for by the several counties and reserving the State institutions for the treatment of hopeful cases only. But who is to decide what cases are hopeful, and would not some terrible errors be made?

The international union of bricklayers and masons at Washington adopted resolutions declaring that "we do not affiliate with any secret organizations governed by principles or views advanced by socialists, anarchists, communists or any organization opposed to sustaining the laws of our government. And the flag bearing the stars and stripes is the flag that should be recognized as the standard of all labor organizations."

With all the safeguards thrown around our mails, and they are many and ingenious, yet the last annual report of the Inspection Bureau of the Post Office Department shows that during the past year 487 Post Offices were robbed and 260 burned, 76 postal cars were burned or wrecked, 27 mail stages robbed, 7 mail passengers on their wagons robbed, 79 pouches lost, and 127 stolen, cut, or injured by falling under trains.

EDSALL'S
GREAT ANNUAL SPECIAL SALE
OF
WILL COMMENCE ON WEDNESDAY, FEB. 2nd, 1887,
AND CONTINUE THE BALANCE OF THE WEEK.
Over 100 Extra Special Bargains
Will be offered each day,—we mean "REAL BARGAINS" in such goods as Bleached and Unbleached Muslins in the "Standard Brands," so that when you look at the printed ticket on them you may be sure you are not being deceived.
So many merchants now-a-days, in writing their advertisements "beat around the bush," and instead of coming out fair and square, and mention the standard good article, will say they have something just as good, and will insist on selling some inferior, outside brand that the customer knows nothing about, at the same price that is charged for the "genuine" standard goods. We will guarantee that all the bargains we offer in this sale shall be of the very best standard Goods in the market.
There will be BARGAINS in Barnsley's Linen Table Damask, Bleached and Unbleached, Linen Towels and Napkins in great variety of styles and prices; Lonsdale and Jones's Fine Cambrics; Plaid and Checked Nainsooks; Fine Hamburg edgings and insertings; Real Torshon Laces; Cotton Trimmings; Lace Scrims, Cottage Drapery, Crochet and Marseilles Bed Spreads.
The largest assortment of Ladies' Fine Muslin Underwear ever offered this side of New York, and at lower prices.
Our sale last year created such a stir, because of the extraordinary low prices at which we sold genuine good goods, that those who attended it have not forgotten it to this day, and the many inquiries as to when we would institute another of the same order, has encouraged us to put forth greater efforts than ever; not only to make this GREAT SPECIAL SALE to come up to our previous ones, but to even surpass them.

NOTHING HIDDEN
THE MANUFACTURERS OF CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER HAVE FOR MANY YEARS MADE KNOWN TO THE PUBLIC ALL THE INGREDIENTS OF THEIR POWDER.
In these suspicious times it is not enough that manufacturers of food preparations base their claims for patronage on the simple statement that their goods are "absolutely pure." The absolute purity of a poison intensifies the baneful effects of its improper use. The absolute purity of ammonia, a drug often used in the manufacture of baking powder and in some of the powders most largely advertised, greatly increases the force of the objection made by the most eminent scientists of our day to the use of ammonia in food. This protest of the medical and chemical professions is due to the fact that ammonia—a product of decomposition—when taken into the stomach with our daily meals is exceedingly injurious.
Hence the public should insist upon knowing what all food compounds contain and ALL that they contain. Let the edict go forth that no article intended for use in the preparation of our daily bread shall receive public support unless the manufacturers' formula be published. Then shall we have less imposition practiced upon a confiding public, and as a result less injury to the public health.
Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is made only of strictly pure Grape Cream of Tartar, Bicarbonate of Soda, and a little wheat flour, the latter to preserve the strength of the powder; nothing else whatever.

An Efficient Remedy
In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of these dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

THE Borough Council meets in regular meeting, next Friday evening.

A PHOTOGRAPHER has been busy the past few days in taking views of prominent stores and other buildings in our city.

MR JOHN H. TIER has filled his large ice houses with a beautiful crop of pure ice. The second crop, or freezing, now affords excellent skating on Tier's lake.

STREET COMMISSIONER ANGLEMAN started the needed work of cleaning North avenue of its coating of mud on Monday last. Don't let the good work lag, George, but clean her up.

MONDAY evening next at the residence of Charles Potter, Esq., the Young W. C. T. U., will hold a reception. The programme will be a musical one, with talent selected from the membership of the organization.

THE crossing sweepers are often a nuisance—standing directly in the way of pedestrians to solicit "a penny to buy a pair of shoes." If you give to everyone that asks, it would cost less to hire a hack and ride home.

SPEAKING of "The Lady or the Tiger"—who is to blame for the fact that every time a thaw sets in the railroad bridges drip grease and filthy water over the bonnets and clothes of those who pass beneath. The Street Commissioner or the Committee on Streets?

THE Plainfield District Telegraph Co., of which ex-Councilman Goddard is resident manager, will give estimates for the furnishing of electrical apparatus for convenience and protection in your houses or business places. The work is guaranteed upon completion, and if desired it will be kept in order by the year.

PUBLIC meetings for the consideration of the question of water works and sewage, and the education of the people on the subject, are the first steps to be taken in the direction contemplated. There's no hurry. Possibly we'll be the healthier for a year or two yet with the pumps, cisterns and Health Board we now possess.

SINCE we stated in our last issue the probability of Commissioner McClure's retirement from the Fire Board, his friends have been strongly urging him to alter his determination and continue in the service of the city's interests. We shall be glad to hear for Plainfield's sake that he has consented to remain a Commissioner.

THE toboggan craze is likely to produce something of benefit to the feminine world, in the shape of proper head-gear. Pretty hoods are now made, which protect the head and give no excuse for the ill-favored bonnets which expose the forehead to the severest cold. The new hoods are very becoming, and may supplant all other forms of head-gear for Winter weather.

THE Law and Ordinance committee of the Council is instructed to draw up an amendment to the snow and ice ordinance requiring the side walks to be kept clean from the fence line to the curb. It strikes us the authorities had better use their powers to keep a pathway clear, before adopting additional requirements. We want official acts, not legislative acts, in this particular.

THE Uniform Division of the Plainfield Knights of Pythias that recently held the grand industrial exhibition in this city, has named itself the "Crescent Division" in honor of the building where its efforts were so successful. The uniforms have been ordered at a cost of over a thousand dollars, and when completed it is probable the Division will give a grand ball in The Crescent and show the public how handsome they look.

ALTHOUGH "Met By Chance" at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, has been drawing large houses in spite of the manner in which it has been scored for its insipidity, Miss Dauvray herself has been greatly disappointed with it as a whole—artistically and financially. She will withdraw it to-morrow evening for a better play, and "Masks and Faces" is to follow with the full strength of the company, the addition of Mr. John Howson, and new scenery.

NEXT Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, of this city, will present for the benefit of their organization, and the benefit of their patrons, the temperance drama of "Three years in a Man Trap," a companion picture to "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." Mr. W. W. Wood has been specially engaged to interpret his great character of "Harry Glenn," and Mr. W. E. Schermerhorn as "Tom Lloyd." They will be supported by a strong cast of local talent. The scenic effects are to be quite unusual.

THURSDAY evening, Jan. 20th, about forty couple, (prepared for a jolly good time) agreeably surprised Messrs. Lutkins & Hummer at their residence Cor. Somerset street and Linden avenue, by taking possession of the house and setting the music going, (and of course their feet kept time with it) and merriment reigned supreme until the small hours. The refreshments would please the most fastidious appetite. Both the surprised and surprisers were fully satisfied over the large amount of enjoyment obtained in those few hours.

PLAINFIELD scored, Tuesday night, with the cheers, calls and calliopes of State cyclers. As the queens of society give "teas," high and low, so the bicycle clubs give "smokers"—but never low. The Plainfield wheelmen entertained members of its fraternity from other New Jersey clubs, Tuesday evening, right royally. Tables set in the wheel-room of the Club house were loaded with refreshments, pipes tied with the club-colors were filled with fragrant tobacco, and a long evening full of enjoyment resulted from the efforts of the Committee—Messrs. A. L. C. Marsh, E. Louis Walz and A. G. Blevin.

THE First Annual Ball of the American Club will be given at the Casino rink, this evening, and a success is already promised by the advance sale of tickets. The order of dance includes thirty-two numbers, the music of which will be lead by Prof. Finnee. There will be a fine supper provided, and every arrangement made for the satisfaction of everybody. Mr. Charles F. Meyers is to be the Floor Manager, and Messrs. John O'Reilly, George Reed, and William E. Scribner his assistants. The Reception Committee will consist of Messrs. F. Casey, F. Cullen, E. J. Fahlen, J. Evans, E. F. Maxwell, R. Kaling and G. [illegible].

ONE HUNDRED houses are now building in this city, and as fast as completed others are commenced.

MR. FRANK TAFT, who will officiate at the public organ concert in Crescent avenue church, next Friday evening, is the organist of the largest instrument in the City of Churches.

IN a notice published elsewhere, the carpenters and joiners of the city—members of the "Brotherhood of America"—resolve, that on and after the first day of April next, they shall demand $2.75 for a day's work of nine hours.

The famous slugger, John L. Sullivan, broke his right wrist in a boxing match with Patsey Cardiff, last week. The champion pluckily finished the six rounds and his man, with his one good arm. John is still champion.

DR. DUPREE is now at the City Hotel, but don't forget that he remains this week only. Corn and bunion sufferers must see him before six o'clock Saturday afternoon, or they will miss the comfort of having sound feet to walk on.

IT is expected that by next week at least five hundred incandescent lamps throughout the city will be connected up, and the service will then begin to run constantly. The current will thereafter be turned on from four o'clock in the afternoon until daylight of the next morning.

THERE is every promise that Mme. Modjeska will be welcomed by the full house she deserves, this (Thursday) evening. To accomodate a large number of the Music Hall patrons, who desire to be present at a great society event to follow the play, the performance will begin at 7:45 o'clock.

A MAN must be hard to suit if the weather has failed to satisfy him during the past week. Sunday the thermometer averaged sixty-four above, in the shade, and has since rested at almost every point below that. We have had Spring, Summer and Autumn since last Saturday, and plenty of Winter to come.

WE would call the attention of our delinquent neighbors over-the-brook to the notice of their tax collector, published elsewhere, in which Mr. Spencer promises, like an active and efficient officer, to record as a lien on the property all its unpaid taxes remaining after next Monday.

THERE were no bounding Arabs, bell ringers, vanishing ladies or other variety performers in Haverly's combination that performed at Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week, but the audience present was treated with a genuine, old-fashioned negro-minstrel show, that was as fresh as possible and as satisfactory as could be desired.

MR. FREDERICK PRESTON of "Church of Our Father," Brooklyn, is the artist who will disclose the melodious tones and beautiful effects of the new Congregational organ, at the concert to be given Thursday evening, Feb. 17th. As we have already stated, Mme. Lasar-Studwell will be the soprano of the occasion, but the others who will take part we are not now at liberty to announce.

A STAG RECEPTION was given at No. 4 East Fifth street, Monday evening, to about thirty invited guests, and a jolly time resulted from the efforts of Mr. U. B. Wooley to manage a successful affair. Messrs. Elmer Runyon and S. T. Barnes, with others, contributed the vocal part of the entertainment, and Mr. H. W. Patten lead the humorists.

VALENTINE UEZINGER, carpenter, was at work on Harry Moore's new house, Wednesday afternoon. The scaffold gave way and he fell to the ground, a distance of thirty feet. In his descent he struck on another scaffold, which helped to break the force of his fall. He was helped to his feet by Mr. Gideon Barnes, and strange to relate no bones were broken and he was able to walk home.

THE "Plainfield Gesang und Turn Verein" are raising by subscription the sum of $7,000 to be used for the purposes of purchasing the lot on Somerset street, of which we spoke some weeks ago, and the erection thereon of a suitable building for society meetings, gymnastic and dramatic exercises, singing, teaching of the German language and other purposes of the consolidated Saengerbund and Turn Verein. Over one thousand dollars has already been pledged.

AND now a "Macy" or a "Wannamaker" establishment is to be constructed. Edsall has taken a twelve-year lease of the premises he now occupies, and will extend them seventy-five feet deeper. The basement of this extension will also be above ground and lighted from rear and side windows. It will be stocked with carpets, oil-cloths and upholstery goods. A handsome new front, a cash railway over head, and a number of other improvements will be added to the enlarged quarters on the ground floor.

THE managers of the W. C. T. U., Course of Entertainments announce that now is the last opportunity to purchase course tickets for the remaining entertainments. Such tickets with reserved seats can be obtained at Reynolds' pharmacy at one dollar each, entitling the holder to attend the concert of next Tuesday evening, and the following two entertainments. This, of course, includes Gen. Lew Wallace's appearance at Music Hall, Tuesday evening, Feb 15th, when he will read selections from his own novel, "Ben Hur."

EVERY license at present in force, granting permission to sell spirituous and fermented liquor in the city of Plainfield, expires on the first day of February. Consequently, as the Council has no designated date of meeting prior to the regular meeting of Feb. 7th, and as it is not probable that a quorum could be secured even should a special meeting be called to reconsider the action refusing licenses for the coming year—after noon of Tuesday next not a glass of liquor as a beverage can be sold in Plainfield. That is, legally.

THE public is awaiting (but it will need to be patient) a report from the Committee on Streets regarding the latest petition for a right to construct a railway through certain streets of the city. The motive power is to be anything but steam, the petitioners promise to complete the work in six months, and the fare shall not exceed five cents. The city needs it, and the Chairman of the Laws Committee has all the ability necessary to draw up an ordinance that will protect the interests of the community in the matter.

Next Tuesday Evening's Concert.

The Ladies of the W. C. T. U. have arranged a vocal and instrumental concert to be given at Reform Hall, Tuesday evening of next week, as the fourth of this season's series of entertainments. The artists who will take part are all new to us, but the programme as published in full on the opposite page of this issue, promises a most pleasing event. There are soli for soprano, tenor and bass, violinist and pianist. Also a vocal trio. Miss Forbes is a violinist we have heard highly spoken of, and the talents of the other artists are assured. Reserved seats are now on sale at Reynolds' pharmacy.

The Bicycle Club Fair.

The committee having in charge the preliminary arrangements for the fair to be given by the Plainfield Bicycle Club, has decided on the evening of Monday, Feb. 21st, and the afternoon and evening of Feb. 22d, Washington's Birthday, as the dates. Secretary Herbert Stover, Chairman of the Committee, says: "We are going to make this fair a financial success, and an event in every way unequalled in the history of the Club. The ladies—sisters and otherwise of the members—are taking an active interest, and will contribute attractive articles for the tables as well as their attractive selves behind them."

The "Y" Social.

Mr. C. Potter has kindly offered his house for the "Y" Social, January 31st. All young gentlemen favored with an invitation will be most welcome. Any young lady or honorary member, who has been overlooked in sending invitations, will please inform the committee in charge at once.

MISS EMMA P. MCGEE,
MISS NETTIE L. FRENCH.
Committee.

Reunion Meeting.

An interesting reunion meeting will be held in Reform Hall next Sunday afternoon at four o'clock by the W. C. T. U. and Warren Mission. The services will be conducted by Seely Edsall and the music in charge of the Dunham Choristers. Brief interesting addresses will be made by a number of Christian workers of the various denominations. The friends of these interests and the public generally are invited to be present.

Edsall's Great Special Sale.

Edsall's great annual special sale will commence next Wednesday, Feb. 2d, and continue the balance of the week. Over one hundred extra special bargains, mostly in white goods, will be offered, and no effort has been spared to make this sale equal if not surpassing any of the previous ones of this popular house. The extensive list of bargains published in another part of this paper is interesting to the general public, especially at this season of the year, when goods named there are in demand. Encourage home enterprise and patronize Edsall.

A Rare Musical Treat.

The organ recital, by Mr. Frank Taft, referred to in last week's issue, will be given on Friday evening, February 4th, at eight o'clock in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, under the auspices of the Young People's Association. As no tickets of admission are to be issued, an opportunity will be offered everyone to hear one of the most skillful and enjoyable organists of the day. Mr. Taft being quite young, took a very modest part in the opening concert of the organ in September last, but gave great delight to the entire audience. Assisted by members of the choir of the church, Mr. Taft's selections will be varied but popular and meritorious in style. It will be an unusual musical feast. The following is the programme:

1.	Offertoire, D	Batiste.
2.	a. Slumber Song (by Kucken)	Taft.
	b. Fugue, G minor	Bach.
3.	Vocal
4.	Concert Fantasie	Lux.
5.	Overture, "La Muette de Portici,"	Auber.
6.	Vocal
7.	a. Bridal Song	Jensen.
	b. Gavotte, "Mignon,"	Thomas.
8.	Vocal
9.	Theme and Variations, A flat	Thiele.

No Water Works for the Borough.

The Mayor and all the members of the Borough Council were present at a meeting held last Friday evening to further consider the ordinance giving Norman & Co., a franchise for the erection of water works in North Plainfield to supply its citizens with water for domestic and manufacturing purposes and the extinguishment of fires. The ordinance was taken up from its beginning, and a number of amendments offered and adopted before it was voted that further reading be suspended. Upon an expression of his opinion by Corporation Counsel Jackson, that in the absence of legislative authority the Council could not grant an exclusive right in the making of contracts, the word "exclusive" was stricken out—Councilman Thickstun voting against such action. Councilman Arnold offered an amendment to do away entirely with cement pipe of any size. It was adopted—Councilman Riker voting in the negative—and thus was sounded the death-knell of the ordinance. Councilman McCutchen moved that further consideration be indefinitely postponed, and read a request, signed by numerous residents and property owners in the Borough, that further action be deferred. Mr. McCutchen said that such petition emphasized his judgment regarding the expediency of any final action in the matter at present, and also as to public opinion in the same relation. A vote on the resolution, seconded by Councilman Arnold, resulted in a tie: Ayes—Arnold, McCutchen and Nisler; Nays—Riker, Thickstun and Weaver. The Mayor then cast his deciding vote in favor of indefinite postponement.

Obituary.

Mr. Charles S. West, of this city, died at his residence on Madison avenue, Sunday evening, of Brights Disease, after a lingering illness. He passed away quietly, and although his death was not immediately expected, he had prepared himself and his family for its coming. He was one of the most earnest and active members of the Trinity Reformed church, and in its early struggles had borne on his shoulders, with one or two others, the whole burden of its support. He was twice elected a member of the City Council, and during his terms of office was deeply and specially interested in the care and comfort of the city's poor. He had not an enemy, and all who knew him mourn his loss in entire sincerity. His funeral took place at Trinity Reformed church, Wednesday morning, and was largely attended. The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond officiated, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Wells, of Brooklyn, a cousin of Mrs. West's, who added his testimony to the pure and righteous character of the dead man's life. The choir joined in appropriate music.

The pall-bearers were Mayor J. H. Van Winkle, ex-Councilman C. D. Wadsworth, Dr. G. W. Endicott, Major W. D. W. Miller, F. L. Church, J. D. Handren, T. S. Smith and E. B. Clark. The remains were taken to Westfield for interment until the receiving vault at Hillside Cemetery, this city, shall be completed, when they will there rest, as requested by deceased, till such time as a plot therein selected can be made ready. He leaves a wife and four sons.

The following were adopted by the Common Council as a tribute to his memory, at its meeting of Monday evening:

WHEREAS, The Common Council of the City of Plainfield have learned with sorrow of the death of Chas. S. West, formerly one of their number from the Third Ward; and WHEREAS, they desire to join with his many friends in paying a tribute to his memory; therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of Charles S. West, the city of Plainfield loses a worthy and exemplary citizen, one who while engaged in the duties of a Councilman brought to that office a rare judgment and a never-tiring zeal; one who at all times in his every day life reflected credit upon the community in which he lived, who was ever active in all good works, and in the Christian world a bright and shining light, leaving behind him a memory that all will delight to cherish and honor.

Resolved, That the Common Council extend to the bereaved family their sincere sympathy, trusting that in this dark hour they will receive the consolation that ever comes from a contemplation of the wisdom of an over ruling Providence.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon the minutes and that a copy be forwarded to the family by the clerk.

The Newark Journal has collected several hundred dollars by popular subscription for a monument to General McClellan, but experience attests the inadequacy of such movements beyond a limited extent. The dead hero was not only a great soldier but also a Governor of New Jersey, and this State should make a liberal appropriation for a suitable memorial. In that way every citizen would contribute his mite and the monument represent the whole body of the people.

The Piece-Price System A Failure.

Supervisor Henry L. Butler of the State Prison, does not consider the results of the year's experience with the piece-price system as at all encouraging to those who said it would prevent further competition with honest labor. "Under the piece-price system," he says, "not only is there a diminished income from the daily earnings of the men, but there is also a largely increased production. Naturally the contractors bid as low as possible for the product of the prisoners, hence the prison authorities are necessarily compelled, in order to get a reasonable return for the labor, to promote by every means in their power an increased outcome. Under the contract system it was different. The officials were then content merely to preserve order in the shops, leaving the contractor to wrestle as best he could with the question of production. Now the order is reversed. The contractor only pays for what he gets, and the State is compelled to do the forcing. The natural consequence is increased production at lessened cost, and necessarily a severer competition with the products of free labor."

Council Proceedings.

The Council met in adjourned meeting, Monday evening, with President Marsh in the chair and all present except Councilman Taylor. Petitions for Scavenger licenses were received from Mrs. Jno. Brown and Jones & Co., and granted. Another request for a franchise to run a street railroad through the city—to be completed within six months after the granting of the privilege—was referred. Petition against granting a license for the sale of liquor on Third street, was read and referred. A communication from His Honor the Mayor, called the attention of the Council to the necessity of an amendment to the snow and ice ordinance, requiring the sidewalks to be kept clean from the fence line to the curb. The Lamps Committee reported it had no electric light at its disposal to locate at Third and Liberty streets, and recommended the lighting of a gasolene lamp at that point. This was adopted, and also the recommendation that gasolene lamps be located and lighted at three places designated on West Fourth street. Councilmen Dunham and Bowers of the License committee, presented a majority report against the granting of a license to sell liquor to James Muldowney, and Chairman Wilbur of the same committee presented a minority report in favor. On motion of Mr. Dumont, both reports were tabled, and the License committee reported as correct the applications of J. H. Force, Chas. Goodman, Jacob Bittman, Charles Smith, James Conneely, John Rafferty, Jos. B Miller, F. Caspar and P. Day; and as incorrect the applications of John H. Staats, E. P. Thorn and Joseph Sullivan. The application of Mr. Staats was referred to a special committee consisting of Messrs. Cox, Cuthbert and Dumont, for examination as to its regularity. The applications on which the License committee reported unanimously, were then taken up. Mr. Voorhees moved that Mr. Muldowney's be added to the list, but the motion was lost—Messrs. Carey, Simpson, Voorhees and Wilbur voting in the affirmative. The applications of Jas. H. Force, Jos. B. Miller, F. Caspar, Jno. Rafferty, Chas. Smith, P. Day, C. Goodman, James Conneely and J. Bittman were refused by the following vote: Affirmative—Bowers, Dumont, Wilbur; Negative—Carey, Cox, Cuthbert, Dunham, Marsh, Simpson, Voorhees. The application of Mr. E. P. Thorn was ordered returned to the applicant for correction. The corrected application of Jos. Sullivan was received and referred. On motion of Mr. Dunham the Laws committee was instructed to draw up an ordinance requiring the numbering of the houses, and to present it at the next meeting of the Council. A committee consisting of Messrs. Bowers, Dumont and Dunham presented resolutions of respect to the memory of ex-Councilman West, recently deceased, as published elsewhere. They were unanimously adopted by a rising vote, and it was also resolved that the Council attend the funeral in a body. Messrs. Bowers, Dunham and Cuthbert were appointed a committee to attend to such arrangements. The Council then adjourned.

Personals.

The most mistaken individual in the world is the man who thinks the public will miss him after he is dead, or out of office.

President Marsh delivered an eloquent and feeling tribute to the memory of the late ex-Councilman West, before the Council meeting on Monday evening.

Mr. Alonzo DeCamp and family have removed from this city to Burkville, Va., where Mr. DeCamp has purchased a large plantation and intends making it his future home.

At the annual session of the Grand Division, Sons of Temperance, held at Trenton, Wednesday, Mrs. W. R. Mattox of this city was elected Grand Sentinel for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Elston Marsh has sufficiently improved to slightly relieve the anxiety felt by her family and friends a week ago, but has not so far recovered good health as to be entirely out of danger.

The funeral of the late George Demens was held at his residence on Elm place, last Friday afternoon. The Rev. K. P. Ketcham officiated, and a large attendance of the friends of the deceased was present.

An unusual effect was produced by the appearance of ex-Mayor Hockfellow in the Council room, Monday evening. As he entered, the crowd that filled the seats outside the railing, broke forth in hearty applause.

Mr. John Whitenack, registry clerk in the post office, is confined to his bed by malarial fever. The absence of this faithful official necessitates increased laborious duties upon the other clerks of the office.

Counsellor McClure will leave in a few days for a visit to Canada. It is probable, however, that the writ of certiorari recently served upon the Fire Board of which he is a member, has nothing to do with the case.

Mr. and Mrs. U. B. Crane will celebrate the thirteenth anniversary of their wedding day, Thursday evening, Feb. 10th, at their residence on East Fourth street. They will entertain a number of friends in honor of the occasion.

Mr. Daniel S. Roberts, the North avenue livery merchant, has so far improved in health as to be able to be about his place of business. "Uncle Dan" has the best wishes of a host of friends for his ultimate speedy recovery of lost health.

Miss Viola Hardy and Mr. Andrew Wilson were united in marriage by the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut at the bride's residence, corner Vine street and Park place, North Plainfield, Wednesday evening. A number of invited guests were present, and the event was a happy one.

Mrs. Caroline G. Burton, widow of the late W. E. Burton, and mother of Mrs. V. B. Hart and Mrs. R. Hassett of Crescent avenue, died at the residence of her daughters, Monday last. Funeral services were held at the same place, during yesterday morning, and attended by large numbers of friends of a long life time. Interment was private.

The coming wedding is announced of Miss Sara B. Long, daughter of Jacob Long, Esq., and Mr. S. O. Staats, to take place at the residence of the bride's parents, Craig place, North Plainfield, Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th. A reception will be given them by the groom's mother, Mrs. Hannah Staats, at her home on [illegible] street, Wednesday evening, Feb. 16th.

W. C. T. U.

A bill providing federal aid for common schools has passed the Senate of the United States of this (the 49th) Congress, and is now pending in the House.

We print two sections, that the reader may get a better idea of the amounts to be appropriated, and a part of the conditions on which the aid is to be distributed.

An act to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress: That for eight years next after the passage of this act there shall be annually appropriated from the money in the Treasury the following sums, to wit:

The first year the sum of $7,000,000, the second year the sum of $10,000,000, the third year the sum of $15,000,000, the fourth year the sum of $13,000,000, the fifth year the sum of $11,000,000, the sixth year the sum of $9,000,000, the seventh year the sum of $7,000,000, the eighth year the sum of $5,000,000; which several sums shall be expended to secure the benefits of common-school education to all the children of the school age mentioned hereafter living in the United States.

2. That such money shall annually be divided among and paid out in the several States and Territories in that proportion which the whole number of persons in each who, being of the age of ten years and over, cannot write, bears to the whole number of such persons in the United States; such computation shall be made according to the census of 1880.

Millions for the improvement of our rivers and harbors are expended from the national Treasury. Why not apply a portion of its surplus to the improvement of our future men and women? The defenses of a nation are not its armies and navies, but the character of its citizenship.

Col. A. S. Coylar of Nashville, Tenn., in a late address, in speaking of the situation, said of the South:

"Look at our condition. The property of Southern people, to the extent of $1,200,000,000, has been converted into citizens. In addition, we are taxed to pay the cost of our subjugation, a debt originally of $3,000,000,000. We are taxed to pay millions and millions in the way of pensions to the Union soldiers. Besides, our country was laid waste, and our lands reduced to half their former value. In our poverty we are feebly trying to establish a system of public schools, and the fund we raise has to be applied to both races. I say feebly. In Tennessee we have about 600,000 children that ought to be at school; 221,000 of them never see a school-house. We are nearly at the foot of illiteracy. We have 90,000 women raising families, who can neither read nor write. Now, we need this money, don't we? Who among those who fight this measure will favor doubling our State and county taxes? Can any man be found? Will a single man be elected to the Legislature who favors it? And yet all say something must be done. The system must be improved. How can it be done without money? To talk of improving our schools without Federal aid; to declare for public schools, and oppose all known means to help them along, is mockery."

Why the North needs the passage of the bill: "Every Northern industry is threatened by this cheap labor of the South—the boot and shoe maker and the iron worker, no less than the manufacturer and operative in cotton and wool. It is a question of preserving our vested capital and prosperity, and of protecting the masses of our people in reasonable hope of continuous employment, with fair pay that will enable them to supply the wants of an advanced civilization."

"We are now charged with the education of eighteen millions children and youth, who in less than ten years will be the nation. Of these, ten and one-half millions are enrolled in public or private schools, six million is the average attendance, while seven and one-half millions, or five-twelfths of the whole, are growing up in absolute ignorance of the English alphabet."—H. W. Blair.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

No report of the amount of wages paid for the manufacture of clothing leaked out last week, but expressions of doubt as to the connection of high tariff and low wages has freely been commented on, these wise-acres cannot see why the Republicans should be blamed for the perpetuation of excessive taxation—it is simply for the reason that they are hostile to any Democratic measure, the Democrats being staunch supporters of revenue reform—a policy that arrays them on the side of the masses and against the money influence brought to bear in Congress and in the Congressional elections for the continuation of protected interests and of the monopolies that have grown up with a protective system. In 1888 this plank of the Democratic platform will have another nail driven in and in the event of the failure of tariff reform, we shall command "protection" to be wiped out in entirety—which will carry the country like a Jacksonian cyclone. It you don't believe it—I do.

The burglars have arrived. Early on Friday morning the Lehigh Valley Depot building was broken open, Mr. Rupell, the agent, losing his overcoat, and the Express Company a parcel addressed to Mrs. Calhoun; they next visited the post office and store of Mr. Charles H. Ward, appropriating some small change, about nine hundred cigars, some postal cards and canned beef, also opening letters in process of transit. They left hurriedly. They were surprised and had they remained much longer it is possible one or more might have been carried out. It is a pity the undertaker was robbed of the job. It is hoped the postal authorities will take the matter in hand as it is not believed to be a difficult matter to locate "the gang" who are operating in this vicinity, and if the officials of the Borough of Dunellen had shown any exertion upon the occasion of burglaries in their midst, it is probable the parties would now be in a place where they could do no harm for some time to come. If our constables are asleep, our citizens are awake and time will tell the story.

Protection for monopolists. Considerable indignation is expressed at the expense incurred by the Sheriff in sending down about one hundred and fifty Constables to Perth Amboy at the cost of the taxpayers of Middlesex county, which is claimed to be unnecessary as no disturbance has taken place and no trouble seriously entertained as the strikers are peaceably inclined and unless some outrage is perpetrated it is believed no force of special constabulary will be required. These corporations that combine against the people and conspire to raise the price of a household necessity, are the first to threaten to hold the county responsible for any damage to their property, and the first to fight the payment of just taxes and first to cause the imposition of unjust taxation. Our assessors should see to it that every corporation is represented on the tax roll at their full value this year and the people should hold their public officers to a strict account on this score. It is another case of grinding the poor laborer down 24 cents per hour on his toil and demanding of the people not only the power but the expense of enforcing an unrighteous concession. It is a conspiracy upon the part of the coal companies which is a fit subject of indictment by the grand jury. Will they do it? We shall see. BROAD BRIM.

Senator McBride, of Sussex county, will introduce a bill in the Legislature this Winter to reduce freight charges. It is asserted that the railroad companies charge as much for carrying 100 pounds of freight from Sussex county to New York, only sixty miles, as from Chicago to New York.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

On Wednesday there was a large attendance on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club and some interesting sweepstakes indulged in.

Several interesting pigeon matches between Plainfield shooters are on the tapis, to come off in the near future, at Campbell's Club House and the Middlesex Gun Club grounds.

The Elizabeth Gun Club will hold a shooting tournament on their grounds at Elizabeth, Feb. 22d. A new L. C. Smith hammerless breech-loading gun will be shot for.

Last Saturday, Harry Campbell, of this city, shot a pigeon match with Mr. James Pilkington at Oak Point, New York, for $25 a side, twenty birds each. Harry easily won the match on his eighteenth bird. Plainfield is still ahead, and Harry is ready for the next aspirant to beat him.

There will be a shooting match at the Coffee House, between Basking Ridge and Bernardsville, N. J., on Tuesday, Feb. 22d next, commencing at 10 a. m. matches will be shot for a buck-board wagon, silver hunting-case watch and double barrel breech-loading gun, at live birds and glass balls.

Already legislative tinkering of the game laws has commenced. Why don't the sporting fraternity of the State get together and frame a bill codifying all the game and fish laws into one bill, and have it passed the present session of the Legislature? The more tinkering there is done to the present inefficient game laws only makes them worse and more inoperative.

At a regular meeting of the Middlesex Gun Club, held at Force's Hotel, Saturday evening, January 22d, considerable business was transacted. Among other business, the shooting rules were changed so that both barrels are now allowed, and the gun may be held below the arm pit. The old rules called for the gun to be held below the elbow, and only one barrel allowed. All the gun clubs of the State are changing their rules to allow the use of both barrels.

The indications are that the Grand shooting tournament to be held on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen, on the 21st, 22d, 23d, 24th and 25th of February next, will prove a success. Already some of the crack shots of the country have signified their intention of entering in the big sweepstakes proposed. The committee having the matter in charge are determined to make the occasion one of enjoyment and satisfaction to all concerned. Every accommodation will be afforded the shooters and spectators, and there is no doubt but that there will be a large attendance on the grounds each day.

OUR BREAD IN DANGER.
The Alarming Increase in Baking Powder Adulterations.

Among recent important discoveries by the food analysts is that by Prof. MOTT, U. S. Government Chemist, of large amounts of lime and alum in the cheap baking powders. It is a startling fact that of over one hundred different brands of baking powder so far analyzed, comprising all those sold in this vicinity, not one, with the single exception of Royal Baking Powder was found free from both lime and alum.

Alum is used as a substitute for cream of tartar to produce a cheap baking powder. It costs less than two cents a pound, whereas pure cream of tartar costs forty. Its effect upon the system has been ascertained to be poisonous, and overdoses have been attended with fatal results. Lime is the most useless adulterant yet found in baking powders. It is true that when subjected to heat it gives off a certain amount of carbonic acid gas, but a quicklime is left, one of the most powerful caustics known.

The effect of lime upon the delicate membranes of the stomach, intestines and kidneys, more particularly of infants and children, and especially when taken into the system day after day, and with almost every meal, is pernicious in the extreme. It is said by physicians to be one of the chief causes of indigestion, dyspepsia, and diseases of the kidneys. Chemists have found 12 per cent., or one-eighth of the weight, of some of the baking powders prominently sold in this vicinity, to be lime. The wickedness of this adulteration is apparent.

The absolute purity and wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder—now affirmed by every chemist and food analyst of prominence, and conceded by all manufacturers of other brands—arises from the exclusive use of cream of tartar which is specially refined by patent processes that totally remove the lime and all other impurities. These facilities are possessed by no other manufacturer.

Dr. W. G. TUCKER, Professor of Chemistry in the Albany, N. Y., Medical College, whose analytical work in connection with investigations of the food adulterations in the State of New York has been extensive and thorough, says of the Royal Baking Powder:

"The cream of tartar employed in its manufacture is free from the lime which is a constituent of the improperly refined cream of tartar of the market used by manufacturers of other baking powders, and of most of the substitutes therefor which enter into the composition of many powders, and in this important respect, as well as in its general purity and wholesomeness, the Royal Baking Powder is superior to any other powder which I have examined. The constituents are so proportioned as to secure the best results and yield a baking powder unequalled for purity, strength and wholesomeness."

A BROKEN HEART.

I loved Dora Merton from the first. Not only for her pretty brown eyes, golden hair and trim little figure, but for her kind heart and amiable disposition as well. You might look the world over from one end to the other and never find a girl to compare with Dora, either in point of beauty or sweetness of disposition.

Dora loved me too. She not only said so but her every action showed it; and everybody in the town said it was remarkably fortunate—being a poor young doctor—to win the love of such a girl, who could have had her pick from the best in the land, as her father was the wealthiest man in all the country round.

About this time Ralph Clayton, a wealthy merchant of high standing, met and lost his heart to Dora, and became a constant visitor at her home.

While I was assured of Dora's love and esteem I was positive that her father held quite a different opinion of me, and he soon made it evident that my attentions to his daughter were distasteful to him.

Clayton was a pompous man, some half-dozen years my senior, and on account of my inferior financial position in the world, treated me with considerable condescension.

One day we returned together from a visit to the Merton mansion; he said to me:

"Conway, I think Dora Merton one of the nicest girls I ever met. She would make a model wife, and I am going to marry her. What do you think of that?"

"Why," I replied, while the hot blood rushed to my face, "I think she will never be your wife, because she loves and is engaged to me."

"Oh, that is nothing," he coolly answered; "her father approves of me and it is very plain desires me for a son-in-law. Dora is a very obedient and dutiful girl, and I do not think the old man will have any trouble at all in gaining her consent to marry me."

I had always disliked the man; now I fairly despised him, and it was with a mighty effort that I restrained myself from striking him.

Dora had always been in the habit of meeting me when I called under a spreading maple tree some distance from the house. The next day after the conversation with Clayton she met me at the usual place. I told her what Ralph Clayton had said to me.

"Oh, Paul," she exclaimed, "I fervently pray that my father will not desire me to marry that man. For, Paul, I do not love him—I cannot love him; but if my father bids me, marry him I dare not disobey. But let me pray that he will not make any such request, for I love you Paul—only you! and I believe I should die if we were separated!"

I returned to the village feeling every way but buoyant, and passed a restless, sleepless night.

A few days after that I received a note from old Mr. Merton, also one from Dora. The old man in a few words informed me that his daughter was soon to marry Ralph Clayton, and bade me discontinue my attention to her.

Dora wrote me a tearful little note, returning the ring I had given her, and saying she loved only me, but duty and obedience to her father compelled her to renounce me and marry Mr. Clayton; that she thought it better never to see me again, and closed by beseeching me to forgive her.

Neither of them stated when the marriage was to take place, and I took no particular pains to find out. That night I entered a train bound for a distant town, where I intended to locate and strive to forget the heartless girl, as I then thought her, who had treated me so cruelly.

I did well in my new home, and thought the wound in my heart was past healing; it was not so sore as at first; time in a measure had deadened the pain.

A year and more had gone by, and in all that time I had never had any tidings from Dora.

One night as I sat alone in my office wrapped in thoughts of the past, a boy entered and handed me a telegram. I lost no time in reading it, and found it to be from old Mr. Merton and contained these words:

"Dora is very ill and desires to see you. Come immediately."

I did not stop to think over this strange message. I only knew that my darling—mine in spite of the past—was ill, probably dying, and wished to see me. I never once thought of her being another's wife. I would go to her, of course.

All the bitterness I had felt toward the poor little girl that left me, and the *love for her that I had partially smoth*ered surged over and through me with renewed vigor.

It was early morning when I started on my journey, and the darkness of night was settling over the world when I reached my destination.

My mind was busy as I walked over the old familiar pathway. I thought of the girl—now probably lying within the pale of death—who had wandered over these very fields, clinging trustingly to my arm, and uttering vows of eternal love for me. I thought, too, of the man who had come between us with his accursed gold and parted us forever, well-nigh wrecking my life and breaking the heart of poor Dora.

I was now nearing the old tryst-tree, and in the fast gathering twilight I saw a sight that sent the blood rushing through my veins like a current of fire.

Leaning against the trunk of the tree, clad in a dress of spotless white, I saw the outline of a fragile form.

It was Dora. There could be no doubt about that. I knew the graceful figure too well, and the attitude was just the same as she used to assume when she waited for me in the spot long ago.

Yes, it was Dora. She was not so ill, then, as they had thought her; she had recovered and had come out to meet me and surprise me.

Thus I thought as I rushed on to greet her. There never was such joy as mine. It was so great that I often wonder it did not kill me then and there.

I was now close to her, but she never moved.

Uttering many endearing words I seized her hands, which were clasped before her, and attempted to draw her to me.

The hands were cold—oh, so stony cold, and the great brown eyes had such a strange expression, and the face was so worn and white that I recoiled several feet.

"My God!" was my inward ejaculation, "can Dora have gone mad? Has her illness dethroned her reason?"

Suddenly she turned, and, fixing her great, star-like eyes on me, slowly said:

"Paul, your Dora is dead. You came too late—I died for love of you. Forget me never, oh, my darling. Farewell, farewell," and noiselessly approaching me she pressed her icy lips to mine and disappeared.

Overcome with horror I found myself in bed at the residence of the old village doctor under whom I had first studied.

He told me I had been found under the old maple tree in a death-like swoon; that three weeks had elapsed since then and I had been suffering from an attack of brain fever, and in all that time I had talked of nothing but Dora, ghosts and human cruelty.

When I grew strong he said:

"Old fellow, you have had a tough pull. They came pretty near killing you, as they did Dora, poor girl. She died a short time before we found you. She was calling for you all the time during her illness, and died with your name on her lips."

JOHN S. MOSBY, THE GUERILLA.

I am told that John S. Mosby, the guerilla general and ex-consul to Hong Kong, has agreed to deliver fifty lectures, for which he gets $300 a night. This will make $15,000 for fifty lectures, or for fifty utterances of one lecture, and it is by no means bad pay. "John Mosby," said an old Confederate friend of his to me, "is as poor as a church mouse and he will give these lectures because he wants the money. He came out of the war without a dollar and I don't think he saved anything abroad. His son graduated with high honors at the Virginia university recently, and I think he has other children. His beautiful and talented wife is dead and I doubt whether he has a house he can call his own.

"John S. Mosby is a slight, bent, blonde man, with a cold, gray eye, containing no more expression than a boy's marble. He talks slowly, never gets excited, and does not know what fear is. He loves his friends and hates his enemies, and he carries his fight to the death. I lately heard a story from a captain in the Union army of a scene in which Mosby took part during the war. A Union regiment had driven him, with a small body of his men, into a ten acre field, about which was a high fence. They could see him plainly within it, and they surrounded the field and began to close in upon Mosby. They wanted to capture him, as he had already killed nearly half their regiment. They closed in upon him slowly, his handful of troops still firing. They had backed him up close to a fence, and they apparently had him in their grasp, when he drove his spurs into his horse and went over the fence like a flash, and as he did so, turned in the air upon his saddle and shot a soldier through the head with his revolver. There are few such shots as Mosby, and during the war he shot to kill.

"At the close of the war Horace Greely wanted Mosby hung. He denounced him as a guerilla and murderer, and published article after article calling upon the President to hang him. Mosby fled to the mountains, and he told me he intended to fight to the last. Gen. Grant was in Washington at the time. Mrs. Mosby came here with a sucking baby on one arm and these papers of Horace Greeley under the other. She called upon Grant and laid the papers before him. Grant told her to go to her husband and to tell him that he would protect him if he would surrender; that he should go to the nearest station and give himself up and he would protect his parole as much as he would that of Gen. Lee. Mrs. Mosby carried this news to John S. Mosby in the mountains. He surrendered and Grant protected him. Mosby never forgot it, and when the campaign of 1872 came around, in which Greeley was pitted against Grant, Mosby stumped the State of Virginia for Grant. He carried Greeley's papers around and told the people how Grant had treated him. The result was he carried Virginia for the Republicans the first time in its history."—Cor. Cleveland Leader.

Surface Indications
What a miner would very properly term "surface indications" of what is beneath, are the Pimples, Sties, Sore Eyes, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions with which people are annoyed in spring and early summer. The effete matter accumulated during the winter months, now makes its presence felt, through Nature's endeavors to expel it from the system. While it remains, it is a poison that festers in the blood and may develop into Scrofula. This condition causes derangement of the digestive and assimilatory organs, with a feeling of enervation, languor, and weariness—often lightly spoken of as "only spring fever." These are evidences that Nature is not able, unaided, to throw off the corrupt atoms which weaken the vital force. To regain health, Nature must be aided by a thorough blood-purifying medicine; and nothing else is so effective as
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
which is sufficiently powerful to expel from the system even the taint of Hereditary Scrofula.
The medical profession indorse AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and many attestations of the cures effected by it come from all parts of the world. It is, in the language of the Hon. Francis Jewett, ex-State Senator of Massachusetts and ex-Mayor of Lowell, "the only preparation that does real, lasting good."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

NOT AN OLD MAID AFTER ALL.

If ever a cottage carried out the poet's idea of "a lodge in some vast wilderness," it was this one, with the rudely hewn logs and the red cedar verandah posts all twined about with clematis and ivy.

It was merely a spot cleared away in the midst of the primeval forests, with tall trees forming a dome of shade, and tangled ferns and laurel bushes carpeting the glades behind—that was all.

Minnie West had thought it would be "great fun" to camp out with her father. She had asked Barbara Gwynn to accompany her, "in case one wants somebody to talk to," as she said, and had selected a number of her prettiest and most picturesque gowns to wear, and books innumerable to read. But after the first three days Minnie confessed within herself that it was a bore.

"Barbara?" she said softly, as she lay swaying to and fro in the hammock.

"Yes."

Barbara was hemming a pocket-handkerchief in the shade beyond, and looked up quickly at the sound of her voice.

"Isn't it lucky that Tom and Dick came this morning?"

"Very," said Barbara.

"I was beginning to be tired to death of the whispering of those trees, and the tinkle of the waterfall," sighed Minnie. "And papa goes away before daylight, and that old Indian woman selling baskets frightens me half to death! How do I know but what she means to scalp me before she gets through? But now that Dick is here——"

"And Tom," softly murmured Barbara.

"They'll have to sleep in hammocks swung under the trees at night," added Minnie. "But I don't think they'll mind that."

"If it don't rain," said Barbara.

"And they'll have to eat canned things and preserves, unless papa brings home some trout, or wild ducks, or venison, or something. But, of course, people expect to rough it in the woods."

"Of course," acquiesced soft-voiced Barbara.

"I'm sorry, though," sighed Minnie, gazing pensively out toward Lake Sheia in the distance, "that they both happened to blunder in this direction at once; because—mind, Barbara, this is a great, great secret."

"I'll never breathe it to a living soul!" whispered eager Barbara.

"They are both dead in love with me," confidentially murmured Minnie, blushing a radiant sea-shell pink, "and—and I know they are furiously jealous of each other."

"Dear me!" fluttered Barbara, herself coloring in sympathy.

"And I'm afraid one or the other of them will do something dreadful," sobbed Minnie; "for the way they glare at each other is simply appalling."

"Couldn't—couldn't you send them away?" hazarded Barbara, her blue eyes dilated, her red lips parted in a sort of implied consternation.

"Oh no!" Minnie answered positively. "No, that would never do. Don't you see how inhospitable it would seem? Oh, Barbara, this is one of the disadvantages of being—well, tolerably decent-looking," she added with a laugh, as she turned her face away. "One is perpetually tormented with lovers; one never knows what to expect. Now you, Barbara dear——"

"Yes, me," sighed Barbara, hemming away until her needle shone like a series of electric sparks.

"You're a darling, and you've the sweetest face in the world," added Minnie. "But of course you couldn't be called a beauty, and men will never quarrel about you."

"No, to be sure not," acceded Barbara with a mournful inflection in her voice.

"And I think—yes, I'm almost certain," Minnie candidly added—"that you'll be an old maid. But you shall always have a home with me, dear. And only reflect," she said encouragingly, "what a good deal old maids can accomplish in the world."

"Yes; that's true," said Barbara.

But she did not seem to derive much comfort from this indisputable fact.

"And now, darling," Minnie added dreamily, "if you'll just go inside and make a pie and some little tarts out of those wild raspberries that the Indian woman brought this morning it would be such a relief to me, for one does get so shockingly burned and scorched over the stove; and I never had any fancy for cooking. You won't mind, Barbara, will you?"

"I? Oh no!" said Barbara, putting aside the half-hemmed pocket-handkerchief.

Ever since their school days she had contentedly yielded up the palm in everything to beautiful Minnie West, and the habit was still strong on her.

Meantime Tom and Dick, whose names in ordinary society were Mr. Thomas Sinclair and Mr. Richard Wentworth, were stalking along side by side, evidently not the best company for each other.

"I rather think," said Wentworth, suddenly stopping, "that I'll take this old road. It looks as if it might lead somewhere."

"It is a deuced lonesome sort of a place," said Sinclair. "I shouldn't think by the looks of it that a team had been over it in a year."

"Nevertheless, I mean to follow it up," said Wentworth, curtly.

"Do as you please," observed Sinclair. "I suppose, however, that your idea in following old roads is chiefly to get rid of me?"

"You can draw your own inferences," said Wentworth, shrugging his shoulders.

"Much obliged to you, I am sure," remarked Sinclair, tugging fiercely at his mustache.

And the minute Dick was out of sight he made the best of his way back to the lodge in the vast wilderness, where Minnie was still swinging gracefully in the hammock, and Barbara was just taking the raspberry-pie out of the oven.

"I thought I'd come back," said he. "Wentworth took a fancy to go down that queer old road that leads through the woods. What for I can't imagine, unless it it was to break up our tete a tete. And——"

Minnie sprang out of the hammock.

"Not the old road by the brook?" said she.

"Why, of course. What other old road is there?" said Tom, staring.

"Didn't I tell you?" shrieked Minnie, "that the old road wasn't safe? That nobody ever traveled it now, on account of the quaking morass that swallowed up a wagon and two horses, three years ago?"

"Of course you told me," said Sinclair, turning lividly pale. "But I swear to Heaven I never thought of it from that moment to this!"

"It looks exactly like the rest of the road," cried Minnie, wringing her hands. "No one would ever suspect what a death-trap it was until you step directly upon it. And then—— Oh, run after him Mr. Sinclair!"

"Don't lose a second!" gasped Barbara. "Take a hatchet with you, to cut the branches of trees! Take a coil of rope! Oh, my goodness, at this very moment he may be sinking out of the world!"

Sinclair's face was blanched as he glanced from one to the other.

In the midst of his terror and genuine sympathy he could not but think:

"She loves him after all, I have not the ghost of a chance!"

He caught up the hatchet which the trembling little Barbara brought him, and flinging the coil of clothes-line around his neck, started off on a run in the hope of overtaking Wentworth before he had reached the fatal spot.

But the effort was useless. As he pressed on beneath the swamp-like density of the old trees, he caught sight of his former rival, already knee-deep in the treacherous quagmire—over which a veil of soft green grass and wild ferns had grown luxuriantly, as if to conceal its very existence from the unwary traveler—and shouting desperately for help.

"Hold on a minute!" bawled Tom, as he chopped vigorously away at a slim, tall-growing young birch tree. "I'll fling this tree across that death-trap. Hold on to it until I cut another!"

And by dint of constructing an impromptu raft of elastic young saplings across that hidden chasm, and himself venturing across them, he succeeded in dragging Dick out before it was too late, and both stood for a second gazing with deathly-pale faces at the raft itself as it gradually settled down, down, down into the morass until only the velvet-soft grass and the nodding arum-leaves were left above the surface.

Wentworth wrung Tom's hand.

"Old fellow," said he, "you have saved my life. I can't describe my feelings just now. It was as it the hand of some unseen monster were gripping at my heels and drawing me down to death. It was like being swallowed up alive. After this I'll go away. I won't remain to interfere with your chances."

"But you shall remain," said Tom. "Here she comes now. She shall decide for herself. Do you take me for an ingrate?"

It was true. Minnie, flushed and lovely from the haste she had made, now arrived at the scene, with little Barbara close behind.

"He is all right," said Tom.

"He has saved my life!" shouted Dick. "He deserves the richest reward that man can receive. I resign all claims in his behalf."

"Nonsense!" said Tom, looking supremely uncomfortable. "If it hadn't been for my carelessness and stupidity you never would have been in such a bad plight."

Minnie turned rose and white by turns. She looked imploringly at Dick, she looked wistfully at Tom, and then she put out her hands to the latter.

"You are his preserver," she said almost in a sob. "No reward can be too great for you. It—if a lifetime's devotion can atone to you for this noble act, it shall be yours. I will be your wife, dear, dear Tom!"

"Hold on—hold on!" said Mr. Sinclair. "We're all at cross-purposes here. It's Dick that proposed this bargain—not me."

"Don't you adore her?" said Dick reproachfully.

"Not a bit of it," said Tom. "She's a very nice girl; but it's Barbara that I'm after."

"Barbara!" echoed Dick. "Why the deuce didn't you say so before?"

"Isn't it she that you're in love with?" demanded Tom with some surprise.

"No; it's Minnie!"

"Then why on earth couldn't you have spoken out?" irately demanded Sinclair. "Here we both have been frantically jealous of one another without a particle of cause."

And Minnie West flying into the arms of her rescued hero, cried out:

"And I can love Dick, after all, without feeling myself to be a serpent of ingratitude."

As for little Barbara, she said nothing at all, except that her eyes were full of limpid, deep sparkling happiness.

"Only to think," said Minnie, when she had had time properly to consider the question, "Barbara won't be an old maid after all! But I was willing to sacrifice myself to Tom, after all. Now, wasn't I?"

"But he didn't want the sacrifice," demurely spoke Barbara. "I think—that is, it seems to me—that he's very well satisfied as it is."

Which, to beautiful, self-appreciative Minnie, was the strangest thing of all.

Chancellor Runyon says that no telephone or telegraph company has the right to erect poles without the consent of the property owners, and has ordered the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company to remove poles on the property of Johnathan Brown, of East Orange, which had been erected without permission. At present, poles are a necessity of the business, but this decision will have the effect of preventing the erection of ugly poles on public streets.

The Elizabeth Sunday Leader says that a man in Rahway recently made application for pension upon the following grounds: "I enlisted for nine months; 1st June 1863, I was ordered to brake in a muel to work at the sadall, in the wagon, and haul wud. Bein' unable to manage the muel approachin' the open dore of a barn, the dore not bein' big enuff for both me and the muel I was forcibly thrown to the ground, and my hed made a hole in it. I was so dubbled up I haven't been able to straiten myself out fairly ever sence, and I'm shore, Mr. Penshun Burow man, you will send me the penshun immediately, seein' as how I was knocked out in the line of duty."

Was there ever such a spectacle presented to the people of New Jersey as that now to be seen in Trenton where seven Republican Senators refuse to organize that body because the House will not do as it wants it to do in regard to two of its members. Legislation that should be enacted is blocked and because seven revolutionary Senators are violating their oaths to support and carry out the Constitution and laws of the State. Such a thing was never heard of or imagined until Sewell, with his despotic notions, got to be the Republican boss and is allowed to dictate the policy of the party. Two years ago the Republican Senators refused to go into joint meeting in order that the Democratic successor to Comptroller Anderson might not be elected; now they have gone even farther and hope by refusing to organize to be able to elect a majority on joint ballot next November.

"This is an age of wonders," said a man as he made a straw hat felt by touching it.

OLD TIMES.

I stroll along a winding country road, lined on either side with huge maples flaming with gold and crimson. The delicious haze of November is in the air; a filmy scarf of cloud lies motionless against a heaven of blue; the quiet faraway hills are visions of peace and rest; on the dallying breeze is borne the contented low of kine and the drone of insect life. Amid such scenes, and on the flood-tide of memory, am I, this gracious day, drifting along the way I once "crept like snail unwillingly to school."

Just here at this bend, where the brook crosses the highway, and babbles its joyous ditty across the listening meadows, let me pause at the "big beeches," two patriarchal trees spared from the primeval forest. On their bold fronts were once blazed with jack-knife's aid numberless dates and birth-dates of village swains. There were hearts and crosses, bits of uncouth rhyme and rural jests; but now—"in one rude burial blent." Defacing scars alone remain where posey and genealogy strove so long for mastery over forgiving nature.

I saunter on;—yes, there it stands, the old school-house on the hill; just as it stood thirty years ago, save that it wears a more subdued and chastened air befitting its mellow age. Gazing through a broken pane, what ghosts of the past troop by. There, "satiated with peace," still stand all scarred and gashed with the conflict of a former generation, the crippled line of pine benches. Many urchins who figuratively adorned them, have since literally adorned far higher ones. And there at the north end of the room "is the rostrum," up which so many diffident youths mounted with a sinking heart to rehearse selections from their "readers," which, though carefully conned, yes, earnestly sought with tears, had a treacherous way of receding into vagueness when verbal attempts were made before a crowd of grimacing unsympathetic co-laborers. And the "last days" and "exhibitions" that old room has witnessed. I especially remember one crowning "exhibition," when a calico curtain gathered on a stove-pipe wire transformed that rostrum into a real stage. The feeling which animated the breast of the writer as he ascended the rostrum on that never-to-be-forgotten occasion, cannot be told in cold type. It was his to apostrophise the American flag; and to more thoroughly chain attention and illustrate its gorgeousness, a jacket of blue, bespangled with paper stars, enveloped his treble chest, while red flannel stripes cast their consanguined length on his immaculate trousers. At the finish the audience applauded heartily, and the happy boy never for a moment suspected it was because he had concluded.

And the spelling matches;—when the North Road School, the Corners School, and the Mile Square School sent representatives to Smith District No. 10, to try conclusions, and how hope and fear alternately fluctuated as our crack spellers went down under the ominous "next!" of the gray-haired, spectacled pedagogue. * * How plain the old school days come back; the rude roystering games on the green in summer, and the coasting on the hill in winter. How long the days seemed, and what solid enjoyment we put into them.

Of course we had a sweetheart in those early innocent days. We were a bashful lover, and correspondingly raised to a pinnacle of joy, or plunged to depths of despair, as we, or some other admirer, received her shy glances. I wonder what became of the delicate maid, with low white forehead, and eyes which continually seemed looking beyond the common-places of life into a larger and distant sphere? Doubtless she made some good man a dutiful wife, and settled down to the realistic, utterly forgetting the dreams of long ago.

That sound! yes, the old church bell hard by the school. It seems like the voice of an old friend. How many, many times have I suddenly paused in my play to listen, all attention, as the white-haired sexton tolled the age of some one who had for himself, solved life's wonderful problem. And when the age had been struck, after a decent pause, one deep stroke, signifying a son of earth was to be returned to the maternal bosom; or two strokes, that somebody's daughter, or wife, or mother, was thereafter only a memory.

This solemn monotone of the bell always had a terrible fascination for me, and even in my childhood's days, I would pass in mental review the life of him who lay dead, as the years were solemnly counted off on the rosary of the bell. First stroke, babyhood. Ten! childhood passes. Twenty! early manhood advances. Forty! middle age follows. Seventy!! falls on the listening ear—life's allotted span. What of that life? Was it for good or ill? Was it filled with kind acts and loving help to others, or was it hard, unsympathetic, unlovely? God knows. Still the bell tolls on—eighty! Then ten long, measured strokes! It could have been but Rest which met the old man on the way and comforted him.

It is but a step to the churchyard. Ah! how many of our former school fellows billow God's acre here. How very, very many who started out on life's highway with us, early grew tired of the journey, and strayed from the hot and dusty way to peaceful paths through pastures green. Here is a broken stone mutely begging recognition. I wonder if I can read the inscription—

In loving memory of
ANNA COLE,
Aged 18 years.

That was all, yet it fills my eyes with tears. Dear little village maid. The toil and grief and heartache happily escaped in her dewy youth. That old wishful look has its fruition; for now across the shining fields, she sees the King in his beauty, and is satisfied.

Even such is time, that takes on trust
Our youth, our joys, our all we have,
And pays us but with age and dust;
Who in the dark and silent grave,
When we have wandered all our ways,
Shuts up the story of our days.

BOTH SIDES.

"Oh, yes," said a passenger from the Far West, "I made a heap of money out of the big mining flurry in 'Frisco. It was the biggest money-making streak I ever had."

"Which side of the market did you operate on?"

"Both sides. You see, I had a pawnbroking establishment only four doors from the mining exchange."

WHAT HE WOULD SAY.

A married couple were out promenading in the suburbs of Austin one day. Presently the wife said:

"Think, Albert, if the brigands should come now and take me from you!"

"Impossible, my dear."

"But supposing they did come and carry me away, what would you say?"

"I should say," replied the husband, "that the brigands were new at the business. That's all."

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

Mr. Bowser is a great man to "break out in spots." The other evening after he had lighted a cigar and got his feet braced on the mantel he suddenly observed:

"Mrs. Bowser, has it never occurred to you to call me Judge?"

"Never!" I promptly replied, for he had complained of the biscuit at supper.

"Nor Colonel?"

"No!"

"While I could probably have gone to the Supreme bench, or been commissioned Colonel," he softly continued, "I did not care for the honor. I am not one, Mrs. Bowser, to clutch at titles in order to lift myself up, but I didn't know but it might please you to be known as Mrs. Judge Bowser."

"I don't want the title."

"Very well, Mrs. Bowser. If you have no care for social distinction I'm sure I haven't. If your ambition is to plank yourself in the house with that wall-eyed baby and pay no attention to the demands of society I might as well join another lodge."

I felt a bit conscience-stricken over the way I had acted, and after awhile I went out and told the cook to call him Judge when she came in with the last scuttle of coal. When she came she managed to bump him to give her an excuse for saying: "Excuse me, Constable—excuse me!"

There was a solemn silence for five minutes after she left the room. Then Mr. Bowser observed:

"Perhaps, on the whole, Mrs. Bowser, it would be as well not to attempt to call me by any title. Hired help is stupid, you know?"

On a late occasion, as our fireside was a scene of peace and happiness, Mr. Bowser softly remarked:

"Mrs. Bowser, whenever it comes handy you'd better throw out hints to your lady friends that you were educated abroad."

"Why?"

"Well, it will increase their respect for you."

"But I was educated in the little red school house at Perryville, you know, and have never been out of the State."

"Don't talk so loud, as Jane may be listening! I told a friend only the other day that I was educated abroad, and had been through all the art galleries of Europe."

"What place did you say you studied at?"

"Zanzibar."

"Why, my dear, that's in Africa!"

"It is! Now that shows what you know! Zanzibar is in Germany. Mrs. Bowser, I don't want to crow over you on the subject of education, but when you display such lamentable ignorance of geography I have to feel glad that my school days were not wasted."

"I say it's in Africa!"

"Mrs. Bowser!"

"And I'll prove it by the atlas!"

"If you do I'll give you $50 in cash!"

I got of the atlas, and there, over on the east coast of the Dark Continent was Zanzibar, as every school child knows.

"I'll take that fifty," I quietly remarked.

"No, you won't! Some fool of a mapmaker has gone and got drunk and mixed things up, and I'm not going to pay for it. When I know that Zanzibar is in Germany I know it just as well as the atlas or anybody else."

"Did this friend of yours ask you what old master you preferred?"

"Yes, ma'am, and I was posted there, too. You may think I go sloshing around with both eyes shut and my tongue hanging out, Mrs. Bowser," but that's where you are dead lame. I told him Longfeller."

"Mr. Bowser!"

"What now! You don't s'pose I said Sam Patch or Buffalo Bill, do you?"

"But Longfellow was not a painter at all, he was a poet."

He drew in his breath until his face was as red as a beet, and he jumped up and down and flourished his arms like a wind-mill, and finally got voice to roar out.

"I'll bet you nine hundred thousand million quadrillion dollars to that old back comb in your hair! Mrs. Bowser, such assumption and assurance on your part is unbearable!"

"Jane may hear you."

"Jane be hanged, and you, too! Mrs. Bowser, I demand an apology for this insult!"

"Wait till I prove that Longfellow was not an artist, but a poet."

"I'll give you a million dollars if you do it."

I got down the volume of poems by Longfellow which Mr. Bowser had given the year before, and then I went to the encyclopedia and made a tight case on him. He was at first inclined to give in, but directly he struck the table such a blow that baby screamed out and then shouted:

"I see how it is! You are looking for Longfellow all the time and I distinctly stated that it was Longfeller! If the printers have got drunk and left the name out am I to blame?"

"Mr. Bowser, I believe I will say I was educated abroad. I believe I will do it to please you."

"Oh! you will! Well, you needn't do anything of the kind! Folks would all know by your freckles that you sat in the sun in some country school foundry! Mrs. Bowser, you've broken up the peace of this fireside by your malicious conduct, and you needn't set up for me to-night! I may not come home before to-morrow!"

JUVENILE ASPERITY.

"It hasn't developed much I see, Orthur."

"What?"

"Youah mustache."

"No, but I am much encouraged when I observe the slowness of growth in one of your pahsonal accessories."

"What's that?"

"Your brain."

NO CHANGE FOR HIM.

Peckham (meeting an old friend)—"Why, Dingley, is this you? I haven't seen you for ten years. How are you, anyhow?"

Dingley—"Oh, I'm just like I used to be. By the way, Peckham, how's your wife? You used to say you had the boss girl when you were single."

Peckham (sadly)—"She's still boss!"

FAMILY GIFTS.

"Hubby, dear, I can't wait to tell you what I'm going to buy you for your birthday!"

"Darling wife, what is it?"

"Well, dear, I'm going to get you a silver card-tray and a bronze Hercules for the mantel, and a lovely Russian table rug to lay in front of my dressing-case. What are you going to get for me, Tootsy."

"I've been thinking, Jane, and I have about concluded to get you a new shaving brush."

THE SERGEANT'S DAUGHTER.

The Second Sergeant in my company, as we lay at Dalton and thereabouts in the Winter of 1864, was a young man named Tom Duffield. He was a general favorite with all except the First Lieutenant, and we afterwards came to know that the feud between them dated back to the day when Tom's wife gave him her hand in marriage instead of to the other. That there was trouble between them all knew. The Lieutenant had come to our company by assignment from a different regiment altogether, and that's the way he and Tom Duffield came face to face after many years. Then the officer began a system of persecution which he meant should end in Tom's death in some way or other.

It is needless to explain to an old veteran that the company commander can persecute one of the rank and file in a hundred ways and not render him liable. He tripped Tom up on the slightest pretext; he reported him for scout duty and had him sent where he hoped he would never return; he aggravated him into answering back, and then had him reduced to the ranks for insubordination. We who saw and knew it all coolly advised Tom to shoot the man down in cold blood, but he would not proceed to that extremity. He sent him a challenge, but went to the guard-house to pay for it.

This state of affairs was going on when orders were issued to furlough all men who had reasonable excuses for going home, and who did not live too far away. Sergeant Tom had a daughter about four years old in his mountain home up around Marietta, and three or four letters had come to him about little Katie. She had been dragged down by fever, and was slowly dying, and the wife was begging for Tom to come home before it was too late. It was a good excuse for him to go, and he was a soldier who had earned his furlough if any of us had. He went to the Lieutenant to make application, and the reply he got was:

"That's no excuse. It will be the fighting men who go from my company!"

That night Tom Duffield deserted. Half a dozen of us stripped ourselves to help him off, and he took a government horse and rode straight for his home and dying child. We managed to conceal his absence for twenty-four hours, and then a detail of men took up his trail. There were plenty of men taking French leave just then, and the General was winking at it, believing they would return before the campaign opened. The Lieutenant made the biggest kind of a fuss over this case, however, and by his talk and stir got some of the provost-guard sent off to bring Tom in dead or alive. The Sergeant in charge of the fellows was on good terms with the Lieutenant, and in this case could be used as a tool. I have no doubt that it was put up between them that Tom should never come back.

The details as I afterwards came to know them, bore out the idea. When the Sergeant reached home Katie was dead, and his wife dangerously ill. There were a few neighbors left—poor, old and crippled. One of them made a coffin, another dug a grave on Tom's own farm, and one morning the grief-stricken father took the plain box on his shoulder and went out almost alone to bury his beloved dead. The provost men had come up with him the night before, but instead of going to the house and taking him prisoner, they lay in ambush near the grave. The coffin had been lowered into it, and poor Tom's tears were wetting the bouquet of mountain flowers which the women had gathered in token of their love, when the guards rushed out crying:

"Surrender! surrender! If you don't surrender, we'll shoot!"

I tell you, Sergeant Tom hadn't gotten the tears out of his eyes, to see them, when they shot him dead. He hadn't moved as much as a hand. He fell right into the grave, on top the coffin, and before night his wife was a corpse. I knew the men who enlarged the grave to hold the three, and it was from them that I got the details I have given you. When the news came back to the company the Lieutenant was rejoiced. We did not know the full horror of the case then, but we suspected that something was wrong, and more than one vowed vengeance on the officer. I myself meant to kill him at the first opportunity, and I believe others made the same grim resolve.

In the Spring, when Sherman advanced and one day when our brigade was rushed into a hot spot to hold in check the move of a Federal division, my time came. A regiment swept up on our flank, creating confusion and disorder, and in the smoke and panic I looked for the Lieutenant. There was a flash of fire and smoke in front of me and a Federal shell struck him full in the breast and tore him into fragments, so small that no effort was made to gather the remains together. He, of a score or more of men thickly grouped, was alone struck, and what wonder if we whispered that it was the vengeance of God?

DEMOCRACY.

To students of political history and to those citizens who have been life-long adherents of the cause of Democracy, or, rightfully speaking, the cause of the people irrespective of class or condition, the lengthened and active career of the Democratic party is a source of both pride and instruction.

During the whole of the present nineteenth century, eighty-six years, the party of Democracy has enjoyed vigorous existence, and whether in ruling power or out of it, and beneath the storm clouds of war or the sunshine of peace, that grand old political organization has never faltered in its outspoken advocacy of the very principles of equity and right upon which rest the pillars of Constitutional Government.

Its record is glorious.

No partisan association in this or any other country ever showed such unyielding fidelity to principles as has the Democratic.

And that fact constitutes the honor, strength and healthy age of the party whose first banner was unfurled by the author of the Declaration of American Independence—Thomas Jefferson.

When we think of the dauntless courage of the Democracy during the past four-score years, warring against opposition after opposition that rejected no weapons of political hostility, and now knowing that the party of Democracy has triumphed, and stands proudly vindicated from one end of the land to the other, we are convinced of the might and invincibility of Truth.

Common loyalty and common honesty demand that Leon Abbett should have the earnest support of every Democrat in his Senatorial struggle. It was under Abbett's banner that the victory was won. Whether the provocations he enumerates were sufficient to justify him in his unDemocratic course he leaves without argument, apparently trusting that his statement will be read in the light of his subsequent course, which has certainly been as Democratic as the most exacting followers of Andrew Jackson could ask.

What a spectacle it must be to outsiders of our fair city, to witness the attitude of our Common Council on the license question. With a majority in favor of license, refusal is granted to all the hotels and saloons to sell liquor, and their bars ordered closed, because one or two applicants are objected to by three members who will vote for other licenses. It looks like a "dog in the manger" attitude, and is as unjust to the other applicants as it is detrimental to the city in keeping licenses from them. There is a clear majority in the Council in favor of granting licenses, and all who apply properly and legally should be granted the privilege asked for. It is to be hoped that the "dead-lock" will be broken at next meeting of Council.

The question is again being discussed in the newspapers as to the propriety, not to say necessity, of the State building an Executive Mansion for the accommodation of Governors and their families. It is argued that a State of the wealth and importance of New Jersey owes to the dignity of its chief executive officer to provide a commodious mansion, easy of access to the Capitol, as a permanent place of residence for its Governor, and the people would sustain the Legislature in making an appropriation for that purpose. Other States have done as much and it behooves New Jersey not to be behind in a matter involving so little expense and which is really of so much importance.

The irrepressible James Matlack Scovel snuffs the battle at Trenton afar off, like the old political war horse that he is, and makes a good point. He says in a published letter:

"In the year 1865 I was President of the New Jersey Senate. In my opinion (though an active Republican) a Democrat from New Jersey had been unjustly driven from his seat in the United States Senate, to which he was fairly elected by a plurality of votes, before the passage of the so-called Scovel law, which now prevails (passed for the purposes of that case, but a good law), regulating the time and manner of electing United States Senators in the different States of the Union. I was denounced as 'revolutionary' because I refused to go into joint meeting to elect an objectionable Republican and because I kept off the election of a United States Senator from April to September of that year, 1865. Now the tables seem to have been changed, and we find the Republican majority in the Senate acting in a method still more revolutionary. They won't organize at all. I was abused by every Republican paper in the country (as I now remember), saving and reserving Horace Greeley's New York Tribune. Indeed Horace Greeley backed me up in my fight, believing, as I did, that it was one of principle. But there were no such wild, lawless and revolutionary proceedings as have disgraced the Legislature at Trenton during the past week. But the point I want to emphasize now is that Congress was invoked to legislate me into joint meeting to elect a Senator, and now when the boasts order 'revolution' not a Republican paper makes any outcry against a dangerous invocation on peaceable and lawful measures to elect a United States Senator."

The Philadelphia Record has the following thoughtful talk upon the existing coal strike which should be calmly considered:

"It is one of the unfortunate features of strikes that they are most effective at those times when they bring out the most wide-spread suffering and injury. A strike of the coal-heavers in the summer time would inconvenience the coal companies, but it would not bear so hardly upon thousands of persons of limited income who cannot afford to pay famine prices for fuel. Whatever the strikers may gain by their action will bear no comparison with the loss inflicted upon coal consumers, who are not parties to the quarrel of the strikers with their employers. The strike, therefore, is like the bomb of the dynamiter, it does indiscriminate mischief, and ought never to be resorted to except for the most urgent reasons and to remedy unbearable wrongs."

Considering the fact that the suffering for coal is continuing and soon will be very urgent, and as the companies and the public have much to lose by continuing the quarrel, why could not some amicable adjustment be made of the difficulty by arbitration or otherwise. Nobody profits by this condition of things and the innocent public are the greatest sufferers.

Geological Survey of New Jersey.

From State Geologist, Prof. Geo. H. Cook, we learn the Atlas of New Jersey is now in course of preparation, and several sheets are done. These sheets are each 27 by 37 inches, including margin, and are intended to fold once across, making the leaves of the atlas 18½ by 27 inches. The completed work will be made up of seventeen of these maps, on a scale of one mile to an inch. The location and number of each map is given on the reference map, on page 11 of the State Geologist's Report for 1884, and is printed on the title page of the Atlas.

Numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, 16 and 17 are done, and the other numbers will be issued, probably in 1888. The office of Prof. Cook is at New Brunswick, N. J.

On Tuesday in the House Mr. Donohue, from the Committee on Labor and Industries, reported a substitute for Mr. Matthews resolution, offered previously, which strikes out the preamble and provides for the appointment of a committee of five to inquire at once into the causes of the strikes. The report was adopted, and the Speaker appointed the following committee: Messrs. Matthews, McLaughlin, Carroll, Underhill and Condit.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

To-day (Friday) there will be a match at twenty-five live birds each, for $25 a side, between Mr. Samuel Truslow, of New York and Harry Campbell, of this city, at Campbell's Club House.

The next club shoot of the Middlesex Gun Club will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 8th, instead of Wednesday, Feb. 9. Several important matches are to be shot on that day. There will be a meeting of the Board of Directors at Force's Hotel, this city, the evening of Feb. 8, at 7:30 o'clock.

On Tuesday, Feb. 8th, there will be an interesting live pigeon shooting match on the Middlesex Gun Club grounds at Dunellen, between the celebrated shots Leander B. Campbell, of Little Silver and Wm. Lever, of Bound Brook. The match is for $100 a side, fifty birds each and is "up and up."

The Secretary of the Middlesex Gun Club is in receipt of letters from prominent crack pigeon shots of the country, asking for information and entries to the grand $100 sweepstakes on Feb. 22d, during the shooting tournament of the Middlesex Gun Club on their grounds at Dunellen, Feb. 21st, 22d, 23d, 24th and 25th next. The indications are that there will be sufficient entries in the big sweepstakes to give the winner a $1,000 prize.

At the recent meeting of the Paterson Association among the plans discussed was one to amend the game laws so that Summer shooting would be prohibited, and to make the Fall shooting season open on October 15th and close on December 15th. This plan, it was thought, would be beneficial in preventing the slaughtering of quail after heavy snow storms when massed together for warmth, and at the same time put a check on the rabbit-trackers. The advisability of stocking the upper Passaic with Potomac catfish was also discussed.

It is stated that "South Jersey sportsmen will make a vigorous fight against the renewal of the West Jersey Game Protective Association's charter, for which an appeal will be made during the present session of the legislature. They claim that the association, although nominally in the interests of New Jersey, is in reality under the control of Philadelphians, and that the residents of this State are denied many privileges which have been fully given to those holding membership in the society." Not only will the attempt to renew the charter of the West Jersey Game Society be opposed by South Jersey sportsmen, but it will also be by sportsmen throughout the whole State, who can testify to the arbitrary and unsportsmanlike manner in which the officers have treated members of other Game Protective Societies. It is unjust to allow such a corporation to rule the seven Southern counties as it does. While other Game Protective Societies, such as the "New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society," issue certificates of membership to non-residents to shoot and fish in any part of the State, the West Jersey society, by reason of the provisions of its charter, which was obtained before the State Constitution was so amended as to prohibit special legislation, refuse to allow such non-residents to hunt or fish in the seven counties of the State controlled by them, and arrest and fine all such. Every year a big financial statement is made out, wherein it appears that thousands of dollars have been received for dues and expended for stocking the counties with quail. If a portion of such stocking is actually done who gets the benefit of it? Not the residents, but a number of Philadelphians who compose principally the organization. It is a close corporation that ought not to exist.

PROF. SMITH, of Wittenberg College,
Recommends Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and condemns the use of Ammonia in Baking Powder.

This is to certify that I have examined Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, samples of which I purchased in open market, and that I can recommend it as a good, wholesome, and unadulterated article. It does not contain ammonia, an ingredient of many baking powders, and one which I regard as highly objectionable, since it seriously impairs digestion. I have examined biscuits baked with an ammoniated powder, and have found, as has been repeatedly declared, that the ammonia was still there. Cleveland's powder gave the amount of pure carbonic acid claimed for it by the manufacturers.

AFTER DINNER.
Persons who suffer from Indigestion can arrest the progress of that painful malady by the use of an after-dinner pill, so composed that it will give tone to the stomach, prevent heartburn, rouse the liver to healthful action, invigorate the kidneys, and thus, through the activity of these organs, promote the natural movement of the stomach and bowels. AYER'S PILLS are so compounded that their action, though mild, effectually produces the above results. They also, in curing Constipation, remove the cause of Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Kidney Disease, Rheumatism, and many other serious ailments.
AYER'S PILLS
contain no mineral nor poisonous substance, and do not gripe unless the bowels are irritated, and even then their influence is healing. To continue their effect in constipated or chronic cases, they need only be taken in diminishing instead of increasing doses. Footsmen, and inhabitants or travelers in sparsely settled countries where physicians are not at hand, they are of inestimable value. There is hardly a sickness they will not alleviate, and in most cases cure, if taken promptly. To young girls just entering upon womanhood, and to women whose period of maternity is drawing to a close, Ayer's Pills, in moderate doses merely sufficient to ensure regular action of the bowels, will be found of Incalculable Value.

Those owing poll and dog tax, however, had better settle also and quickly. Constable Cook is a bad man to keep waiting.

THOSE holding Course tickets for the W. C. T. U., entertainments, are requested to present them at Reynold's pharmacy during to-day and to-morrow and select seats without extra charge for Gen. Lew Wallace's readings in Music Hall, Tuesday evening, Feb. 15th. Next week seats may be secured by all those who do not hold Course tickets.

UNDER a new law which went into effect recently, postal notes are now issued payable to bearer at any money order office in the United States. The fee remains the same, three cents, the advantage to the public being that the note can be cashed at any money order office, instead of, as heretofore, at the office upon which it was drawn.

THE young misses of La Grande avenue and its vicinity have formed a cooking club that gave its first course dinner at the residence of Miss Daff, last Friday. The member at whose house the menu is to be served selects its contents, and each young lady of the club furnishes some part of the whole. The next collation is to be given at Miss Dumont's, Friday of next week.

"WE read in a Port Jervis paper that a resident of that town found a $5 gold piece while shoveling the snow and ice from the sidewalk in front of his residence. A $5 gold piece would lay undiscovered a long time upon the walks of some of our people before it was found while they were shoveling their sidewalk." There is no joke about this, although it is taken from the Flemington Democrat.

SHORTLY after midnight of Sunday last, a false alarm rung from the tower sent the Fire Department's apparatus racing through the streets in search of a conflagration. It was impossible to locate the cause of the mistake, but probably it was like the cause of our fires—incendiary. Some say a resident of Crescent avenue intending to ring the district box for a doctor, pulled the wrong string.

PROBABLY the most artistic of the million calendars that flood the country either for purposes of business advertisement or the decoration of the writing desk, is that issued by the Lawrence Cement Co., of New York. The design and steel engraving is by the celebrated Lowell of Boston. Mr. Ernest R. Ackerman of this city is connected with the company, and assures us the cement is as fine as the calendar.

MME MODJESKA gave her new play of "Mary Stuart" at Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week, to a large and fashionable audience. Her support was quite creditable, and the star divided the honors with Mary Shaw who played "Elizabeth." Maurice Barrymore, as "Mortimer" at times destroyed the effectiveness of his part by a too rapid enunciation, and Charles Vanderhoff as "Leicester" was too stiff-necked for grace. Wm. Haworth was a good "Burleigh," and interpreted that statesman's character with becoming dignity.

AUDRAN'S charming opera, "The Mascot," has never been presented to the public so artistically and melodiously—although so grotesquely—as now at the New York "Bijou" theatre. Mr. Nat Goodwin is a "Lorenzo" of his own creation—unapproachable and not to be excelled. Miss Groebl returns from Europe as brilliant as ever to play and sing "Bettina," and the rest of the cast is well distributed and beautifully costumed. All this with a fine orchestra is attracting large audiences, and is "Erminie's" only rival.

THIS evening is the date of the free organ concert tendered the public by the Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue church. Mr. Taft will again "officiate" at the instrument, and the programme we published in our last issue promises a great musical treat. Just why this concert should be given the public for nothing at just this time, we cannot say. The Y. P. A., is not to blame. But, so far as that goes, everybody else connected with the church claims immunity from the deed. If it is a mistake the Crescent avenue people regret it more, undoubtedly, than do even those interested in the coming concert of the 17th inst.

THE houses of the city are being numbered—after a fashion—and in a lively manner.

ORDERS and contracts for everything in the line of plumbing, steam and gas fitting, are well and promptly executed by A. M. Griffen.

IT has been reported that an effort will be made by the proprietors of the barred out bars, to buy off Mr. Muldowney. But that would not break the dead-lock if it is true that another applicant is as objectionable.

AN accidental fire started in a hanging curtain in the residence of Mr. Wm. J. Roome, now occupied by Mr. John Musgrave and family, at Willow and Sycamore avenues, Monday evening about 5:30 o'clock. Only slight damage was done, and the fire was quenched before the arrival of the department.

WE need do no more for the Philharmonic Concert of next Tuesday evening, than to call attention to its programme in full published in our advertising columns. The instrumentalists cannot be excelled, and Mme. Gramm will sustain the high reputation gained for the Course by Mme. Tanner.

THE next attraction at Music Hall is Belasco's "May Blossom, the Fisherman's Bride," and it is an attraction truly. Mr. Benjamin Maginley is the "Uncle Bartlett" of his own creation, and the support is the same as is now attracting large audiences in New York city. The play is one of the brightest and purest.

ON next Tuesday evening will be given the second Philharmonic Concert, (of the Y. M. C. A. series), and our readers will refer with pleasure to the excellent programme which appears in full in our advertisement. Announcement is also made as to the soloists to appear in the third and fourth concerts of the series. Tickets may be procured at Reynolds' pharmacy for the remainder of the series or for single numbers.

THE First Annual Ball of Americus Club, No. 6,386 of this city, which took place in the Casino rink, last Friday evening, was a big success. Almost one hundred couple took part in the grand march, and as many more joined in the dances that followed. A fine supper was served, and the music by Prof. Frazee and orchestra was first-class. The committee whose names we published last week, deserve all the credit of the affair.

THE temperance drama of "Three Years in a Man Trap," given at Music Hall, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week, was really an enjoyable play presented in a most amusing manner. The audiences, however, were very small, and in spite of its being for the benefit of the "Sons of Temperance" in a city full of professed supporters of total abstinence, not a hundred of the latter patronized the play to assist the cause.

IN another column we publish the coming of Dr. Abbie E. Cutter, of whom an Indiana paper says: "Dr. Cutter's lectures are practical, and cannot fail to benefit young and old, as she gives not only advice, but recipes for the prevention of the diseases of which she treats. Dr. Cutter is a highly intellectual lady; she speaks easily and fluently, and is thoroughly master of her subjects. No one can listen to her lectures without pleasure and profit."

THE dead-lock in the Council on the license question—if it continues—will deprive the city of a needed revenue of about $5,000. Without it we must give up street lights when the present contract is expired, and probably do without police protection or some other necessity before the present year is passed that the expenses the city is compelled to pay may be met. Just over-the-brook, however, the drunkard may get as full as he likes and take possession of the city's peace upon his return, while it may not be able to afford the cost of protection.

"For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The New York Mail and Express of Jan. 29th, has the following to say regarding one of Plainfield's former and popular residents, which is complimentary and true:

> "A splendid fellow" is the way Dr. Charles F. Stillman's more intimate friends speak of him. He is noted for his genial, social qualities, and is a member of the Union League and Lotos Clubs, besides belonging to the Westminster Kennel and the Riding Clubs. He is eminent as a specialist in surgery, is professor in one of the colleges of the city, and the author of several books. He is also an artist, one of his drawings being a sketch from memory of the faculty of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, drawn while he was a student, the portraits of which are remarkably accurate."

Fanwood Township Meeting.

The township committee of Fanwood met at Excelsior Hall on Monday, Jan. 31, 1887. John Taylor Johnston, Esq., appeared by attorney and stated objections to the removal of house occupied by E. M. Johnston, and known as the Heath house, said house having been adjudged by the road board report of Dec. 31, 1886, to have encroached on line of Park avenue, and said objections not having been opposed by township counsel it was resolved that the above be placed on the minutes. Treasurer Miller reported cash on hand $868.92. The following bills were presented and ordered paid: Dr. Westcott, medical attendance as directed by overseer of poor, $8.50; Excelsior H. & L. Co. 1, for rent of hall to April 8, 1887, $25; Jackson & Codington, fee as township counsel, $10; Force Bros., printing for current year to Jan. 20, 1887, $33.30; Levi Darby, overseer of poor, board of H. Hoben, $6; H. Hand, balance due road district No. 2, $41.68. Collector D. H. Terry electing not to collect the delinquent taxes of 1886, Henry Cook was appointed special constable and Justice Nash of Plainfield was requested to issue a pluries warrant to Mr. Cook for collection of same. Adjourned to meet at Excelsior Hall on Tuesday, Feb. 8th, 1887, at 7 o'clock p. m.

Dominies' and Doctors' Protest.

To the Honorable Common Council of Plainfield, N. J.:

We, the undersigned, residents of this city, do most respectfully petition your Honorable body to refuse all applications for the licensing of hotels and saloons to sell alcoholic or malt liquors, and we present among other reasons, the following:

First—The free use of ardent spirits and malt liquors causes disturbance, disorder and crime in our midst, as the records of our city court clearly prove.

Second—It brings misery, want and sorrow into many homes; robbing the worker of his wages and depriving the wife and children of the very necessaries of life.

Third—License sanctions a great wrong and it is never right to license wrong.

Since it cannot now be asserted that the money raised by granting licenses is necessary to carry on the city government; or that liquor selling enhances the value of property, or that it adds to the fair fame or attractions of our beautiful city, or that it in any way benefits the individual or the community, but on the contrary does great harm; we most earnestly request that your Honorable body will refuse to grant any and all applications to sell strong drink that have been or may be presented to your Honorable body and thus remove temptation from the hundreds who are so nobly struggling to keep their pledge and restore their manhood. And we shall ever pray, etc.

Masonic State Officers.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Grand Lodge of Masons was concluded at Trenton on January 27. The following are the new officers: Most Worshipful Grand Master, Robert M. Moore, Elizabeth; R. W. D. G. M., Charles H. Mann, Haddonfield; R. W. S. W., J. M. Harris, Phillipsburg; R. W. J. G. W., Geo. W. Fortmeyer, East Orange; R. W. G. T., Chas. Bechtel, Trenton; R. W. G. S., Joseph H. An Inspection and Reception.

A regular encampment of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., was held on Wednesday evening, January 26th in their hall on East Front street and an inspection of the Post took place. Comrade Thomas R. Kimball, of Post 25, having been appointed by the department to inspect Post 73, was present with a large delegation from Dahlgren Post No. 25, of Elizabeth. Inspector Kimball announcing himself in waiting was admitted, and performed the duties assigned to him as Inspector. The result was that the inspection of Post 73 proved satisfactory in every respect. After this order was performed the Post closed in due form and retired to the Republican Hall where a substantial and bountiful collation was spread, tendered by the ladies of the Women's Relief Corps No. 10 of this city. The collation being served, speech making was next in order and Past Post Commander and Comrade William E. Mattison and others made a few remarks, after which members of Winfield Scott Fife and Drum Corps tendered the company some selections of music, on which they were highly complimented. The delegation from Elizabeth returned on a late train, highly and well pleased with the reception tendered them by Winfield Scott Post and the ladies of the Women's Relief Corps No. 10.

Public Library.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Directors was held on Wednesday evening, the business transacted being mostly of a routine character. The report of the Librarian for the month of January, which was read, is as follows: Volumes on the accession book 31st Dec., 4,898; volumes added by purchase, 299; volumes added by gift, 13; volumes now in library, 5,210, number of card holders, 507; cash received for fines and dues, $10.09; home circulation for month, 1,139; visitors to building, 1,797. On Tuesday, Mr. John W. Murray sent to the library two more quarto volumes of the Census Report of 1880, five volumes of miscellaneous public documents, and eighteen volumes of the official records of the war of the rebellion, now in process of publication. The first five volumes of this work are very much wanted by the library to complete the set. For these books or any others (including national or state publications) that the friends of the library may be willing to give the Librarian will be glad to send upon notification. In the circulating department the work is constantly increasing and the work done is very encouraging. On Tuesday one hundred and seventy books were loaned, and one hundred and sixty-four returned. This is the largest day's circulation since the department went into operation. For the benefit of business men, clerks and workingmen, the circulating department is now open on Saturday evenings from 7.30 to 9 o'clock, and quite a fair number have begun to avail themselves of it.

Borough Needs.

One of the greatest needs of the Borough of North Plainfield is a building to be used for the purposes of the meetings of the Council, the Board of Health and the Township Committee; where elections can be held; and also where the Mayor can hear complaints, and he or the justice can have their courts and trials. The laws regulating the government of boroughs also require the Mayor and Council to provide a "suitable place" as a lock-up. Yet our neighbors over-the-brook possess none of these conveniences nor necessities, although we believe there is not a public spirited boroughite that will not agree with us as to the need of all. The Council is now compelled to pay more in the way of rent for the room it uses than would be the amount of interest on a sum sufficient to erect a building that would cover all the needs enumerated. Much complaint, and justly too, has been made in relation to the lock-up at present in use. But the Mayor and Council are powerless to do better. Now at the coming Spring election, let our friends in North Plainfield by their votes authorize the Mayor and Council to borrow a sum sufficient for the purchase of a suitably located lot and the erection thereon of a public building containing these indispensable quarters—rooms for the meetings of the Council, its committees and the Township authorities; court room; place for elections and public meetings; lock-up, etc. The investment would be a paying one, and as the Borough grows the property would increase in value and the people would get the benefit of the increase as well as the continuous benefit of such conveniences as we speak of.

Personalia.

The Junior member of this establishment has been confined to his home the past few days by sickness.

Mrs. James Scott gave a tea at her residence on Seventh street and Plainfield avenue, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, to a large circle of church and society friends.

We learn with regret, as will his many friends, that Harry A. Thorne, Jr., who was recovering from a severe attack of Bronchitis, had a relapse Tuesday and is now very ill at his home on East Ninth street.

Mr. Ashland Horton, late the obliging manager of F. A. Pope's hat and gent's furnishing emporium, has severed his connection with that establishment and has not as yet decided which one of three excellent positions offered him to accept. Success to you Ashland, wherever you locate.

Isaac Bowman, well-known to many in this city, as a former clerk in Force's Hotel, died suddenly at his home in Annandale, on Saturday of last week of gastric fever. Mr. Bowman has for several months past acted as clerk in the Ten Eycke House, Somerville. He was a popular young man, and had many friends, who regret his early demise.

Postmaster Alpaugh, of Bound Brook, paid a fraternal visit to Postmaster Force, of this city, last Tuesday. Although Bound Brook cannot boast of having the free delivery system in the near future, it can pride itself upon the possession of a neat and cosy post office, with ample accommodations in the way of lock and call boxes, all furnished by the new P. M. who took formal possession of the office on Tuesday, Feb. 1st, from his predecessor, "Uncle Ben" Little, who has faithfully performed the duties of Postmaster for Bound Brook for a number of years.

Unpretentious But Excellent.

The concert given in Reform Hall, Tuesday evening, was in every respect the equal of any like entertainment with which our city has been favored for some time. The W. C. T. U., is to be congratulated on its good luck in securing the artists that formed the combination, and the large audience that was present will never be satisfied with just their one appearance. Mme Hun-King, the soprano, sang as clear and true as a bird, and her rendition of Delibes "Pizzicati" arranged with words, was an accomplishment of great credit. Miss Ollie Torbett displayed, in her playing of most difficult selections, expression unusual in a violinist of her sex, and her bowing was well nigh perfect. Dr. Carl E. Martin, basso, was as good as of old and only once or twice was guilty of a fault—or maybe an accident. Mr. Werden D. Loutrel, the tenor, was light of voice, but generally satisfactory. Mr. W. E. Taylor was a careful accompanist and an excellent performer whose piano solo, that opened the programme, was interrupted by the continuing arrival of the audience. Everybody and everything was encored. So thoroughly pleased a concert gathering we have seldom seen in this city. Individually it seemed surprised and amazed as though the treat was unexpected, and collectively it joined in successful efforts to obtain double the feast spread before it. These artists would be welcomed again in Plainfield. We have too few such concerts.

The Bicycle Fair.

The swell bazaar to be held in the parlors and club rooms of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, will undoubtedly be the event of the season in its way. The thousands of friends the Club's members number among the matrons and maidens of here and everywhere, have promised to flood the tables with elegant and desirable articles of use, value and ornament, that will bring scores of dollars into the treasury towards the cancelling of the indebtedness on the new Club House. The Fair Committee is composed of Secretary H. W. Stover, Chairman; and Messrs. A. L. C. Marsh, A. McKinney, F. L. C. Martin, F. Heyniger, C. Sandford and F. Van Buren. The members of the other committees are as follows: No. 1, Refreshment Committee—J. H. Cooley, M. D., T. S. Burr, J. M. Crane, H. Serrell. No. 2, Fancy Table—L. G. Timpson, R. Fairbairn, E. M. Van Buren, F. P. Van Buren, J. A. Worth. No. 3, Fancy Table—G. H. Squires, E. L. Waiz, F. W. Waiz, D. M. Runyon. No. 4, Fancy Table—F. L. C. Martin, J. M. Whitfield, Jr., H. M. Martin, A. G. Slevin. No. 5, Candy and Fruit—W. Serrell, I. Daniels, J. W. Sandford, Jr. No. 6, Floral Bower—H. W. Stover, F. W. Yates, J. B. Drayton. No. 7, Miscellaneous Com—F. D. Heyniger, R. F. Murray, R. Rushmore and A. L. C. Marsh. The youth and beauty among the young ladies of the city will grace the tables with their presence, and their sweet courtesy and sweet smiles will empty many a sweet pocket-book. The wheel-room will be devoted entirely to the purposes of the refreshment committee, while the parlors and billiard rooms will be filled with the other tables. We can promise there'll be no "Rebecca" at a lemonade tub, or other fruit from an open burr.

To Their National Commander.

At a regular Encampment of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, Department of New Jersey, Grand Army of the Republic, held January 26th, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to remove from our midst our late National Commander and Comrade, John A. Logan, and

WHEREAS, It is but just that a fitting recognition of his many virtues should be had, therefore be it

Resolved, By Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., that while we bow with humble submission to the will of the most High, we do not the less mourn for our Comrade who has been taken from us.

Resolved, That in the death of Comrade John A. Logan this Post laments the loss of a Comrade who was ever ready to proffer the hand of aid, and the voice of sympathy to the needy and distressed of the Grand Army, an active member of the order, whose utmost endeavors were extended for its welfare and prosperity, a friend and companion who was dear to us all, a citizen and statesman whose upright and noble life was a standard of emulation to his fellows.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Post be extended to his family in their affliction.

Resolved, That the Charter of this Post be draped for the space of sixty days, and exterior of Post Rooms for thirty days, that these resolutions be spread upon the Post minutes and a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of our deceased Comrade, and to each of the newspapers of Plainfield.

The Y's Reception.

Through the graciousness of Mrs. Charles Potter of Seventh street, her residence was thrown open for the purposes of a reception, Monday evening, by the members of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union to their friends and other invited guests. A large portion of the younger element of Plainfield's society were present, and enjoyed their own and one another's presence. A programme of remarkable variety was given during the evening, followed by refreshments towards morning. The programme opened with the "Zampa" overture that was tastefully performed by the Misses Potter, and which with Miss Jackson's brilliant execution of a most unpleasant selection, composed the evening's instrumental music—excepting the able piano accompaniments of Miss Young, and violin obligati by Mr. J. Sattels. In the way of vocal music, neither Miss Holmes nor Mrs. Collins did herself justice although the pleasure of their audiences was flatteringly expressed. A chorus of young ladies consisting of Miss Tomlinson, Miss Dorman, the Misses Holmes, Miss A. MaGee, Miss Paul, Miss D. Runyon, Miss Dunn, Miss Demarest, Miss Petrie, Miss Baker and Miss Thorne sang "Rest thee on this mossy pillow," and the "Sprite's Chorus" from Oberon, with praiseworthy result and apparent care in training. Messrs. Elmer Runyon and David Titsworth sang a well-known duett so acceptably that a recall followed. During the programme Miss Paul delivered in a most pleasing manner a little address that was supposed to set forth the purposes of the assembled Union. It was not sufficiently consistent with the occasion, however, to impress the listener with the association's sincerity of purpose or its probable accomplishment of any good. Miss Beecher read a selection in dialect, and the career of the reformed young man, from boots to bridle, was depicted in artistic tableaux. The Entertainment committee consisted of Miss Fay Young and Miss May Tomlinson. The members of the Reception committee were Miss Addie McGee, Miss Josie Drake and Miss Lillian Dorman.

Some one who has taken the trouble to find out how far a farmer must walk to put in and tend forty acres of corn, says to plow the ground with a sixteen-inch three-horse plow, he travels 350 miles; to harrow the ground thoroughly before planting he will have to travel 100 miles; to mark out the same he travels 50 miles; to cultivate it afterwards he will have to travel 200 miles, making a grand total of 600 miles, besides the gathering.

The Skating Rink Litigation.

Jones, vs. Dennis, et al. In Chancery of New Jersey. Memorandum of opinion: "The question in this case is of fact only. The defendant's position was clearly and concisely stated by their counsel to be that the sale was induced by representations made by the vendor on which the purchasers had a right to reply and did reply and which were false.

"I think this is not shown. It appears to me from the whole evidence that the representations were fairly within the line of recommendation, and were reasonably sustained by the facts; that defendants failed in their effort to show a fraudulent packing of the rink on the occasion mentioned; that they had ample opportunity to examine the accounts and availed themselves of it; and that so far as the failure of their enterprise can be accounted for on the evidence it was one partly to their own fault and partly to the general collapse of the skating rink business.

"Their conduct seems also to have been accordant with this view. They do not appear to have discovered that they had been defrauded until suit was brought.

"A decree should be made establishing the mortgage and dismissing the cross-bill with costs.

W. B. WILLIAMS, Adv. Master."

February 1, 1887.

Briefly stated, the facts out of which the different suits arose, as stated in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST at the time were the following: The Casino roller skating rink was built in October of 1884 and managed with great success by Mr. Millard R. Jones, a New York capitalist, until February 14th following, when he sold out to Joseph R. Dennis and James D. Wogtom for $10,000—$5,000 of which was paid down and to secure payment of the rest, a mortgage was given. The monthly payments on this mortgage not having been promptly made Mr. Jones brought suit on the covenants in the mortgage. J. B. Miller was appointed receiver by the court and ordered to sell the rink. Not over $1,000 was realized on this sale the skating rink business having gone to pieces. Dennis and Wogtom now brought a cross-suit in Chancery against Jones on allegations of fraud. They claimed that Jones defrauded them in grossly exagerating the profits which he had made, by packing the rink with dead heads, by concealing the true character of the employees and habitues of the rink, etc., and they insisted that for these reasons the court should cancel the mortgage and compel Jones to pay back all the money previously paid him besides damages and costs. Eighteen months were consumed in the taking of testimony, argument, etc., etc. It will be seen that besides the $10,000, damages and costs, there was involved in these suits the reputations of all parties concerned. Mr. Jones has won. He was always held in high esteem in Plainfield, and deservedly so. We are pleased to chronicle this important success of Corporation Counsel Marsh against eminent foreign counsel.

The devotional exercises with which our meetings are always opened, were on this occasion conducted by our national and state officers, so well and lovingly appreciated in Plainfield (Mrs. Anna M. Hammer and Mrs. J. T. Ellis), from the 6th chapter of Matthew and the 37th Psalm—words which tenderly reached many a waiting heart. The noon-tide prayer was offered by the first state president, Mrs. Mary Denman, and we could but feel, as we remembered that thousands of our women were at that moment bowed before the throne, that we might claim the promise: Even as ye will, shall it be done unto you, and the cause for which we are working shall in His own good way march on to victory.

The response to the address of welcome so cordially given by Mrs. Sherman Cooper, of Westfield, was responded to by Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer, welcomed to us not alone for her own sake; but our heartfelt sympathies were drawn to her in memory of her brother for whom the Nation mourned not very long ago.

The paper on "Social Purity," by Mrs. A. M. Powell, the superintendent of that department, which was read by herself, needed to be heard to be fully appreciated. It thrilled to the soul each mother and sister who were there represented and stirred in us all both desire and purpose, that in our teachings and associations we should combine virtue with temperance; always bearing in mind the promise that the "pure in heart shall see God."

All of the exercises, including not only the reports of work accomplished during the past year, but also the plans arranged for the coming months—a detailed account of which could not be given in a condensed report—were intensely interesting, and when the hour arrived when we were to "go our ways" into the little portion of His world, as the Master should lead, I am sure we all felt what a privilege it had been for us to be there, and were truly grateful.

A report is current that the temperance people of this State are making arrangements to prosecute a vigorous war against the liquor interest this year. A stock company which will publish temperance documents is being organized. The headquarters of the concern will be either in Elizabeth or Newark, where a publishing house will be maintained.

CHERRY blossoms in January is a sure sign that the cherries will be nipped in the bud.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

The Granger property, consisting of house, barn and six acres, have been sold to a Mr. Strauss of Plainfield, for $1,850.

Consternation gave place to indignation on Friday last when the Constable appeared with calls for Deputy Sheriffs to join the ranks at Amboy. General opinion is against the necessity of the expense as trouble is not anticipated and if a breach of the peace occurred the Militia should be called upon, in which event the State, instead of the county, would be called upon to foot the bill. Thirty-seven recruits left for the scene of action on Monday last.

Castle Thunder abandoned. The portion of the Rogers colony enjoying this title took their departure for pastures new. In a conversation with one of the workers, I found considerable feeling at the low price paid for work. He said, "just fancy being required to make coats for twelve cents each for which in New York I can get eighteen cents, and heavy overcoats, lined with canvass, with padding and stitching I am expected to turn out with the buttons sewed on for fifteen cents, and for which in New York they pay twenty-two to twenty-five cents. In four weeks I have been enabled to send my wife one dollar and fifty cents a week and I have three dollars left—not living but barely existing and hardly a place to sleep." Whilst pity can be felt for such a deplorable condition of the labor market, no regret will be expressed for the absence of what have been looked upon as a most undesirable class of residents.

On Tuesday morning last another burglary was committed at the post office. If the gang were disturbed upon the occasion of their last visit they must have been surprised this time. They were seen to break open the door by watchmen two entering and a third one keeping guard, who was doubly surprised at the close proximity of a Colt, the discharge from which was near enough to be unpleasant, and it is believed from his exclamation of oh! oh! that he carries a mark with him. The bullets grazed the fence and from their position show they were fired by a cool determined man. The guard fled and the entrance to the store covered, the vigilant watch dog being certain of his game, but, alas! the key had been left in the back door, enabling the burglars to escape and notwithstanding that within a few minutes several citizens were on the spot, the burglars were not captured. Their liberty I hope will be of short duration. Suspicion points strongly, but it would be unwise to say more. The record will appear in future editions. BROAD BRIM.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Mr. John H. Briggs, of Broad street, has been confined to the house for the past two weeks by sickness.

The new Baptist parsonage on Elm street is rapidly approaching completion and will be an ornament to that street.

Henry Dougherty, our popular blacksmith, has again taken his old stand on Central avenue, at John S. Irving's steam mill.

The dog trial came to a quick conclusion on Saturday morning last, owing to an error in the summons, it being returnable January 29, 1886.

The Town Committee met last week and transacted considerable business of importance, preparatory to the making up of the annual township statement.

David T. Pierson, Collector, filed with the County Clerk on Tuesday last the list of delinquent taxpayers on real estate, as he is required to do on or before Feb. 1st.

The colored residents propose having a ball in Arcanum Hall on the evening of Feb. 22d. The fact of its being under the charge of Prof. John W. Nelson, insures a successful affair.

A number of our young boys are in the habit of stoning and annoying our little Frenchman, who has a small house at West End. They are known, and if it is not stopped an example will be made of them.

A large number of the friends of our former hotel proprietor, Mr. Samuel Godshalk, went from our town on Thursday evening of last week to attend the opening of his new hotel, known as "Clifton Grove," near Passaic.

In the matter of the applications of a number of the residents of our town to the Court of Common Pleas on Wednesday last, for the appointment of six surveyors of highways to vacate a new road recently laid out by the surveyors known as Ackerman avenue, it was postponed until March 2d next.

There is no doubt but that in the near future we will have a first-class hotel and boarding house on the block of land on South avenue, between the Boulevard and Summit avenue. It is as fine a location as any on the line of the Central Railroad, high ground and splendid views in all directions.

The overseer of road district No. 8 ought to attend to and repair the side and crosswalks in some parts of his district, especially that portion of the sidewalk on Broad street, near the M. E. church, which has at least four inches of mud on the boards. In rainy weather it is almost impassable for a female, and it is our principal street.

The Hook and Engine company will give an entertainment at Arcanum Hall on Thursday evening, Feb. 10th. The proceeds are for the purpose of purchasing an additional supply of hose for the company's new engine. The programme is an interesting one: Fitzgerald and Rigby's great comedy success—"Who Owns the Trunk." Every one of our residents should purchase at least one ticket, as the proceeds are to be devoted to the purchase of hose for the protection of our firesides.

What is a Cold in the Head? Medical authorities say it is due to atmospheric germs, uneven clothing of the body, rapid cooling when in a perspiration, etc. The important point is, that a cold in the head is a positive disorder, an inflammation of the lining membrane of the nose, which, when unchecked, is certain to produce a catarrhal condition—for catarrh is essentially a "cold" which nature is no longer able to "resolve" or throw off. Ely's Cream Balm has proved its superiority, and sufferers from cold in the head should resort to it before that common ailment becomes seated and ends in positive catarrh.

MISCELLANEOUS READING

EDITORIAL MENTION.

A Philadelphia newspaper desires its readers to believe that a large terrapin was nailed in a box and given neither food nor drink for three months, and that when it was taken out it was found to weigh an ounce more than it did when it was put in.

The Baltimore American wants to know "why time is represented by a man?" That's an easy one. Time has to keep moving. When woman reach a certain age time for them comes to a sudden halt and after that it takes about fifty months to make a year.

The first bill introduced in the House this year was by Assemblyman Wolverton, and it calls for a reduction of the rate of interest to five per cent. There seems a growing demand for such a reduction. The more this measure is discussed, the more popular it becomes.

A pastor in a State adjoining this, preaching from the text, "Beware of covetousness," said: "Last Sunday night the collection in this house amounted to one dollar and eighty cents; and the dollar was thrown in by a Baptist brother from Richmond, Va., who happened to be here and did not know any better. The other six hundred of you dropped in the eighty cents."

If there be a Democrat in the Legislature of New Jersey who contemplates voting for a Republican for United States Senator, he must also be thinking of changing his residence and moving out of the country. The home that once knew him would know him no more, and, if he had a soul, his guilty conscience would still goad him, and forever, no matter on what part of God's footstool he might burrow.—Warren Democrat.

Twenty States in which State elections were seriously contested in 1886 show a net Democratic plurality of 45 188 votes. In 1884 the same States gave a net Republican plurality of 146,612 votes. This Democratic gain of nearly 200,000 is an indication of the increased strength of the Democratic party under the administration of President Cleveland. We commend those figures to the serious consideration of the friends of Mr. Blaine.

The Rahway Censor makes a suggestion that may be adopted with profit by the Democrats in the future. It says that if the Senate next year should be Democratic and the House contain a sufficient Democratic majority to give it control, then it will be in order to tell the Senate it will not organize until the Senate binds itself to go into joint meeting for "the offices." Why not? The refusal of the Senate before this to do its constitutional duty has lost the Democrats the Comptrollership of the State.

The honorable and patriotic course of Hon. Robert Hudspeth, of Hudson, during these days that have tried the souls and exhausted the patience of Democrats, has greatly endeared him to his party, and won for him golden opinions from all quarters. He has shown himself worthy of the honor his party would fain have bestowed. The Democratic party has use for such men and his gallant conduct during the opening days of the 111th Legislature will be remembered, to his credit.—Hackettstown Gazette.

There will be a Norwegian in the Fiftieth Congress in the place of the late Mr. Price, of Wisconsin, and he will be one of the greatest men so far as expansion is concerned. Nils Haugen is six feet four inches and weighs three hundred pounds. He is thoroughly American in speech and manner, however, having come to this country when a baby. He was educated at Ann Arbor, Michigan, and has been in the Wisconsin Legislature for several terms. He has been State Railroad Commissioner since 1882, and is also a stenographer, having made his living reporting at court at one time.

Congress has passed the bill making a uniform allowance of twelve dollars a month to all disabled or dependent soldiers and sailors of any war, and the dependent parents of soldiers and sailors. It is thought the bill will pass the Senate and become a law. This will lower the surplus revenue several millions annually, and therefore some of our exchanges are disposed to oppose the measure. If it is right to pension soldiers who feel the effect of privations, exposures or wounds, twenty years after the close of the war, it is equally right to pension those whose physical disabilities prevent them from earning a livelihood, though that disability has no connection with their services in the army whatever. The one class is entitled to as much consideration as the other.

Gov. Green's inaugural address has met with the indorsement of the entire Democratic press, and no newspaper, save those which find it impossible to disguise their submission to corporations and slavish corporate influence, has found fault with it. It did not require that the Governor should play the demagogue to the workingmen of the State in order to secure their approbation; nor has he done so. He is simply in line with his Democratic predecessor, and in line with the Democratic Governor of the State of New York, on this question; all of them speak the sentiments of the Democratic party, a party made up chiefly of the horny-handed, hard-fisted wage-workers of the country, who find in nearly every Democratic representative, in the State or nation, one who represents them and respects their interests.—Newark Journal.

As to the present condition of Democracy and what it is doing, General Black, Commissioner of Pensions, gives a picture in a recent letter to Allen G. Thurman, which is calculated to rejoice the heart of every one to whom success is dear. Said he: "A triumphant Democracy administers the affairs of the Republic. Quietly but positively the reforms that have long been demanded by the people, so far as the Administrative branch of the Government is concerned, are in vigorous effect. Economy and law are the standards of official action. Partisanship does not now throw its sword into the scales of justice. Submission to assessments by public officials for partisan purposes is not a condition of public service. Contracts are not let to the highest partisan bidder, and the public lands are safe within the pale of the statutes." What more could be said in behalf of the great party which has brought about these things in the brief space of twenty-two months?

It is true, as one of our exchanges remarks, that if New Jersey is to have another Democratic United States Senator, it should be Leon Abbett. He fought the fight and he won the battle. To him, if any one, belongs the trophies. There should be no thought of another as long as there is a possibility of electing him.

Our Legislature should take hold of the coal mine question. Law regulates almost everything in these days and it is about time it took hold of coal syndicates. We are with the strikers this time. We don't believe they get enough wages, and do believe that reductions in wages are purposely made by the coal companies in order to cause strikes and raise the price of coal. This is infamous and should be thwarted by legislation if possible.—Jamesburg Record.

We re-publish the closing sentences of Gov. Green's inaugural address. Their familiar ring is pleasing. Listen to them:

"In the vanguard of the colonies, New Jersey's first Constitution was adopted by its provincial Congress two days before the Declaration of Independence. Though her territory is small, glorious recollections of the past cluster round her every field. In every national trial her sons have added to the lustre of her glory. No stain marks her history; no spot ever sullied the purity of her ermine. Keep her escutcheon clean, and pure, and bright. Let no act of ours bring discredit to her fair name—advance her in her prosperity, industries and development. Hasten the day when inequalities and unjust discriminations shall no longer exist—when it can be truly said, that under the law and by the law every Jerseyman is the equal of his brother, from the iron mountains of Sussex to where old Ocean breaks in ceaseless music upon the sands of Cape May."

Mr. Fitzgerald, the new Democratic collector at Boston, in his speech at the recent Jackson banquet in that city, said: "I may be speaking in the presence of some men who have been disappointed in not getting what they wanted under this administration, but I tell you, gentlemen, that when we go before the people in the next Presidential canvass we will find that Grover Cleveland's position in relation to federal office-holders interfering in politics and his relation to the civil service reform will be the strongest arguments that can be urged for the election of a Democratic President. If the Democratic party is to be successful it must nominate, two years hence, some man like Grover Cleveland. I give you this toast: May the Democracy be as honest in carrying out the platform as the President whom we elected but the other day."

An exchange says: "Is it not strange that New Jersey has no Executive Mansion for its Governor to reside in during his term of office? Nearly every other State in the Union has one, and the Governor knows where he is expected to reside during his term. In this State every time a new Executive is elected, a few days before the time for his inauguration he may be seen running around the city of Trenton trying to find a suitable place of residence that will come within his means. Now this is all wrong. New Jersey is rich enough to afford a house for her Chief Executive to dwell in. Let the matter be attended to at the coming session of the Legislature. We hope some member will immortalize himself by introducing a bill and getting an appropriation made for this purpose. It is no wonder people of other States make fun of New Jersey, when she is too mean to provide a suitable residence for her Chief Executive.

Gov. Green is in favor of railroad taxation and that at rates equal to the tax levied upon others, within constitutional limits always. He is in favor of labor having all the rights and privileges that can be bestowed upon it consistent with the rights of capital, and he thinks that for each it is necessary that they work in harmony as friends and colaborers, and not as enemies. He favors a constitutional convention and gives good reason for holding it. He stands forth the friend and aider, not the apologist as some are, of the President and the Administration, in all of which he strikes the popular chord. Many old Democrats remarked that his inauguration was more imposing and more generally attended by the Democratic masses than any for years, and that the sympathy and kindly feeling of all, irrespective of clique or division on local matters, went out to Governor Green in the fullest degree, showing that implicit trust is placed in him.

Gov. Green's suggestion in favor of a constitutional convention is meeting with general approval. The needs of such a body are self-evident, and the Legislature can not very well refuse to refer to the people the question of whether they want a convention or not. That the affirmative vote would be largely in a majority there is not the slightest doubt. The convention could very easily be so constituted as to give neither party any undue advantage, and the closeness with which the votes of the State are politically divided would absolutely prevent the adoption of any proposition which did not generally commend itself to popular judgment. The present Constitution is behind the age, and some of the recent amendments have not tended to improve it. A convention composed of the leading minds of the State would evolve many new thoughts, and would adopt such provisions as would more aptly fit the situation which it is called upon to meet.—True American.

The Republicans pledged themselves to eradicate polygamy in 1856, more than thirty years ago. They held power for nearly a quarter of a century and as Mormonism still flourishes, it is left for the Democrats to perform a duty which the Republicans neglected or else could not do. Of course, everybody desires that the "twin relic of barbarism" shall be destroyed, if it can be without straining the Constitution. Hon. Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, who reported the anti-Mormon bill, held that there was nothing in it that could hurt the conscience even of a Mormon. If he thought there was he said he would vote against it. Now that the anti-Mormon bill has been passed by the House, one hears a good many comments which indicate an appreciation of the severity of the measure. It not only makes polygamy a felony, but dissolves the financial corporations known as the Latter Day Saints, and the Perpetual Emigration Fund Company, and practically abolishes all the machinery, religious or political, that is now employed directly or indirectly in the maintenance of the Mormon Church system. There are differences of opinion as to the wisdom and justice of the policy, but the friends of the measure just passed assume that the malady is of such a terrible nature as to require heroic treatment. Its opponents say it would be better to wait upon the slow attritions of time and the pressure of public opinion to wear the evil out.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y
By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific. The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE
Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.
ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLEEPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and [illegible] Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE
Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown. A short desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points.
All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly attention.

PYÆMIA
Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA
Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is also the only one that will cleanse the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of Women frequently suffer from it. The only medicine that, while purifying the blood, enriches it with new vitality, and invigorates the whole system, is Poetry.

THE MODEL EDITOR.

A man who runs a paper should know every human caper, and hold up the torch of knowledge like a gleaming midnight taper. He should be profound as Plato, pliant as a boiled potato and as humble to his patrons as a street and crossing scraper.

He should honor in his journal every captain, crank and colonel, and dish up their proud achievements in a hodge-podge cooked diurnal. He should puff—the flavored bar—clubs and concerts, church and choir, with long adjectives sonorous, sweet, seraphic and supernal.

He must write the funny column that makes all his readers solemn, with the fashions, frills and flounces, furbelows and—what d'ye call 'em? Quell the copy fiend's wild revel, squelch and massacre the devil, and put on a brow of thunder that shall pearlly and appeal 'em.

He must be a news reflector of the lyceum and lector, and rain down his taffy torrents on the veteran milk inspector. He must be a prompt adviser to each foreign king and kaiser, and keep out his key-hole telescope to dodge the bill collector.

THE DEVIL IN QUEST OF A WIFE.

Miss Allen recited "The Devil in Quest of a Wife," a satirical poem which seems to be the reigning favorite in New York. It is said that a New York belle with coquettish and flirtatious tendencies stole a lover from a Philadelphia girl, who has sought to revenge herself in verse. I will quote enough to show the idea:

His majesty Satan one morning awoke
And found that his wife was dead.
And he said to himself: This is really no joke,
For my household requires a head.
And where shall I find on this limited earth
A creature to fill such a difficult berth?

He states the multitudinous qualifications necessary, then sets forth "on his anxious quest for a lady to go below." He tried his various fortune in England, France, Spain, etc.:

But why should I tell of his lengthened walk
And of all the countries he tried?
Till he suddenly thought, one fine day, of New York,
And instantly hitherward hied,
But quick as he was, the women were ready,
Their heads were clear and their hands were steady.

They took one look, and they looked him through,
And knew what he wanted at once,
And innocence beamed from their orbs of blue,
And candor was queen for the nonce.
Oh, you should have seen how their eyelids fell
As they timidly asked him the news from ——!

The Devil was flattered and flurried and pleased.
"What grace, what refinement, what sense!"
How quickly his half-expressed ideas were seized,
And nothing he said gave offense.
He never felt so much at home before
And liked and admired them more and more.

But time was pressing, he could not wait,
Tho' he scarcely knew how to choose,
So he off'red his crown, his royal state,
Himself and his dead wife's shoes,
To a damsel whose candor and virtue and tact
Were all that the devil himself could exact.

She accepted the offer, and did not repent
When the day of her wedding drew nigh;
For she knew that to —— was an easy descent
And her friends would all come by-and-by.
So the Devil declared himself more and more blessed,
As the innocent creature he tenderly pressed.

But when she was married and safely installed
As queen in the regions of shade,
'Tis said that the Devil was somewhat appalled
At the bargain he found he had made.
And thought, on the whole, 'twould have been as well
Had he staid at home and married in ——.

Miscellaneous Reading.

TROUBLE, TEARS AND FINAL BLISS.

On the wide piazza of the "Fair View Hotel" the usual groups of people were scattered. The children running up and down, their elders enjoying the prospect of the broad river which lay below the hill on which the hotel was situated, the little sail boats here and there, the ranges of mountains in the distance, and the pleasant afternoon sunshine brightening all.

An elderly lady sat at one end of the porch with a book which she was not reading, in her lap, while a young man was leaning over the back of her chair watching the groups of people and now and then addressing a few words to her.

They were evidently mother and son. Both had clean cut, aristocratic faces, between which a strong resemblance was traceable. Both were handsome, but there was a certain look of hardness in hers which had in it something a little repellant and without which the young man's face was the more attractive.

"Well mother mine, I thing you are going to be very comfortable here for a few weeks, don't you?" the son said after a pause. "It seems as if things were satisfactory."

"The view is fine," she replied, "but it is not always well to judge of a place on too short an acquaintance."

"What a sweet face! what a pretty girl! is she not?" indicating by a touch on her arm the person to whom he referred.

She was a slight girl in a black dress, who now stood leaning against a pillar watching a party of children. What one noticed was the perfect contour of her face and head, the soft brown eyes, and a certain sensitive curve about the mouth, which yet had something very winning in its expression. Her dress had a nameless look of belonging exclusively to its wearer, an individuality about it.

"It is rather an insipid face, I think, and she lacks style," was the response. "That is a handsome girl at the other end of the piazza." She was both tall and fine looking, and dressed in the extreme of the fashion. Whether he was in a contrary humor he did not know, but she seemed to suggest to Henry Faulkner's mind the idea of a figure specially planned to show off the fine clothes. And after a momentary glance, his eye wandered back to the face that had first attracted him.

But evidently he and his mother were not amiably inclined this afternoon, and he ventured no further observation on the subject. Disagreement with her even in small matters was disagreeable to him, and he had beside an indolent love of peace. So he generally yielded to her whenever it was possible rather than have any discussion.

Presently she rose and entered the house, whereupon he took a paper from his pocket and seated himself a little nearer to the group that he had been watching. A low, musical voice seemed in harmony with the appearance of the young girl that he found himself enjoying the melody of its tones, though scarcely catching her words.

The house was large and crowded with guests, and it was some days before Henry Faulkner again saw, or at least had anything to do with the girl he had so admired.

Meanwhile his mother had found some friends and made other acquaintances. Among the latter was the tall, fine looking girl whom she had first noticed, and to whom, after a brief acquaintance he was bound to admit he had done injustice. Miss Isabella Peyton, unexceptionable in appearance, in manners, and in social standing, was also a very lady like and pleasant person.

"Miss Peyton looks as she is, a thorough aristocrat." Mrs. Faulkner observed.

"I consider Miss Peyton a very agreeable girl," she said on another occasion; from which her son was led to infer that the young lady had made considerable advances in his mother's favor. Not the easiest thing to do, for like the mothers of most single and only sons, she thought few women his equal, and watched with a jealous eye any who came near him.

"Who is that pretty young girl in slight mourning?" he asked with apparent carelessness as he and Miss Peyton were standing talking together on the porch one morning after breakfast. "Do you happen to know?" "Yes," she answered. "She is a Miss Faith Devine, who is a sort of governess for my aunt's, Mrs. Suydam's, children. She has not been with them very long," she continued, seeing a look of interest on his face, "and I believe is the daughter of a country clergyman. She is a pretty little thing. And now you are possessed of all the information of which I am mistress," she added, smiling.

"And quite enough to satisfy idle curiosity. Thanks," he responded, as she turned to leave him.

A few hours later while wandering over the grounds Henry Faulkner came upon a pretty picture: Miss Devine with one of the small Suydams in her arms. The little golden head was pillowed against her shoulder and she was singing an old song in a sweet, low voice. She sat on the edge of a bank and did not hear him as he approached. But the child started up with a sudden movement and fell over. Henry sprang down and picked up the little one; happily it was not a stony place.

"More frightened than hurt I fancy," he said, looking up to the girl who stood above him pale with terror. And then he clambered up and restored the sobbing baby to the arms held out to receive her.

"You are more hurt than little Miss Tottie," he said kindly, noting how slowly the color came back to the girl's cheeks.

"Oh!" she replied, "if she had fallen on rocks it might have killed her!"

It had been Henry Faulkner's lot to meet, in the social circle in which he moved, many beautiful and charming women, and he had looked at them with critical admiration. But now, for the first time, in this obscure little country girl, he had met the woman that he felt he could love, and though he might admit there were others with greater claim to beauty, none had ever seemed to him so sweet and winning.

Never a day passed after this that he did not manage to secure a few words or a look from her. He noted with indignation sometimes that she was set aside and slighted by the more fashionable girls around her. But she was sensitive and retiring, and her duties kept her occupied, so that she avoided coming in contact with them.

A drive up the mountain had been arranged for a moonlight evening, and it was taken as a matter of course that Mr. Faulkner would be of the party.

"Is not Miss Devine going?" he asked of the girl who was talking to him. Faith sat near, her head bent over a piece of embroidery. Thus constrained the girl turned and said ungraciously, "Are you? Do you wish to go, Miss Devine?"

He saw the sensitive lip quiver and the color rush to her face, and blamed himself angrily that he had brought it upon her.

"Thank you, no. I did not expect to be included," was the quiet reply.

An hour later he found Faith, for a wonder alone, sitting under a tree on the steep side of the bank. He came up to her eagerly.

"Miss Devine, I don't consider myself bound to that party at all. I will be a glorious night. Let me take you out on the river?"

A look of delight came into the girl's face. How she longed to go! It seemed hard, young as she was, that she should be cut off from all sorts of pleasure.

"I won't take no for an answer," he said, noting her expression. "If you won't ask Mrs. Suydam, I will."

"Oh no! I will!" she exclaimed in a half frightened voice, and so yielded.

The children were in bed and could be left in charge of a nurse and Mrs. Suydam herself was going out, so Faith obtained consent; though it was a cool and rather surprised one. Mrs. Faulkner had not been well for a day or two and was lying down, so that she was not appraised of the expedition.

The light of the full moon shone on the river and seemed to etherialize Faith's wrapt countenance as she sat in the boat opposite her companion. She wore a soft gray dress with white flowers at her throat, and hummed gently to herself to the cadence of the oars. "Sing!" he said entreatingly and in a sweet, plaintive voice she began, "A mill wheel ceaseless turneth."

There was witchery in the hour and in the music, and as the last notes ceased he drew still nearer.

"Faith, you were never meant to battle with this world. Let me take care of you, for I love you, dear?"

And under the moon and stars of that glorious night it seemed to Henry Faulkner and Faith Devine as if they walked hand in hand into paradise.

"You will speak to your mother and I will write home at once," the girl said, as she bade her lover good night, a cloud for a moment obscuring the peaceful serenity of her face.

"Yes, yes," he answered, "but nothing must part us."

It seemed a harder task than he had anticipated when he came to talk to his mother the next morning. In truth he had not meant to speak to Faith until he had consulted her, but could not find it in his heart to regret his precipitation. Mrs. Faulkner listened in cold silence to his somewhat lamely told story, but she broke out at last, almost fiercely:

"You with your birth and prospects to marry a nursery governess! I will never consent to it! Never!"

"But mother," he interrupted, appalled at her vehemence, "I love her, and I have told her so."

"I will not even discuss it," she answered. "You can choose between us. I am not at all well this morning and I beg you will spare me any further argument and be so good as to leave the room."

He complied silently and with a painful heart sickening went in search of Faith. He found her in a distant part of the grounds; the children playing not far off. She read his disturbance in his face.

"Your mother?" she queried. "Is not very well;" he answered hesitatingly, "and to be candid with you, she does not seem very much pleased; but I hope she will get over it."

Faith turned very pale. "I cannot marry you if it is to part you from your mother," she said. "You are all she has; I must not come between you."

"Be patient!" he pleaded. "It will all come right in the end." But she shook her head sadly. "It was too good to be true. I might have known."

A telegram called Mr. Faulkner away on business for twenty-four hours, and for the first time he and his mother parted coldly. On his return he found her seriously ill. The physician who had been summoned looked very grave over the case, admitting that it might prove to be an infectious fever and one of long duration.

The character of the disease spread alarm through the hotel and already the people were beginning to leave. Henry Faulkner was distressed and worried, and longed as he had often done for some near female relative.

Faith came to him and said very quietly, "Let me nurse your mother? Mrs. Suydam can spare me and I am not afraid."

"It would be an infinite relief to me," he answered, "but I ought not to let you expose yourself, every one is flying, and," he added with hesitation, "it is too much to ask of you, and beside she might not be willing."

"You did not ask me," she said smiling. I have spoken to the doctor, he is willing to accept me and says she is too ill to be conscious who has charge." So it was finally settled and Faith was installed as nurse.

Hours melted into days, days into weeks and Mrs. Faulkner's life hung in the balance, while doctor and nurse fought as if it were with death. Never in his life had such a burden of anxiety rested upon Henry. He loved his mother dearly; yet he feared also for the health and strength of the woman who was, if possible, still dearer to him. "Oh Faith," he said one day, "the doctor tells me I shall owe my mother's life to you." "Please God we shall save her," was the answer of the faithful nurse.

The crisis passed and gradually the patient came back to life and consciousness. She evidently recognized Faith, but accepted her ministrations and said no word.

She was gaining strength, however, and at last one day she spoke: "girl, do you want to marry my son!"

"I love him," said Faith simply, "but I could not part him from his mother."

"You have saved my life," said the elder woman. "I will not be ungrateful. Face to face with death many things look different to us. Call Henry to me."

He came with a look of light-heartedness such as he had not worn for many a day.

"Be happy in your own way," she said, clasping their hands together; and side by side they knelt by her couch, with a thanksgiving in their hearts.

We doubt if the editor of any one of our New York dailies could compress so much interesting reminiscences into so little space. We also question whether in the whole rank and file of New York newspaperdom there will be found a thousandth part of the frankness displayed by this Texas brother in his graphic portrayal of those personal characteristics which go to make up the successful journalist of to-day.

A BIG SNAKE BITE HEALER.

Not very long since a man known as Baptiste Ricquar, of Creole-French descent, died on his farm near Kaskaskia, Illinois. For nearly half a century previous to his death he was credited with the remarkable gift of healing snake bites, and of being on familiar terms with the most venomous reptiles this country afforded. It was said this power had been given him by a Canadian on his death-bed in return for some important service, or as an act of friendship. The conditions or circumstances attending the transfer of this curious knowledge never were learned with certainty, as its possessor was extremely jealous of it, guarding it with the greatest care, and revealed it to no one until the hour of his death, when he imparted the gift to his eldest son, who cannot be induced to speak of it in the presence of strangers. There is, however, an abundance of living evidence of Ricquar's power to cure the bites of snakes without the use of any kind of medicine, and of his apparent love of fellowship with and control over all kinds of snakes. He would never consent to their being killed or injured, and it is said that he kept the largest and most venomous specimens about his place, and that they would approach him to be caressed, or disappear into their hiding places at his will. Whenever a person within reach of old Baptiste was bitten, he was usually sent for to relieve the pains and render the poison innocuous. In this he never failed. He simply placed his hands upon the wound and cautioned the sufferer not to take any medicine offered by others. It would insult him highly if asked how much he charged for his services, and would only accept something, whatever it might be, if offered as a present upon some other occasion. Being a devout Catholic, his gift brought him into bad repute with the parish priest, who, as the story goes, forbade him partaking of the holy sacrament unless he foreswore the exercise of his black art. The bishop, however, during one of his periodical visits to the parish, is said to have had an interview with the offending parishioner. He inquired of Ricquar how he came by the gift, and why he did not, at the command of the priest, abjure such uncanny practices. Ricquar responded that he had no compact with the evil one, nor was there anything wicked about it. How could there be any harm, he argued, in saving the life of a fellow-creature, when it was so easily done. He had resolved many times to give up the use of it, but when an excited neighbor came begging him to come and save a little child, or the wife who had been bitten, he could not refuse, even at the risk of losing favor in the Church. He was granted a dispensation by the bishop to participate in the comforts of the communion without revealing his art at confession, and when he died he was honored with a perpetual resting place in St. Mary of Help Cemetery.

BILL NYE IN A NEW ROLE.

Mr. Bill Nye is responsible for the following fond, paternal epistle. It will be noted that he sets a shining example to other men of means by submitting in advance an outline of his proposed will for the consideration of his heirs:

HUDSON, Wis., Jan. 20.

MY DEAR HENRY: This is a dictated letter. The thoughts are mine but the penmanship is that of a man named Beasley, who is doing the chores for us this Winter. My reason for hiring a private secretary is that last Tuesday the straw*berry blonde Shote slumped through* a hole in the ice, and in striving to rescue him from a watery grave I fell and broke one of my legs, just above the fetlock.

Kind friends came from everywhere to ask me if it hurt much, and in a thousand different ways showed their gentle desire to draw me into a spirited conversation. A doctor came down from the Insanitarium to set the leg, and tied his horse to a little sugar maple tree that I set out last Spring. When he puts in his bill for medical attendance he will be surprised to find an offset of eighty cents for that tree. I may be slightly crippled, but you can announce in your valuable paper that there are no flies on me to speak of.

While spread out here with nothing to do my mind has been quite active, and I have had drawn off for me the following outlines of a will, which I send you inclosed herewith. "Please read and return," as it says on the Bible rack on board the cars:

Know all men by these presents, that I, the subscriber, being of sound mind and realizing that I am now under the doctor's care, and therefore may be swept into eternity any moment, do hereby make, execute and publish this my last will and testament firmly by these presents:

First—I hereby appoint my beloved wife Henriette to be my sole executrix, assignee and receiver of my entire estate, with full powers to pay taxes on said estate forever, and to have and to hold the same so long as grass grows and water runs, together with such other and further relief as the Court may adjudge.

Second—I hereby request that the red horse Napoleon be sold and the proceeds thereof used towards defraying my funeral expenses, provided that the sum of twenty-five dollars therefrom be set aside for the purpose of maintaining a large, aggressive, bulldog, whose duty it shall be to monkey o'er my lowly grave until my dust shall be of no use to science. It is my desire that my executrix shall so maintain said bulldog hereinbefore set forth in order that pimply young medical students may not make too free with all that is mortal of a superior man. It is my special desire that no part of my economy shall contribute in any way to science or to the amusement of a class of sore-eyed goslings, who cannot get near enough to a live man to operate on him.

I desire to state also that I hope whatever may be odd or eccentric or abnormal about my formation may be generously allowed to pull oblivion over itself and fade away. I do not wish to be perpetuated in the form of a fatty tumor or osseous formation. Let my good deeds be my only monument. Let the postmortem in my case be omitted and the time be taken up in some other way.

I request also that at my funeral the free-list be suspended and that those only who have a personal interest in the proceedings be permitted to take part. Persons who make the funeral industry a business or rely upon it as means of relaxation are requested to abstain from from my funeral as a personal favor to me.

I give and bequeath, make over and present to my beloved wife Henriette, all and singular, my real and personal property, aside from said horse Napoleon, heretofore enumerated and set aside for funeral purposes, to have and to hold all said property during her lifetime, and after that the said real and personal property to pass to my beloved son, Henry, who is engaged in publishing a paper at two dollars per year. To said beloved son Henry I also bequeath all my wardrobe. I have worn out his old lawn-tennis and polo clothes while he was attending college, using his boating and baseball suits for underclothing during the Winter, and now that I am about to pass on I leave my own clothing to him as a slight testimonial of my appreciation for his kindness to me when I had no polo suit of my own. I also direct that an obituary, consisting of forty lines, relative to me be printed in my son's paper, solid, at ten cents per line, to follow pure reading matter, for which the sum of twenty-four dollars will be found in an old sock in my escritoire in the barn. I do not care for the obituary, but desire to aid a panting, struggling enterprise.

It is also my desire that all my debts contracted during life be paid up after my death. My object in dying is not in any way to evade the payment of my debts.

I may add to this will, from time to time, as anything good suggests itself. In the meantime let me hear from you ever and anon. Tell us how you come on with your new paper and whether you have contributed any more of your thumbs to your new job press or not.
Respectfully, your father, BILL NYE.

When that sweeping pension bill was rushed through the lower House of Congress providing for dependent parents and soldiers, and sailors who received no injuries during their term of service, but are simply too old or too feeble to work, all reasonable people felt that the matter had been overdone. If the Senate passed this bill also, the next step will be to pension everybody who ever had anything to do with any of the wars. One fourth of the national revenue is already paid out in pensions. In round numbers, eight hundred millions have been taken out of the United States Treasury for this purpose since the war. All the powers of Europe combined, with their immense armies and frequent wars, do not pay out as much for pensions as does the United States.

A report is current that the temperance people of this State are making arrangements to prosecute a vigorous war against the liquor interest this year. A stock company which will publish temperance documents is being organized. The headquarters of the concern will be either in Elizabeth or Newark, where a publishing house will be maintained. The company will start newspapers in Warren, Sussex, Monmouth, Somerset, Middlesex, Morris, Hudson, Essex, Ocean, Mercer, Burlington, Union and Cumberland counties. The officers of the company will have general charge of the papers. A corps of popular temperance writers will furnish the editorials for the several papers, while local editors will furnish local news for each one. The profits will be devoted for several years to increasing the business of the company.

"I FORGET; I USED TO KNOW!"

The above, nine times out of ten, will be the answer one will receive by asking either one of the following simple questions:

"How much is a billion?
Who is acting Vice President?
Who was the first Vice President?
How many Vice Presidents are living?
How many States are there in the Union?
What are the Seven Wonders of the World?
Who is United States Marshal for New Jersey?
How many counties are there in New Jersey?
How many Congressional Districts are there in the State?
How many of the States and their Capitals can you name?

THE HIGH TONED THEATRE USHER.

Nothing insults a high toned usher more than for a smart Aleck to come, find his own seat and sit down. It rattles him, and he is afraid the manager will say that he is not fast enough or else Tom, Dick and Harry would never have found their seats without being shown. I throw it out to theatre goers as a pointer, never try to find your seat in a theatre, even if you know it, but permit the usher to find it for you! The usher conceives a dislike to you at once if you do without him, and he says to himself: "If all should find their seats as he did my occupation would be gone." The usher rarely ever rises above his position, but from year to year follows the same beaten track. Some of them look upon the wine when it is red after the performance is over. They do not fraternize with the actors, though they generally class themselves among the "profesh."

LITTLE CHILDREN THAT ARE GONE.

Why do they come, the little ones that enter our homes by the gateway of suf*fering, and that linger with us a few* months, uttering no words, smiling in a mysterious silence, yet speaking eloquently all the time of the purity and sweetness of heaven? Why must they open the tenderest fountains of our natures only to leave them so soon choked with the bitter tears of loss? It is impossible wholly to answer such questions of the tortured heart, but one can say, in general, that these little temporary wanderers from a celestial home come and go because of the great love of God. It is an inestimable blessing to have been the parent of a child that has the stamp of heaven upon its brow, to hold it in one's arms, to minister to it, to gaze fondly down into the little upturned face, and to rejoice in the unsullied beauty of its smiles, and then—to give it back to God at His call, with the thought that in heaven, as upon earth, it is still our own child, a member of the household still, to be counted always as one of the children whom God hath given us. Such a love chastens and sanctifies the hearts of the father and mother, carries them out beyond time and sense, and gives them a hold upon the unseen. As things of great value always cost, it is worth all the sorrow to have known this holy affection and to have this treasure in heaven.

A MAGIC TABLE.

There is a good deal of amusement in the following table of figures. It will enable you to tell how old the young ladies are. Just hand this table to a young lady, and request her to tell you in which column or columns her age is contained, and add together the figures at the top of the columns in which her age is found and you have the great secret. Thus, suppose her age to be seventeen, you will find that number in the first and fifth columns; add the first figures of those two columns. Here is the magic table:

FALLACIES ABOUT FOOD.

1. That there is any nutriment in beef tea made from extracts. There is none whatever. 2. That gelatine is nutritious. It will not keep a cat alive. Beef tea and gelatine, however, possess a certain reparative power, we know not what. 3. That an egg is equal to a pound of meat, and that every sick person can eat eggs. Many, especially those of nervous or bilious temperaments, cannot eat them, and to such eggs are injurious. 4. That, because milk is an important article of food, it must be forced upon a patient. Food that a person cannot endure will not cure. 5. That arrow-root is nutritious. It is simply starch and water, useful as a restorative, quickly prepared. 6. That cheese is injurious in all cases. It is, as a rule, contra-indicated, being usually indigestible, but it is concentrated nutriment, and a waste repairer, and often craved. 7. That the cravings of a patient are whims, and should be denied. The stomach often needs, craves for, and digests articles not laid down in any dietary. Such are, for example, fruit, pickles, jams, cake, ham or bacon with fat, cheese, butter and milk. 8. That an inflexible diet may be marked out which shall apply to every case. Choice of a given list of articles allowable in a given case must be decided by the opinion of the stomach. The stomach is right, and theory wrong, and the judgment admits no appeal. A diet which would keep a healthy man healthy might kill a sick man; and a diet sufficient to sustain a sick man would not keep a well man alive. Increased quantity of food, especially of liquids, does not mean increased nutriment, rather decreased, since the digestion is overtaxed and weakened. Strive to give the food in as concentrated a form as possible. Consult the patient's stomach in preference to his tastes, and if the stomach rejects a certain article do not force it.

Vermont pays its judges $2,500, and there is a scheme to raise the salaries to $3,000, with $200 for expenses. The Green Mountain Governor gets $1,000.

VOX POPULI.

The question of taking the choice of United States Senators from the Legislatures and submitting it directly to the popular vote of the respective States, is claiming much and serious attention.

The friends of the proposed change argue that many positive advantages would result therefrom, because, as they insist—

It would do away with unpleasant and, at times, disgraceful legislative dead-locks.

It would lessen opportunities for the corrupt expenditure of money to influence votes.

And it would no doubt tend to advance the Senatorial character for ability and integrity.

The change may become a public necessity.

IN THE WRONG.

If they were right before why did they organize at last?

They were not right, and that fact came louder and louder to their ears from political friends.

It is a well established rule of law that each legislative branch shall possess and exercise the exclusive right of judging as to the eligibility of its own members.

The Senate of New Jersey had no more authority to interfere with the House of Assembly, and to say who should or should not be members, than it had to regulate the bill of fare of the Shah of Persia.

The Republican Senators were wrong—very wrong.

Here ends the first lesson.

TRUTH AND JUSTICE.

A New York journal discourses thus: "Justice, like honesty, is the best policy. If the coal companies had shared fairly with their workmen the fifty cents per ton increase in the price of coal which they arbitrarily made, there would have been no costly strike."

There is much truth in the above declaration.

We have always believed that were the employers of labor actuated by simple justice, there would be little, if any, trouble in the land.

Show a spirit of generosity toward laborers of every grade, skilled and unskilled.

Pay a just equivalent for the hard toil they render, in lieu of forcing down their wages to the lowest possible depth.

Treat labor justly.

Treat it honestly.

Make "live and let live" the universally observed mandate, and strikes would vanish like mist before the Summer sun.

The President has appointed Edward A. Quayle Postmaster at Morristown, and Adam L. Brown, at Bloomfield.

The U. S. Senate on Monday passed a bill, appropriating $21,000,000 for coast defences and the manufacture of steel ordnance.

The total receipts of the State for the past year were $3,718,455.75. There is in the sinking fund the sum of $802,275.47. The amount of school fund received was $2,179,030.90.

The strike troubles are rapidly settling themselves. Steps have been taken to submit the issue with the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, where the trouble had its beginning, to arbitration.

As will be seen by our Council proceedings the dead-lock still exists. Possibly at the adjourned meeting of Council to be held on the evening of Wednesday, 16th inst., some definite action will be taken and licenses granted, as should be.

The Republican Senate of the United States, in a very curt message, informs the President that the reason his colored friend, Mr. Matthews, of Albany, was rejected for Recorder of Deeds for the District of Columbia, is because he, Mr. Matthews, should be a resident of Washington.

The term of Lay Judge, Lewis S. Hyer, of Union county, expires next April. Judge Hyer has made a most acceptable official during his term of office, and we believe it would give general satisfaction to the Democracy if Governor Green should reappoint him, which we believe and hope he will.

From the twenty-first report of the New Jersey Home for Disabled Soldiers, at Newark, for the year ending Oct. 31, 1886, we learn that the Home is being satisfactorily managed, the inmates like it, and applications for admission are being constantly made. An additional appropriation of $10,000 is asked for to maintain the Home for the ensuing year. There were thirty deaths during the past year, the number finding a permanent abiding place therein being 315 at the date of report.

From the annual reports of the officers and managers of the New Jersey State Lunatic Asylum, at Trenton, for the year ending Oct. 31st, 1886, a copy of which has just reached us, we take it that the institution is in a very satisfactory condition. The number of patients in the asylum at that time was 691; of these there were 347 females and 344 males. During the year there were forty-nine deaths—twenty-nine men and twenty women. It cost $177,805.02 to maintain the asylum during the year.

But little work has been accomplished by the Legislature the present week. A large number of bills have been presented in both branches, but there seems to be little inclination of members toward getting down to solid work until the vexed question of "Who is to be U. S. Senator" is settled. That question is likely to be settled next Wednesday at the joint meeting called for that day. The Republicans, under the leadership of Gen. Sewell, are endeavoring to create dissensions among the Democratic members of the House, and to induce some of them to stay away on the day of the joint meeting, by which means a Republican Senator could be elected. Their schemes, however, will fail. Ex-Gov. Abbett still holds his ground, and we firmly believe will receive, as he ought to, sufficient votes in the joint meeting to elect him.

CURRENT COMMENT.

According to the reports of the gatherers of vital statistics, filed in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, there were 25,497 births, 12,351 marriages and 22,734 deaths in New Jersey during the year 1886.

The Indiana Legislature has elected David Turpie, Democrat, United States Senator, after a protracted struggle over Harrison, present Senator. The Republicans say the election is illegal, although Turpie received 76 votes to 74 for Harrison. The matter will be carried to the United States Senate and if that body allows partisanship to rule its councils, Mr. Turpie may not be seated. With Abbett, Turpie and Camden in their seats, the next Senate will be composed of 39 Republicans and 37 Democrats, counting Riddleberger among the Republicans. As he is very independent and formerly a Democrat, he may conclude to tie the Senate.

Far off Democratic Texas does herself honor in electing Representative Reagan to the next United States Senate. Texas is the one Democratic State in which the majorities are too big for the railroads to get into their pocket and keep there. With Reagan added to the list of Senators who care more for the people than they do for the corporations, the process of weeding out the creatures of the railroads goes on. It only now needs that New Jersey second the movement in Texas by sending Leon Abbett to fill a similar place, and to give the State and the people assurance that their interests shall be the first subjects of Senatorial consideration.

Governor Green made a great many friends among the agriculturists at Trenton last week. He held a reception and received all with so much ease and cordiality, that they went away feeling that New Jersey had a Governor of whom the State might well be proud. As is well known there was not the best feeling towards Governor Green, for some reason or other, and many Democratic farmers would not vote for him. Since reading his inaugural address and finding therein good, sound views and then meeting him face to face and enjoying his sociability and cheery talk, a wonderful change has come over them and now many are regretting that they did not see more of him before election.

Five Republican State Senators, namely: Herring of Camden, Fish of Essex, Pancoast of Gloucester, Miller of Salem, and Thompson of Somerset, go out of office on January 1, 1888. What answer will these worthies make if their conservative constituents happen to take a notion to want to know why the Senators disregarded their oath to obey the laws of this State and the United States by refusing to organize the Senate of 1887 in accordance with the law and precedent? Evidently the Senators in question have very little regard for the political hereafter. It might be in order here to quote the fact that in 1885 Herring had 1,293 plurality, Fish 1,183 plurality, Pancoast 276 plurality, Miller 7 plurality, and Thompson 89 plurality. Senators Moon of Warren, Chattle of Monmouth, and Livingston of Union, Democrats, go out of office on January 1, 1888. In 1885 Moon had 1,526 plurality, Livingston had 208 plurality, and Chattle had 281 majority.

The House bill to amend an act to prohibit the importation and immigration of foreigners and aliens under contract or agreement to perform labor, passed by the Senate on Monday last, gives authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to contract with State commissions, boards or officers for an examination into the condition of passengers arriving from abroad. The names of persons prohibited from landing are to be reported to the Collector of the Port, who shall enforce the prohibition. The Secretary is directed to prescribe regulations for the return of persons prohibited from landing and these regulations are to be enforced by State Boards designated by the Secretary. The expense of return is devolved upon the owners of the vessels. Vessels refusing to bear the expense are prohibited from landing at or clearing from any port of the United States. The expenses are also made a lien upon the vessels. The act is to take effect thirty days after its passage.

The annual banquet of the Electric club, a colored organization of Trenton, was largely attended on Wednesday night of last week, and there were several distinguished guests from abroad. Editor Fortune, of the colored people's organ, created quite a sensation while responding to the toast: "Our Duty in 1888." He said the time had arrived for his race to act independently in politics, as it had been grossly neglected by the Republican party, which it had supported almost unanimously in the past. He claimed that President Cleveland had done more for the amelioration of the race by his conservative action than most of the previous Republican Administrations, and he therefore advised the colored people to support him for re-election in 1888. He criticised the Republican party for its lukewarm treatment of the colored people, and said the famous saying of Fred Douglass, that the Republican party was for the colored people, the ship and all the ocean, was no longer true. "Rally to the support of Cleveland and the Democratic party in 1888," were his concluding words, amid great applause.

Another terrible railroad accident has happened, whereby at least thirty-five lives were lost, and as many more seriously injured. The accident occurred on the Central Vermont Railroad, at White River, last Saturday morning about 2.30 o'clock. Three sleeping cars, with their occupants, were precipitated over a bridge to the frozen river bed below, a distance of over fifty feet. The cars took fire from the stoves and were entirely consumed, together with most of their imprisoned and helpless inmates. It is claimed the accident was caused by a broken rail. Official inquiry into the causes of the terrible railway accident does not, thus far, clear up the mystery. The engineer of the fated train says just as he came upon the bridge the bell-cord pulled and at the signal he slacked the train. His speed was not more than eight miles an hour when the signal sounded. Looking back he saw the rear car swing off the bridge. In its fall it seemed to pull three cars with it, one after the other. Then the coupling broke and the forward part of the train was saved. This would indicate that the truck of the rear car broke and that somebody in the car realized this and gave the signal to the engineer. As nearly everybody in this car perished, the probabilities are that we shall never know more about the cause of the disaster than is known now.

Precept vs. Practice.

In the card of commendation of ex-Mayor Rockfellow appears the following:

"But your administration especially commends itself to us because you have never allowed your political affiliations in the slightest degree to influence your appointments."

The third signature is Job Male's.

Does Mr. Male believe that character and competency exists solely in the Republican party, and that non-partizanship should be practiced only during Democratic ascendency?

Reform Club.

In order to correct any wrong impression that may arise, it is proper to publicly and distinctly state, that the Reform Club has no connection whatever with the Republican Anti-Saloon meetings held within its hall during the present week. The Club needs all the revenue it can realize, and with that object in view, rents its building to Republicans for pay per night as it has before done to Democrats and Prohibitionists. The Reform Club is not a political organization. It numbers among its members Democrats, Republicans and Third Party Prohibitionists, but is not responsible for the individual partisan views and actions of any of them.

A MEMBER OF THE CLUB.

A Grand Year for the Leading Industrial Insurance Company of America. Insurance history does not chronicle another such a success as that with which the Prudential Insurance company of Newark, N. J., has met during the year of 1886, the eleventh year of their existence. From the first year in which this company commenced to do business, down until the present time, fortune has smiled upon them, and to-day they present to our readers their eleventh annual statement, which shows a financial strength that must be very gratifying to its half a million of members. Who can measure the amount of distress which the Prudential has relieved through the disbursement of nearly two millions of dollars? This amount has been paid to the relatives and friends of deceased policy holders, the majority of whom had nothing else to depend upon for funeral expenses. We cannot give too much praise to an organization, such as the Prudential, whose methods are so just and honorable. The officers and directors of the company are leading citizens of New Jersey, whose social and financial standing are the very best. These men placed their money, with their faith, into the company and they justly deserve the success with which the company has met. During the year 1886 the Prudential has issued over 370,000 policies, and increased its assets to over $1,425,000. The surplus to policy holders is now over $406,000. The claim adjusters in the different districts of the company have visited the homes of thousands during the year, and have brought consolation to many distressed hearts through the promptness with which they have disbursed over $600,000. This part of the State, comprising seven counties, is under the supervision of that well-known gentleman Mr. H. J. Stratemeyer, Jr., as Superintendent, office 233 Broad street, Elizabeth, N. J. Mr. P. V. Huff, assistant Superintendent, Main street, Somerville, N. J., jurisdiction two counties. Principal Agent, John King, West Second street, Plainfield, this city which has over 1,600 policy holders. A perusal of the statement will well repay the reader.

Council Proceedings.

The Council met in regular meeting, Monday evening. Present—President Marsh and Councilmen Bowers, Carey, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Simpson, Voorhees, Wilbur. Absent—Councilmen Cuthbert, Taylor. The petition of Henry Hanson for back license was referred and subsequently granted. A petition against the granting of a street railway to others than themselves, was received from J. W. Johnson, Karl T. Polak and F. T. Larned, and referred to the Committee on Streets. J. W. Murray asked permission to move building on corner of Fifth street and Park avenue, to another location on same lot, and erect a frame addition thereto. Referred with power. The protest of ministers and doctors against granting liquor licenses published in the CONSTITUTIONALIST of last week, was read and referred. His Honor the Mayor, in a communication, called the attention of the council to the law requiring the organization of a Board of Health. Referred to the Committee on Laws. The reports of the City Physician, Collector, Overseer of the Poor, and the Treasurer, were read and filed. The Mayor's nominations for the following city officers, were confirmed by the following vote:

Street Commissioner—Geo. M. Angleman, ayes, 9.

Pound Masters—Louis M. Rosap, Daniel M. Allen; unanimous consent.

Regular Police—Charles W. Dodd, George W. Grant, Thomas McCue and Patrick Lynch; unanimous consent.

Special Police—S. B. Hope, R. Marsh, G. M. Smith, J. Kriney, J. Flynn, P. J. Flanagan, M. Higgins, F. Moran, W. R. Mattox, T. J. Clarkson, C. Jones, J. Hickey, M. Cerney, J. Noel, J. Walsh, W. H. Scribner, W. Coon; unanimous consent.

Corporation Counsel—Craig A. Marsh; unanimous consent.

The report of the City Treasurer showed the following balances on hand—General fund, $2,234.12; Poor fund, $3,561.45; State and County, $1,798.24; Library fund, $1,510.10. The special committee to examine into the application of J. H. Staats, reported it as correct, and recommended that it be tabled. So ordered. The Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps reported progress in the matter of the survey of the city by Engineer Bassett—that such survey was completed and only awaited the approval of the consulting engineer acting with Mr. Bassett. The Committee on Laws presented an ordinance providing methods for the uniform numbering of the stores and dwellings of the city. It was referred to the Committee on Streets. On the application of Joseph T. Sullivan, Messrs. Dunham and Bowers reported unfavorably, and Mr. Wilbur reported it correct and recommended it be granted. Both reports were tabled. The following majority report from the License committee was also presented, read and placed on file:

"The Committee on Licenses have received the report of the Rev. Mr. Smyth and others, and have given same due consideration, and while it is the minds of the committee has some weight, yet the committee think the time has not yet come when the policy suggested in said petition can be pursued, and that the people by their suffrages have demanded a fair trial of the high license system."

S. P. T. WILBUR,
B. O. BOWERS.

The petition of E. P. Thorn for a liquor license was presented and referred. Mr. Voorhees moved a reconsideration of the vote rejecting the license application of P. Day at the last meeting. Carried, and the application was tabled. The same action was taken in relation to, and the same disposal made of, the applications of Messrs. Force, Miller, Rafferty, Goodman, Connealy, Smith, Blimm and Casper. The council adjourned to Wednesday evening, the 16th inst.

A shooting match for $100 a side took place last week at Newton, Mercer county, between Miles Johnson of Mercer and L. Campbell of Monmouth. There were twenty-five birds each, and the rise was twenty-five yards. The match was won by Johnson, who killed twenty-three out of his twenty-five to Campbell's twenty-one. Johnson killed twelve straight birds before missing, and then missed his thirteenth and fourteenth birds.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Efforts are being made to pass a bill to prevent fishing through the ice in the winter time in this State.

Programmes of the coming tournament of the Middlesex Gun Club may be obtained of the Secretary, M. W. Mulford, Force's Hotel, Plainfield, N. J.

The winter thus far has been favorable regarding the destruction of quail and grouse by cold and snows, and there is a prospect that a large number of these birds will safely winter over.

A protest has been forwarded to Congress against allowing the landing of a vessel on our shores, alleged to be now on the high seas, loaded with a cargo of Australian rabbits. It is claimed the distribution of these animals on our lands would prove a curse to the farmer, worse than that of the English sparrow.

A yearling trout was placed in a well on James Sherman's farm, at Lafayette, N. J., thirty-five years ago. It grew to weigh six pounds and five years ago it began to show the effects of old age, fading, losing its spots, and turning a dull gray. When it died last week, it was found to weigh four pounds.

Already a dozen or more bills have been introduced into the Legislature, amending and altering the game and fish laws. They should all be consigned to some dark recess where they will not be resurrected until after adjournment of the Legislature. Not one of them would be of benefit in the protection of game, although they might suit some individuals in certain localities.

The much talked about pigeon match between Leander B. Campbell of Little Silver, who is a member of the Matawan Gun Club, and William Lever of Bound Brook, a member of the Middlesex Gun Club, came off on the grounds of the latter club at Dunellen, N. J. on Tuesday last. Although the day was disagreeable, stormy and foggy, there was a large attendance on the grounds from near and far, and considerable money changed hands on the result, the Middlesex boys coming out ahead on the match and sheckles. The conditions of the match were, thirty-five birds each from five traps, thirty yards rise, one barrel allowed, gun to be held below the elbow. The following is the score:

Referee—John S. Bishop.
Judge for Lever—Fred. Quinlan.
Judge for Campbell—Mr. Van Schaick.
Trap puller—J. Day.
Scorer—W. I. Ritch.

The coming shooting tournament of the Middlesex Gun Club, on their grounds at Dunellen, N. J., commencing Feb. 21st and closing the 25th, is bound now to prove a grand success. A number of the crack shots of the country have already addressed the secretary, and entered their names to shoot in the grand $100 entrance sweepstakes on Tuesday, Feb. 22d. The following named renowned pigeon shots have entered their names to shoot: C. W. Budd, of Des Moines, Iowa; Wm. Graham, the English champion; Messrs. C. W. Stark and Perry, of Mass.; Mr. Stice, of New Haven; Messrs. Kleinz and Brewer, of Phila.; Mr. Organ, of Chicago; Ben. Teeple, of Cin., and several others whose names we do not now possess. Without doubt, there will be some twelve or fifteen entries in this grand sweepstakes, which calls for $100 entrance fee, each man to shoot at fifty birds. Probably no such chance will again occur, where so many of the renowned and crack pigeon shooters of this continent will come together and shoot against each other. In the clay pigeon sweepstakes, on the 23d there are a large number of entries from all parts of the country. The tournament is under the management of a competent committee appointed by the Board of Directors who will see that every accommodation and comfort is afforded visitors and competitors. A grand stand, capable of accommodating a large number of people, will be erected adjoining the club house, from which the spectators will be offered a fine view of the shooting.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Rev. Wilson Phraner will deliver a lecture on "Alaska," in the Chapel of the Presbyterian church, on Monday evening, Feb. 14.

Dr. Wm. Gale went as a delegate from Winfield Scott Post, No 73, G. A. R., to Trenton yesterday to attend the twentieth annual encampment of the department.

At the annual mite box opening, on Wednesday evening, of the Ladies' Home Missionary Society of the M. E. church, The boxes contained the sum of thirty-eight dollars.

No. 1, twelve, total sixty-four. The chief, F. R. Pennington, received thirty-five votes, J. N. Wilcox thirty. For first assistant, William S. Welch thirty-four, C. H. French twenty-eight, William Gale two. For second assistant, Anson B. Smith thirty-three, Eb Hart thirty; F. R. Pennington of Empire Engine Co. No. 1, was elected chief and W. S. Welch and Anson B. Annual report of the Chief Engineer of the Westfield Fire Department ending Feb. 9, 1887. Sept. 18th, 1886, Isaac Little's house on Cumberland street, alarm 10:30 a. m., damage $25, cause, oil stove exploded. Oct. 15th, 1886, Mansion House, Roselle, alarm 4 a. m., outside of fire limits but responded to alarm. Oct. 15th, 1886, Randolph's barn, South avenue, alarm 1:45 p. m., caused by boys with matches, damage $450. Oct. 16th, 1886, big woods, alarm 9:50 a. m. Oct. 31st, 1886, Dr. J. I would also report engine and truck house in good repair, except bridge in front which is in a bad condition, and should be repaired at once; and I would recommend that the president of the fire department confer with the town committee and arrange that the lamp in front of truck house may be kept burning all night, the whole year round; and I would also report, with pleasure, that all the apparatus belonging to the department are in good working order, with the exception of a few buckets. I would also report that I have examined the two fire wells, (put in order during the past year) and found them in good order with ten feet of water in the one on the corner of Broad street and Mountain avenue, and seven feet six inches in the one on Central avenue. I would also report in regard to the badges that I received from Mr. Isaac Seely, Feb. 12, 1886, twenty badges at fifty cents, $10. Number furnished members, six, $3, number on hand, fourteen, $7. Respectfully submitted for your approval, and thanking all the members of the department for their assistance and kindness shown me at all times during my term of office.

CERTIFIES TO THE

PURITY & HEALTHFULNESS

OF

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR Baking Powder.

New York, January 16, 1885.

I have, on several occasions during the past few years and without the knowledge of the manufacturers, analytically examined cans of CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER purchased by myself in the markets, and I take pleasure in recommending it to public favor as a baking powder that can be relied upon for purity, wholesomeness and strength, as I have never found it to be adulterated with lime or to be impure in any sense whatever.

DR. H. A. MOTT,
Professor of Chemistry New York Medical College, &c.

NEW MARKET NOTE.

As I said in my last, suspicion existed with regard to the parties who burglarized the post office. This suspicion was formulated into a complaint on Friday last, leading to the arrest of John Burke, Jr., and Irving Runyon, of Dunellen, who had an examination before Justice Cole, and upon the evidence submitted were committed to the New Brunswick jail. The third party has not been arrested, but is tracked. A good many rumors are flying around. In point of fact they are as plentiful as blackberries in summer time. One thing is certain, houses of respectable citizens have been searched for a criminal, and it is a fact that people have given shelter and harbored one who is looked upon as an outcast of society. The gang hails from Dunellen and will be broken up. Not only the vigilance of our citizens has been aroused, but the aid and support of the Government will be freely given in the prosecution of which I will fully post you. For the present "keep mum." AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has demonstrated its power of cure for all diseases of the blood.

The Harpooner's Story.

New Bedford, June 1, 1883.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Twenty years ago I was a harpooner in the North Pacific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums swollen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and our breath seemed rotten. Taking it by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime-juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seen men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and I've seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanac of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ought to know of this, and so send you the facts.

Respectfully yours, RALPH Y. WINGATE.

The Trooper's Experience.

Masera, Basutoland (S. Africa,) March 7, 1883.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure to testify to the great value of your Sarsaparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live in tents. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veldt-sores." I had these sores for some time. I was advised to take your Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.

Yours truly, T. E. BODEN,
Trooper, Cape Mounted Riflemen.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

THE post office Inspector, upon whose report to the Department, will depend whether Plainfield will be furnished with the general delivery system, has not yet made his visit here.

FORTY feet fronting on Somerset street, of the Berry estate, adjoining the brick store now occupied by Mr. Alex. Thorn, has just been purchased by Mr. James P. Homan, of this city, for $4,000.

AT a recent sale of a portion of what is known as the DeCamp property, on Grove street opposite Prospect Place, Mr. Daniel Adams and Mr. Joseph Cutter each bought a lot fifty feet front, at $1,750 apiece. Mr. Adams intends building at once.

THE partnership of that very successful firm of dry-goods dealers, Messrs. Pope Bros., will expire by limitation, March 1st, and will then be dissolved. The business will be continued, but there will be a change in the make-up of the new firm.

THE quarterly statement to Feb. 1st of the Warden of our County Jail, shows the average number of prisoners in custody each day as 36, at a cost of 32 cents each per day. This is made up of provisions 13 cents, salary and wages 15 cents, medicine 2½ cents, etc.

COMPTON'S home-made bread, hot every afternoon at five o'clock, is very popular with epicures who appreciate the best flour baked to perfection. The cream and confectionery furnished from this same establishment is not equalled elsewhere in the city.

THERE are some very desirable seats yet to be secured at Reynolds' pharmacy for Gen. Lew Wallace's readings at Music Hall, next Tuesday evening. This brave officer and grand author will read "The Chariot Race" from his great Bible romance of "Ben Hur," and other selections.

THE sale of seats for the return engagement of Templeton Opera Co., will begin at the usual places, Thursday of next week. The company will render two of the most popular comic operas from its repertory, during the afternoon and evening of Washington's Birthday, the 22nd inst.

MESSRS. WOOLSTON & BUCKLE of North avenue, are the agents in this city for that wonderful "ulsonte paint" that is made from pure metal. It does not crack, blister, chalk or fade, and gives a firm elastic coating that resists the action of the elements, preserves the wood and prevents the iron from rusting.

ASSESSOR Isaac Brokaw of North Plainfield has just sold to Mr. Edward Hanigan, the Theodore French property, corner of Somerset street and Craig Place. Two three-story brick dwellings facing on Craig Place will be built immediately and ready for occupancy by May 1st. The contracts have been awarded to John Bodine, carpenter, Wm C. Smith, mason, and Carney Bros., plumbers.

WE wish the "coals-of-fire" heaped on the heads of the owners of the property at Fifth street and Park avenue—by the action of the Council in granting without question or delay permission to move the frame dwelling—would only blaze up enough to light that neighborhood now in darkness by reason of a steady defiance of the Council's orders for the erection of an electric light in that location.

THE property at the East corner of Park avenue and Fifth street, formerly owned by the Bache family, has recently been purchased by Messrs. John W. Murray, Elias R. Pope and J. Frank Hubbard of this city. The house now upon it will be moved to another location on the same lot, facing Park avenue and nearer Sixth street. The new owners will probably erect handsome residences on the corner.

THE beginning of a series of State meetings to be held by the Blaine-Republicans for the purpose of coaxing back into their ranks under false pretences those who have joined the Third (?) party, was held in Reform Hall, Tuesday evening. One of the most active Temperance-Republicans in the city afterwards stated his regret that he was not present to call the attention of the speakers to the time the Republican Legislature of Massachusetts repealed the prohibition act in that State.

THE Daily Herald of Franklin, Ind., says of Mrs. Dr. Cutter who lectures again to-morrow afternoon as advertised on the opposite page:—"Dr. Abbie E. Cutter's lectures are grand and elevating. The ladies who have listened to the course of lectures, and received her excellent advice, will never cease thanking her, and will ever remember her with affection. This noble, christian woman has done as much for the soul as the physician has for the body. If there were more such women the world would be happier."

THE annual meeting of the State Charities Aid Association, held at Morristown, recently, evidenced the organization to be in a most substantial and fruitful condition. New members from various sections of the State, were elected. The report of Mrs. George Wetmore Colles, Secretary, and others, showed great work accomplished in the elevation of the poor, the visiting and distributing of reading matter in alms houses and jails, the inspection of reformatory and penal institutions, and in other directions where the efforts of such an association are needed.

THE Council meets again, next Wednesday evening.

THE newly confirmed city officers are requested to be present at the office of the City Clerk, to-morrow evening at 7.30, and "take their oath."

MR. HENRY MANNING will next week return to this city, his home, and where he was formerly Librarian of the Y. M. C. A., to fill the now vacant position of General Secretary of that organization.

"MAY BLOSSOM," the play, May Blossom's little daughter, and May Blossom herself and her support, were all enjoyed at Music Hall, Monday evening, by a good house considering the weather overhead and underfoot.

THE Public Library should be open for the distribution of books for some time during some part of every day. As it is now, all card-holders rush in a heap by compulsion, and are waited upon in disorder by necessity.

AND now it seems a fact that the Bicycle Club House will not hold the hundreds of dollars worth of elegant articles already promised, not to mention the fair ladies that are to attend the tables—but then the members are able to hold them.

OUR property owners should stop the numbering of their dwellings right where they are. It may have to be done all over again if it does not conform to the rules to be adopted by the passage of the ordinance now in the hands of the Streets Committee.

THE shoveling of coal in the cellar of Music Hall, during the commencement of the Philharmonic concert, drowned the monotonous slam with which the ushers so delight in throwing open the seats. Some things can make more noise than other things.

A TRAMP dog was run over and his back broken, yesterday morning, on North avenue. After Officer Lynch had shot at the paralyzed animal once, and Hackman Farley had shot at him twice, a better "sportsman" put the dog out of its misery, with a hammer.

FOUR enclosed furniture vans loaded with dogs—mostly of the rough-coated St. Bernard breed—passed through this city, Wednesday evening. They go to stock a kennel about to be started by Mr. Brandeis, of Long Island, who has rented a place on Union avenue just beyond Grant.

THE Borough Council of North Plainfield held its regular meeting and transacted the usual routine business, last Friday evening. A resolution was presented providing for the election of a Mayor and two Councilmen to succeed Messrs. Van Winkle, Arnold and Thickstun. The meeting adjourned to this evening.

EVEN with the instrumental talent of Frederick Preston at the organ recital in Congregational church, next Thursday evening, and the vocal ability of Mme. Lasar-Studwell, the few generous members who are arranging the programme are not satisfied. It is proposed to give the public one of the greatest musical treats on record, and the Dudley Bucks, who rank first of all male quartettes, have also been engaged.

All Left Plainfield.

The Supreme Court will be ready to hear argument as soon as possible, now, on the question before it (on a writ of certiorari granted by Judge VanSyckel) as to whether Plainfield itself has not the only legal right to control the assessment and collection of taxes to protect its citizens from fire. Commissioner McClure, of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department, that is the "defendant" in the case, left for Canada last week, and is now in Montreal; Commissioner Knowland has gone to California with his family; Commissioner Brower leaves next week for the South; Commissioner Livingston, as a State Senator, remains in Trenton; Commissioner Jones lives out of town in another county; and the other member of the Board resigned some months ago.

The Second Philharmonic.

The second of the Series of Philharmonic Concerts in Music Hall, Tuesday evening, was fully up to the height reached and mark set by the first. Mme. Gramm, the vocalist of the occasion, however, can hardly be classed as a soprano, having a mezzo voice of much power and a quality more pleasing in its lower tones. Both her numbers were encored, but she only replied to the second recall with another selection. Of the playing of the New York Philharmonic Club, we can only say that which everyone knows and which the audience endorsed by emphatic approval. The selections were "perfectly lovely" and perfectly executed. Every movement in the opening sextette, a serenade by R. Fuchs, was full of the melody that enraptures. Beethoven's "Turkish March" was demanded again, and the Quartette, "Variations in D minor," by Schubert, was remarkably sweet. Mr. Weiner's flute solo was justly encored, and an earnest effort was made to obtain the playing of Mr. Schenck's 'cello solo a third time. The next concert is dated for Tuesday evening, March 23d, and we await impatiently the pleasure of hearing ag in that charming soprano, Miss Ella Earle, who last sang here at a Y. M. C. A. concert of six years ago.

Dunham Good-Will Choristers.

At a sociable held at the residence of Councilman Dunham, Tuesday evening, Mr. William Rankin in behalf of his brethren, the choristers, presented the President with a large group of eighteen photograph representing the President and members around him. He said:

"Bro. Dunham, Ladies and Gentlemen: During these years of our organization, there has been one of our number who has ever been our leader in every good undertaking. One who has been ever ready at all times to make a sacrifice for us or the cause which we represent. During these years we have often wondered what we could give our noble, self-denying President as a token of our love and esteem. A short time ago we settled upon a definite plan which we carried into execution. And now, in behalf of these my brethren, and as chairman of this committee, it gives me great pleasure to present you with this as a token of our love and appreciation of the efforts you have put forth to lead us to success the noble cause we represent. May the good Lord guide and bless your every effort and spare us your life for many years, giving you grace and wisdom to guide us in our efforts to promote the cause of the glorious Gospel."

"My Dear Choristers:—I must confess this is the greatest surprise I ever had in my life, and I am completely undone. In the early part of the evening I noticed an inclination among you to gather into groups and converse in whispers. I supposed you were arranging some plan of amusement, but in this I find I am greatly mistaken. As I shall again and again gaze upon your faces grouped around me, I shall feel that I have a new incentive to inspire me to fresh zeal and renewed energy. During these years of our organization I have endeavored in my weak way to serve you with all the powers God has given me. Though I see where I have often failed, yet I can see that our efforts have not been made in vain, and I trust to the Master for the results of our labors. In sickness or health you may rely upon me as the warmest friend to the society—a friend who will never hesitate to make a sacrifice in your behalf. I shall love you not only as a body, but as individuals, as long as I live, and nothing but death itself shall ever separate us, and even in that event, it will be but a short time and we shall meet again on the other side. My heart is so full of gratitude that words cannot express my feelings, especially at this moment. And now from the bottom of my heart I beg to thank you for this great gift, which I shall cherish as long as I live; and as I shall look upon it from time to time, I shall feel like taking hold with new vigor. Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in mutual love."

The Crescent Organ Recital.

The public organ recital at the Crescent avenue church under the auspices of the Young People's Association, Friday evening last, was a success in most particulars but a disappointment in other. When the new organ was first displayed in the concert of September 29th, last, Mr. Henry Eyre Browne was the principal performer, and Mr. Taft taking, in consequence, the second place on the programme was by custom confined in his selections mainly to lighter and more melodious compositions. Therefore Mr. Taft best pleased, and all anxiously awaited the announcement of his return, and with expectant pleasure gathered to hear him. But being this time the bright particular star all by himself, Mr. Taft must needs do the grand, and the result was so disastrous that not an encore was granted during the whole programme although so often deserved because of the performer's masterly accomplishment of some of the most difficult operations—if we may be permitted to so term them. The instrument was out of tune, but we know Mr. Taft was not. We remember with pleasure that he has written a "serenade" that would have gained a hearty recall had it been substituted even for the Bach Fugue that was admired by only those who could appreciate how wonderfully correct was its rendition. The vocal music kindly offered by the Church's choir was accepted with pleasure, and the soprano solo by Mrs. J. K. Myers was especially gratifying. There is no voice in Plainfield to day more agreeable in tone, than this lady's. Miss Utter's accompaniments were all the selections demanded, which, particularly in the trio, is saying much.

Electric Light Matter.

Mr. George Westinghouse, who is at the head of the Westinghouse enterprises, visited Plainfield on Friday last for the first time to inspect the Plainfield Electric Light Co. plant erected here by Mr. Wright, their engineer. Mr. Westinghouse expressed himself as highly satisfied with the work and at Mr. Wright's request consented to order at once to Plainfield another 150 horse power engine and a 1,500 light machine with the necessary appliances for at once extending the area of lighting to be covered. We shall now soon see our homes lighted with the new light. Mr. Wright has made a number of contracts for lighting since starting the incandescent lights and expects to very soon be running his station at its full capacity. The working of the new system of Incandescent Lighting is all that can be desired. Mr. Wright has entertained a number of parties during the past week who have visited Plainfield to enquire into the working of the system. In all cases the visitors left the city impressed with the simplicity and effectiveness of the plant and Mr. Wright has received many compliments on his work here. The new system is a development by Mr. Westinghouse and his staff of the Gaulard & Gibbs system which was tried on the underground railroad in London a few years ago when the possibility of long distance lighting was proved. The Gaulard & Gibbs system was by no means perfect either in its workings or from a commercial standpoint, its working being very costly and complicated. The Westinghouse people as soon as they had made their improvements, purchased from Messrs. Gaulard & Gibbs their American patents in order to strengthen their position. The opponents of the new system state that it is perfectly worthless, notwithstanding the fact that one of them who made this statement a few days ago to a citizen of Plainfield said that his company had offered a large sum of money for the Gaulard & Gibbs patents. On Monday evening in the electric lamps the carbons were frozen together by the sleet; this necessitated the sending of an extra force of men over the line, to seperate the carbons in those lamps which did not start up, but the additional lamp trimmers soon got them into good working order. The carbons would have been separated earlier in the day but they would have frozen together again in a few minutes after this had been done. With this exception the weather caused no direct trouble, Mr. Wright being on the look out for any of the telephone, telegraph and district messenger wires many of which were brought down upon his by the weight of the accumulation of ice upon them. None of the electric light company's wires fell.

Of Interest Regarding Street Railways.

The matter of the introduction of a street railway in Plainfield is just now beginning to be discussed earnestly by our citizens, and will, the community begins to hope, soon be seriously considered by the Common Council. The municipal authorities of Asbury Park, however, are still further advanced in this matter, so the extracts we give below from the Journal of that place, are words spoken after some weeks careful consideration already given the project:

"Now that a street railway in Asbury Park seems on the verge of taking some definite shape would it not be well for the projectors to take into consideration a means of propelling their cars that is cheaper and better than horses, and one which will undoubtedly present such novelty as will make this feature alone a source of commercial importance not to be lost sight of? The power referred to is that of electricity. The practicability of this means of propulsion for street cars is now an established fact, and several reliable companies stand ready to guarantee its successful working. In Baltimore, Md., an electric road has been in successful operation about two years, and the president of the road states that for the eight months prior to adopting electricity the cost of operating with horses and mules was $4,800. Since electricity was adopted, during a like period 22,907 more passengers were carried and the cost was only $3,160."

The success of the road which went into operation a few months ago at Scranton, Pa., has been so great that two new companies have been chartered to construct and operate lines in that city. The Mayor of Scranton in his annual message thus alludes to this road:

"It may do here to mention the advent of a third railway, one of entirely different construction and motive power. The Suburban Electric Railroad, conceived in much doubt and many misgivings, has blossomed out into a grand success, in which each Scrantonian feels a pardonable pride. It is not alone that it is a new thing, but that it is a good thing, and I take this means of expressing my personal gratification and pride that our public-spirited citizens have had the nerve to undertake and carry out a project so creditable to themselves and the progressive spirit of our city."

Besides the two roads above mentioned others are in successful operation in Port Huron and Detroit, Mich., Montgomery, Ala., Windsor, Ont., Los Angeles, Cal., and a large number in course of construction in various cities throughout the United States.

It is a well-known fact that the heaviest traffic here is during the Summer months. In a horse-car road this must be provided for by the purchase of a large number of horses, when the season is over the greater part of these must be laid off and sold, or kept over during the winter, in either case entailing a heavy loss. Nothing of this kind will occur when electricity is used, as the cost of furnishing power is in direct proportion to the amount of power consumed, and it would cost no more to store electric cars than horse cars.

Another advantage which should not be lost sight of is that people assemble here from all parts of the country, and the novelty of riding on an electric road would add greatly to the traffic, and consequently to the income of the company. It must be conceded that the first cost will be slightly greater, but the many advantages possessed by this means of propulsion greatly outweighs any objection on this point. Another advantage possessed in Asbury Park is that we already have an electric light station, where by adding power and dynamos the necessary current for street cars could be generated at a minimum cost. As to safety it has long ago been demonstrated that there is no more danger in an electric road than in an ordinary horse road."

Excitement in Bound Brook.

The town of Bound Brook was thrown into a fever of excitement Thursday morning by the startling fact that an attempt had been made to rob the Bound Brook post-office, and that one of the thieves had been captured and another probably killed. It seems that shortly after the arrival of the midnight train from New York, the night telegraph operator at the railroad station saw two persons in the postoffice building, which is situated nearly opposite. He quietly awakened landlord Gaddis and other citizens. The building was then surrounded and a demand made for the parties inside to surrender. One of them did so, and the other one ran toward the river. Several shots were fired at him, and he was seen to fall or plunge into the water. Blood marks from the post-office to the river showed that he had been hit by the shots. The river is being dragged as we go press in search of the body. The thief caught was taken to Somerville jail. On the way thither he endeavored to destroy a letter which was secured and may give some clue to where the thieves came from. The postoffice has been in its new location but a week under the management of the new appointee, Mr. Alpaugh.

Resolutions of the Consistory.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 27, 1887.

To the Consistory of the Trinity Reformed Church, Plainfield:

BRETHREN:—Your committee appointed to prepare a minute relating to the dissolution of the pastoral relation now existing beg leave to submit the following: Our pastor having received a call from the Fourth Presbyterian church of Albany New York, convened his Consistory and after stating the fact to them requested their help and counsel in deciding the important matter and at a subsequent meeting after prayerful consideration requested his Consistory to unite with him in a petition to Classis for a dissolution of the pastoral relation now existing that he might be free to accept said call. After due deliberation and earnest prayer for light and guidance, we were reluctantly compelled to agree with him in his decision and unite with him in his request to Classis. In so doing we sever a ministerial connection of peculiar usefulness and harmony. Coming to us six years since, the first pastor of our church, he has seen it grow under his administration from a membership of seventy-nine to one of three hundred and sixty-three. Its income for church expenses from a nominal sum to over five thousand dollars; its benevolent contributions to an amount that places our church third in our Classis. Unselfish, generous and sympathetic he has endeared himself to all our congregation. Pursuing constantly a wise, judicious course he has escaped the trials that so often embitter the pastor's lot, and leaves behind him a harmonious and united church. We wish to add to this record that the courteous kindness, the hearty sympathy, and devoted Christian activity of Mrs. Raymond (his wife) have won the hearts and respect of our people. The influence she has exerted and the impressions formed will long be cherished by us as precious memories. With grateful hearts we make this record of God's dealings with us as pastor and people. We pray that our Heavenly Father will bless him in his new field of labor, and grant him an increased measure of usefulness therein, and we assure him our continued prayers, love and respect. Under these conditions of duty and trying circumstances, we give up our beloved pastor and family to the Fourth Presbyterian church of Albany. May we not in return ask them in Christian sympathy to join their earnest prayers with ours to the Great Head of the church for guidance in choosing a successor who shall be so adapted to our church work and field of labor, that the cause of Christ in our midst may not suffer serious loss by reason of the removal of him who has been our under Shepherd.

P. P. VAN ARSDALE,
R. TITSWORTH,
W. D. W. MILLER, Com.

At a meeting of the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church held Feb. 4th, 1887, it was ordered that the preceding minute be entered upon the church books, and that a copy of the same be sent for publication to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, the Central Times, the Christian Intelligencer, and that a copy also be sent to the session of the Fourth Presbyterian church of Albany, New York.

A Pastor's Farewell.

Trinity Reformed church was filled in the morning, and overcrowded in the evening of Sunday last, by the congregation and a few of the many others friends and admirers of the pastor, to listen to his words of farewell to his charge after years of righteous, faithful and prosperous care. We give the following extracts from Mr. Raymond's discourses of the morning and evening:

MORNING.

"And so my dear people, who have waited so faithfully upon my ministry during these last years, for whose growth in grace I have longed and prayed; in whose ripening characters I have so greatly rejoiced, and for whose increasing blessedness my soul still yearns—I speak to you my last pastoral message, a message peculiarly enforced by this sacramental presence. Use this church which we have so long loved and served together—use this church for the unfolding of that life which shall bring us together again in the upper sanctuary where separations are unknown. Be faithful to your own souls by being faithful here. This is not my house but God's, and here as in times past your burdens will be lifted, your consciences quickened, your drooping spirits revived your energies employed, your soul blessed. Keep in God's presence. Honor the place of revelation. 'Those that be planted in the house of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God.' Those that be planted. Stability has much to do with growth, and the roots torn from the friendly soil in which they have once found a home, do not take kindly to another. To you I speak who have pledged yourselves in this house, not to me, but to God, Under the great law of life, the conditions of spiritual growth will be realized if you establish yourselves in one household of faith, and love it and serve it, loyal through all vicissitudes. Only let your conversation be as becometh the Gospel of Christ, that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that you stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith of the Gospel."

EVENING.

"My dear people, it is this Saviour whom I have preached to you these six years, commending Him to heart and conscience with such power of speech and life as God has given me. It is this Changeless Christ into whose care I now commend you. Because I trust him, I have no anxiety for your future. He who was with us in the beginning, in our weakness and fear, who has blessed our united labors until we have grown into vigorous life, who has drawn into blessed fellowship so many souls weary of sin, who has always gathered enough from among us to supply the needs of the work he was guiding, so that from first to last obligations have been promptly met, especially with reference to me; who gave no Pentecostal seasons, shall we ever forget them? Who again and again opened the windows of Heaven—He is Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day and forever. What He has been, He will be, and what He has done, He will do, and this church, dear to our hearts and to His heart, will continue to bless and be blessed. Our fellowship has been singularly precious during these years; knowing nothing of discord or distrust. We have belonged to each other and believed each other. Together we have wept and rejoiced, and the tenderest ties known among men have bound us. Our mutual love and confidence is not now to be broken. We go because God calls us, and nothing has been more helpful to our hearts than your unquestioning recognition of this. And to you my friends who have not worshipped with us, and yet in so many ways have shown your interest and sympathy, to you I may speak a word of grateful appreciation of all the kindnesses and favors bestowed through the years of our residence in this fair city. Never do I expect to have so many personal friends among brethren of other churches. You have done much to make our residence here delightful. I have no words of farewell. The great pleasure of the future shall be to visit you, and I hope again and again to stand in this pulpit and preach the unsearchable riches of Christ Jesus. And now my dear people I commend you to Him who never changes, and to the word of His grace, which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified."

BENEDICTION.

"And now may the God of Peace who brought forth from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ, that Great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in all things that work to do His will, working in you that which is well pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ to whom be all the glory forever. Amen."

A Popular North Plainfielder in the West.

SANDUSKY, Ohio, Feb. 5th, 1887.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I left Plainfield a week ago on a business trip to Ohio and have been much interested in the rapid progress made in many towns throughout the state. Telephone exchanges, electric lights, water works and street railways are among the many improvements. The little town of Kent, Ohio, is putting in the Holly system of water works and the streets are lined with cast iron pipe waiting for a thaw to complete the mains. The works of the company are perfect and through the courtesy of the Chief Engineer, Jacob H. Yocum, esq., and Dr. J. A. Morris, chairman of the fire and water committee and the leading physician there, I saw and learned considerable of the town. I have been looking into the water works question with considerable interest, owing to the late agitation in our Borough. Passing from Kent to Warren, Ohio, I there found S. R. Bullock & Co., of New York, (friend Waltmann's firm) preparing on a grand scale to put in water works. There again I find cast iron pipe, and in a few months the town will have a great supply of water. The citizens are delighted at the prospects. Warren is a small but prosperous town; their total indebtedness is $5,000. I find considerable interest manifested out here in the great strikes in and around New York; some feel that labor will win, others capital. Youngstown is a go ahead place; every convenience is found there. I had not been in the town ten minutes when I heard the sharp cry of "murder" emanating from the second floor of a building that I was in front of. I made up my mind I was in a very wicked town. Many persons ran up the stairs to see who was being murdered, for the cries increased; the shrieks were terrible to listen to. Reaching the second floor it was discovered that a man having a tooth drawn had jumped out of the dentist's chair shrieking murder and attempting to escape. He was at once branded as an ass and a coward. We all breathed freely when the cause was explained. The Salvation Army, composed of women, are making a raid on the wicked people of Youngstown and in their own peculiar way, they parade the streets in groups of three, walking abreast, the middle one singing hymns, while the other two carry large flags. At intervals an invitation is extended those within hearing to attend meeting. These remarks were generally met with ridicule; the occasion lacked solemnity which destroyed the desired effect. Having visited several other prominent towns I reached Massillon, Ohio, yesterday. I was agreeably disappointed in this place; it is a beautiful town with about 9,000 inhabitants, handsome buildings, good streets, electric lights, etc. My eye caught the sign "Massillon Water Co., S. R. Bullock & Co., Contractors." I entered their handsome offices and there met the popular and courteous Assistant Engineer, Mr. C. Edward Dunfield, whose kindness and attention made my visit exceedingly pleasant. Here was another opportunity to learn and see something more of water works. I was driven to the works, (and they are a model) examined everything carefully. Massillon is proud, and boasts of the finest works in the State. The stand pipe is 100 feet high, holds 300,000 gallons of water, and the supply is inexhaustible. The streets are full of cement pipe belonging to a former company, and Bullock & Co., when they got the franchise, left the old stuff where it belongs, (buried out of sight) and have put in 18 miles of cast iron pipe, which is fifty per cent. dearer than cement. Since this firm made our Borough a proposal for water works cast iron pipe has advanced in price five dollars a ton. We will never have so good an offer again for water works as was made us by them, and it is a thousand pities our Borough authorities allowed it to slip. Whoever gets the franchise for Plainfield will make us pay dearly if we ever do want water. I had a pleasant visit from Mr. S. Hoover, the genial proprietor of the Massillon Weekly American; he is a progressive gentleman, and has strongly advocated the recent improvements in Massillon. In Tiffin, Ohio, where I was this morning, that town pays for its hydrants ninety dollars each per year for the first ninety, and seventy-five dollars for each additional hydrant. They have the Holly system. Bullock & Co. offered us hydrants for $32.50 each and agreed to give us cast iron pipe too. Akron and Youngstown were visited a few days ago with heavy thunder and lightning. I imagined summer had come suddenly upon us. The Winter has not been a severe one out here, blizzards lasting only a few days, and the frost not very deep in the ground. This town (Sandusky) is greatly scattered; is progressive, has all the new improvements, and everybody seems to be busy. I was flattering myself I would be home in a few days but a telegram from St. Louis calls me there, and notwithstanding I have had a pleasant trip yet I find "no place like home."

What is a Cold in the Head? Medical authorities say it is due to atmospheric germs, uneven clothing of the body, rapid cooling when in a perspiration, etc. The important point is, that a cold in the head is a [illegible], an inflammation of the lining membrane of the nose, which, when unchecked, is certain to produce a catarrhal condition—for catarrh is essentially a "cold" which nature is no longer able to "resolve" or throw off. Ely's Cream Balm has proved its superiority, and sufferers from cold in the head should resort to it before that common ailment becomes seated and ends in positive catarrh.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

Free from Lime and Absolutely Pure.

The Royal Baking Powder is made from Cream of Tartar specially refined and prepared for its use by patent processes, by which the Tartrate of Lime is totally eliminated.

This highly important result has been attained only with great care, labor and expense. In money alone a quarter of a million dollars has been invested in patents, machinery and appliances by which the crude Cream of Tartar, being procured direct from the wine districts of Europe, and subjected in this country to these exclusive processes, is rendered entirely free, not only from the objectionable Tartrate of Lime, but from other foreign substances.

This adds greatly to the cost of manufacturing Royal Baking Powder; but, as all its other ingredients are selected and prepared with the same precise care and regardless of labor or expense, an article is produced that is entirely free from any extraneous substance and chemically pure in all respects.

No lime, earth, alum or impurity of any kind can, by inadvertence or by the use of adulterated articles or otherwise, be introduced into the "Royal," and it contains no ingredients except those certified by the most eminent chemists necessary to make a pure, wholesome and perfect baking powder.

It costs more to manufacture the Royal Baking Powder than any other, but it is, as shown by chemical analysis, the only absolutely pure Baking Powder made.

Royal is the only Baking Powder made that is free from both lime and alum.

R. P. Rockwell, editor of the Engineering and Mining Journal, who has made a recent visit to the coal and iron regions of Tennessee and Alabama, says that that part of the country is "booming" more than any other. He never saw anything like the development of the mining resources of the South or the enterprise and push those in whose hands the business is are displaying.

The administration of justice in New Jersey costs the taxpayers over $500 000 every year. This great amount is spent in the State and county courts, and does not include the fees of a number of officials who enjoy large incomes from litigants. The great sum mentioned is increased by the cumbersome system which was fastened upon New Jersey when it was a colony and has been continued with slight departure for one hundred and fifty years.

Speaker Carlisle has, in response to the urgent request of the corps of lady newspaper correspondents in Washington, designated that the first two rows of seats in the private gallery, adjoining the press gallery, be reserved for their exclusive occupancy. This was done in compliance with an urgent demand made to the committee on rules, but now that their request has been granted the favor does not seem to be appreciated, as not even those who were the most persistent in their efforts to secure the concession have claimed the privilege granted them by the Speaker.

Once in four years the Post Office Department informs the public that in case an inventor has produced a new device suitable for use in the postal service, which would be an improvement on those in use, a change would be made. The announcement is about to be made, and will of course result in the appearance of a host of inventors, each claiming his invention to be the most complete and desirable for the particular use for which it is intended, and each confident in the belief that the committee intrusted with the duty of examining the devices submitted for examination will agree with him in his opinion as to the value of his particular invention as compared with the hundreds of others that are presented.

"It is unbecoming, for many reasons, that the Governor should be obliged to board at hotels, and bustle around for accommodations, like a homeless traveler in the Capitol of the State. He should be supplied by the State with a house to live in. Even churches do so much for their ministers. How much better can the rich and powerful State afford to provide a home for its Governor. The rebuilding of the State House seems an appropriate time for making this improvement. While we are about this business of renovating the Capitol, let us supply the deficiency. A moderate sum, a mere drop in the bucket to the State, would build a commodious and handsome Executive mansion on the State House grounds, just west of the Capitol building. We firmly believe that everybody would approve of the expenditure."

The soldier has been paid all that was promised, and far more. The pension list to-day is fifty per cent. greater than the interest on the public debt. Now, let us hear a word for the citizen and for the taxpayer; for the men who labored to sustain the army in the field and to maintain the credit of the nation in all the markets of the world. For twenty years after the war they bore with little complaint all the burdens the war imposed. Now hear them. Let the bondholder and the soldier for awhile be quiet, until the hard-working American citizen in the field and in the factory gets his share of the benefits of a restored Union. This should come to him in lower taxes, a release from the exactions which since 1861 have been little changed. Let us see who in Congress will speak for that forgotten individual, the American citizen.—Louisville Courier Journal.

On Monday morning last Raymond Rodgers Belmont, aged twenty-one years, son of August Belmont and member of the banking firm of the Belmonts, accidentally shot himself at the house of his father, No. 109 Fifth avenue, New York. He returned home shortly after twelve o'clock, and at his request the day watchman, Leonhard Bahr, descended to the cellar with him to engage in pistol practice. While engaged in the practice the accidental discharge of his pistol caused his death, which was instantaneous. The coroner took the statements of the watchman, Dr. Asch and Prof. Wm. Mecklenburg Polk, M. D., the family physician, after which he endorsed the paper as follows: "An inquisition on the view of the body of Raymond Belmont, whereby it is found that he came to his death by shock from a pistol-shot wound." He, like everybody else, is convinced that the shooting was accidental.

The editor of the independent and able Philadelphia Times, Col. A. K. McClure, has given his views as follows on the outlook for 1888:

"The President is stronger to-day with the people than he was in 1884. The politicians have abused him simply because he has carried out his policy of civil service reform, as they promised the people during the campaign that he would do. He would have more Democrats in office if it were not that the politicians have brought such a pressure to get Tom, Dick and Harry into office. He has appointed a number on the recommendation of Senators and Congressmen, but the men have turned out badly. This has taught him to be cautious and conservative, and it has strengthened him with the masses. If renominated, as I feel certain that he will be, I think he will carry New York, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Indiana. The business men of the country are satisfied with his Administration. With any man but Cleveland the Democracy have no chance of success in the next campaign."

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y

By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

SYLVIA'S HOME.

"Its all nonsense!" said Sylvia Dana, as the letter dropped from her hands, and an indignant flush overspread the pure perfect oval of her lovely face. "As if I would leave you mamma, to be adopted into the most luxurious home that wealth could give. No—a thousand times no!"

The little woman in the straight black draperies and the widow's cap looked pleased and yet sad.

"But, Sylvia, my dear, are you sure you are making a wise decision in thus refusing your uncle's offer? He is willing to adopt you and provide for you as his own—nor should you attach an undue importance to the few words about me which he has written. He never approved his brother's marriage with me; he never liked me; but you are quite another person, Sylvia. Ought you to throw away a chance like this, and for a mere whim?"

"Mamma, it is not a whim. I would rather stay here in this poor little rose-covered cottage and make dresses forever than leave you. Don't, please, try to shake my resolution any more; indeed, it will be of no use. I shall write to Uncle Dana this very night."

And she did—a brief indignant letter, blotted with her tears, resolutely declining the liberal offer of the merchant prince, and scarcely even thanking him for it.

"As if I would leave mamma!" she kept repeating to herself.

And then Sylvia Dana sat down before the mirror and began unbraiding the magnificent masses of bronze-gold hair that fell like a glimmering cloud down to her waist.

It was a bright and far from unpleasing reflection that the mirror returned to her as she sat there, thoughtful and abstracted. An oval face, pink and white in its hues, like the satin lining of a seashell, deep grey eyes, limpid and almond-shaped, with a fringe of thick lashes curving upward at the ends, small straight features, and a fresh crimson mouth—that was what she saw. And viewing this duplicate of herself, Sylvia Dana could hardly be aware that she was very lovely.

"I suppose if I lived in a great city like London, and visited at crowds of houses, and went out every night to parties and soirees, where people congregate together, I might turn my beauty to some account, and make what the world calls a great match," she pondered to herself, with a slight scornful curl to her upper-lip. "But fate has ordained it otherwise. I am to stay here and make dresses; but then mamma will be with me. Darling mamma! No, I do not for a single instant regret the decision that I have made. I wonder what sort of an answer I shall receive to my letter to Uncle Paul Dana?"

She received no answer at all. Uncle Paul Dana was not the sort of man to repeat an offer that had once been so scornfully rejected. He had loved his dead brother, he had been willing liberally to provide for that brother's daughter. Beyond this he would not advance a single inch.

So he read over Sylvia's letter with a curious smile on his old face, and put it away into one of the pigeon-holes of his desk.

"She must be an uncompromising little virago," he said to himself. "Well, well, as she has made her bed she must lie in it."

It was late in August when Sylvia, returning from Mrs. Squire Robinson's, where she had been to fit some grenadine dresses, stopped to rest in her favorite nook, where a rustic bridge spanned the front stream, and a gnarled old willow hung almost horizontally over the crystal-brown waters.

As she sat down on the tree, throwing off her bonnet with a sigh of relief, there was a rustling among the tall rushes close to her; she started up with a scream, and saw a tall stranger busied in angling.

"I hope I have not frightened you?" he said, courteously lifting his hat.

Sylvia smiled at her own folly.

"I did not see you when I sat down to rest."

"And I am sorry you have seen me now," he said pleasantly, "if I am to drive you away from your shady refuge. I can fish a little lower down the stream just as well as here."

He was gathering up his tackle preparatory to retreat when Sylvia stopped him.

"No," she said peremptorily. "I am going home."

She kept her word, but as she was passing the one sole "village inn," Mrs. Martin, the landlord's wife, ran out to accost her.

"Miss Sylvia," she said, "have you a spare room at the cottage you and your mamma would let to a decent body come down for a week's fishin'? There's plenty o' table-room here, but our accommodation is small for sleepin', and ——"

"Yes, certainly," said Sylvia. "Mamma would let her room to a respectable person, if Mr. Martin will come up with him to-morrow."

For the widow and her daughter could scarcely afford to let any opportunity pass for turning an honest penny.

"Oh, I'll go bail he's respectable," said Mrs. Martin, evidently relieved by Miss Dana's answer, "for he's willing to pay in advance."

Sylvia smiled a little at the good landlady's standard of respectability, and went on in the fragrant midsummer twilight, moving as lightly as the fire-flies glimmered at her side.

Mr. Martin brought up the guest next morning, according to agreement made by his buxom wife, and introduced him as "Mr. Mainwaring."

Sylvia started and blushed when she recognized her chance acquaintance at the trout stream, of the night before, but she inclined her head courteously, nevertheless, while Mr. Mainwaring thought to himself that he had never in all his life seen so pretty a creature as Miss Dana.

"I must sketch her head," he inwardly pondered, "though I don't believe there is a tint in all my color-case capable of reproducing the golden burnish on her hair. A perfect blonde, and yet her eyes are dark and deep as liquid wells! How on earth came such a royal little blossom to be wasting its sweetness on the desert air of this out-of-the-way little village?"

So Mr. Mainwaring took possession of the little chamber, with its curtained dormer-window, its spare-bed smelling of dried rose-leaves and lavender, and dimity-covered furniture and cleanly-scoured board floor; for Mrs. Dana and Sylvia had never dreamed of the extravagance of a carpet in their best "bed-room," and almost before the widow and her daughter knew it, he had become an indispensable element of the little family circle.

He helped Mrs. Dana train her apricot espalier against the south garden wall, and held skeins of sewing-silk for Sylvia to wind, and brought back rare bouquets of ferns and wild-flowers from his fishing excursions, and taught Sylvia how to copy them in crayons, and insensibly became almost one of the family.

"I'm sure I don't know what we shall do when Mr. Mainwaring is gone," Mrs. Dana said, for the week's fishing had gradually lengthened itself out into a month, while Sylvia flushed and grew pale, and went upstairs to get a ball of waiting cord, and did not come down again for a long, long time.

But all pleasant things draw to an end, and so did Mr. Mainwaring's sejourn among the peaceful shadows of the sylvan hills.

The evening before his departure he requested a special interview with Mrs. Dana.

"Madame," he said, with the chivalrous courtesy which seemed of right to belong to him, "I have a very great favor to ask of you!"

"A favor?" said the simple little widow. "I suppose it's the receipt for that cough medicine?"

"No, madam, it is not. I want to ask you for permission to marry Sylvia?"

"To marry Sylvia?" Mrs. Dana began to tremble all over. "But my goodness, Mr. Mainwaring, you're only a dry goods clerk; you can't afford to marry."

"I said I was in the dry goods business, madame, but not exactly a clerk. I think I can support Miss Dana comfortably, and you also, madame, if you will consent to grace our new home with your presence."

"To be sure. I've a hundred a year of my own," put in the widow, "and that would help along with the housekeeping."

"Undoubtedly!" Mr. Mainwaring made answer with a quiet peculiar smile.

"And when——" began Mrs. Dana, but Mainwaring interrupted her:

"Without loss of time. I should like to take my bride with me when I return to my home."

Mrs. Dana turned, with a puzzled face, to Sylvia, who just then entered.

"This is very sudden, Sylvia."

"Very sudden, mamma!"

"But I like Mr. Mainwaring."

"So do I, mamma," laughed Sylvia, rosy as a sunset cloud.

"And we might have a cozy little wedding with just a few friends."

"Yes, mamma," Sylvia answered dutifully; but the next morning, just as Mrs. Dana was taking her seat behind the coffee urn, Mr. Mainwaring and Sylvia came in.

"Dear me, children!" questioned the widow; "where have you been?"

"To be married, mamma," sobbed Sylvia, hiding her face on her mother's shoulder. "For Charles must return to-night, and I did not like to trouble you with the responsibility of so sudden a decision."

"Married, child!" Mrs. Dana looked from son to daughter in blank surprise. "Well, perhaps it's just as well, for the parlors are small, and we couldn't get anything nice for the wedding breakfast."

"Mamma always makes the best of everything," laughed Sylvia.

So it was settled that Mrs. Dana should join her children just as soon as the house could be let, and her modest belongings packed up.

"I wonder if we shall ever meet your uncle, my love," she said, as she helped Sylvia to fold up her few simple dresses.

"London is a great city, mamma, you must remember," Sylvia answered.

It was just a month afterwards that Mrs. Dana was rolling in a cozy carriage from the railway-station towards No. — —— street, Mayfair.

"I wonder what sort of a house they live in," pondered the gentle little widow, holding tight on to her bird-cage. "Sylvia never has written me anything about that. Most likely they have got have a house, or a suite somewhere. Young people just beginning the world must plan moderately at first; but I do hope he has been able to give her a set of cushioned chairs and a substantial carpet. I'm glad I brought the old damask curtains; they'll make a nice lounge cover, or something of the sort. There's nothing like economy. My goodness! what are we stopping at this big house for?"

The coachman touched his hat.

"Please, ma'am, we're here."

Mrs. Dana descended in great surprise, and found herself the next moment in a broad marble-paved vestibule, lighted by a great central chandelier. A servant threw open a pair of folding-doors, revealing a superb suite of apartments, carpeted in royal purple velvet, and furnished in purple satin and rosewood, while from the lavender-tinted walls, panelled in thread-like lines of gold, hung paintings all aglow with Russian forests, and Italian lakes, and soft Swiss vales.

"It's a palace!" thought Mrs. Dana, when suddenly a loving arm stole round her neck, and a familiar voice murmured:

"Dearest mamma, welcome to my new home!"

It was Sylvia in a dress of crimson moire-antique, with thread lace encircling her throat, and rubies flashing from her pretty ears.

"And here is my husband, mamma—Mainwaring Dana—and here is his uncle and mine."

"Gracious me!" ejaculated Mrs. Dana. "Why, it's my husband's brother, who—"

"Who has made a great fool of himself, and who heartily repents it, madame," said a tall stately old gentleman, coming forward with a bow like a second Chevalier Bayard. "It is time we should pardon one another, now that my nephew, Brookes Dana's son, is married to your daughter and my niece."

Mrs. Dana did not withdraw the hand her stern brother-in-law had taken, but she looked sorely bewildered nevertheless.

"But I thought his name was Mainwaring."

"So it was," laughingly explained the young gentleman in question—"Mainwaring Dana. You see, I knew of the family feud, and I wished to see the state of things for myself. Pleading to my uncle a business tour, I visited your village. Sylvia's grey eyes there conquered me, as they have since conquered my uncle. This is Sylvia's home, dear mother; my uncle resides next door. Are you satisfied with the marriage she has made?"

Mrs. Dana sat down, scarcely knowing whether she was asleep or awake.

"And how long have you known this, Sylvia?" she asked.

"I only became aware of it on the morning of my wedding-day, mamma. Even then I thought I was marrying a poor young man; and you can imagine my surprise at being brought to this fairy palace of luxury, and installed as its mistress. Mainwaring would not let me write to you—he wanted to give you a surprise."

"And he has succeeded," said Mrs. Dana. "Don't anybody speak to me just yet, until I get over this whirling in my brain."

Thus the bitter family feeling died out, soothed by the sweet intercessor, love, and the stern brother-in-law and the meek little widow became fast friends.

"After all," said Mr. Paul Dana, "there's no calculating on these things. When I declined to adopt Sylvia I hadn't an idea that she was to be adopted for life by my nephew Mainwaring. Life is an odd puzzle—a very odd one."

"Yes, uncle," whispered Sylvia, stealing close up to his side; "but I think it is a very pleasant one."

FREEHOLDERS' PROCEEDINGS.

OFFICIAL.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 3, 1887.

Regular meeting of the board, held on Thursday, February 3, 1887, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Chapman, Doty, Debbie, Dardis, Hubbard, Howard, Haliday, Isenmann, Oliver, Pierson, Pitcairn, Roll, Vanderbeek, West, Wright—16.

Absent—Freeholder Astfalk.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting list of bills ordered 'paid) and, on motion, approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communication from the grand jury of the January term, 1887, was read:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—I am directed by the grand jury of Union county of the January term to forward to your honorable body the following resolution, passed January 10th, 1887.

Resolved, That this grand jury desire to thus express its approval of the action of the Board of Freeholders in constructing the recent additions to the County jail and thereby relieving its crowded condition.

We would especially commend said board for the substantial manner in which all such work has been performed, and take pleasure in congratulating the citizens of Union county upon having officials who, while alive to the public necessities, are as jealous of the public funds.

C. A. SWIFT, Clerk.

On motion of Freeholder Chapman received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

The county attorney presented an opinion in reference to the payment of election claims, which was read as follows:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—Three classes of election bills, presented by various election officers of the city of Elizabeth, have been referred to me, viz.:

First—The members of the different boards of election who are elected in November, 1885, and qualified within the time required by law, claim three dollars ($3) per day for their services, payable by the county.

Second—Members attending the county board of canvassers, claim three dollars ($3) for that day's service.

Third—Several have bills for carrying ballot boxes to the city clerk.

Until this year it has been customary for the board to pay members of election boards three dollars ($3) per day for their services on election day—this has been done under P. L., 1880, p. 300; the city of Elizabeth has likewise paid them a like sum under city ordinance; by an act of the legislature, P. L., 1886, p. 165, approved March 30, 1886, it is provided that in cases where the general and charter elections fall on the same day, that the county shall pay one-half and the city one-half; the officers who present the first class of bills claim that having been elected and qualified before the act went into effect, they are entitled to the same fees as in former years. Under the decision of our supreme court in the case of the State, Wm. E. Skinner vs. John W. Bogert, collector of Bergen county, xiii Vroom, p. 407, I must hold that this class of claims cannot be allowed.

By statue title "Elections" p. 359 par. 124, and P. L. 1880, p. 300, it is provided that each member of any board of county canvassers for each day's services shall receive three dollars ($3) to be paid by the county collector. This is purely a county charge, and the second class of claims, in my opinion, should be allowed.

By an act of legislature P. L. 1886, p. 95, it is made the duty of the election inspectors immediately after the ballots are counted, to convey the ballot box to the city clerk's office. No fees are specified in the act, nor are they, in my opinion, entitled to any for this work, as it is included in their bill rendered for their day's service, the act under which they receive their fees expressly providing that "each member of each election board for each day's service shall receive three dollars and no more." Therefore I must report adversely as to the third class of claims.

Respectfully submitted,
FREDERICK C. MARSH,
County Attorney.

On motion of Freeholder Doty, received and placed on file.

A communication from a committee of the Board of Freeholders of Mercer county in regard to forfeited recognizances, or bail bonds, was read.

ONE KIND OF LUCK.

"Charming girl, that Miss Rockwood."

"Yes, she is rather nice."

"I don't think I ever met any one who could be more thoroughly entertaining."

"You seem to be rather smitten, with her, Robert."

"Yes, I admire her exceedingly. Lucky thing I didn't meet her before I married you, my dear."

"Yes, it is rather lucky—for her."

PLAIN TALK FOR YOUNG MEN.

Remember, my young friend, that the world is older than you are by several years; that for thousands of years it has been full of smarter and better young men than yourself; that when they died the old globe went whirling on and not one man in ten millions went to the funeral or even heard of the death. Be smart as you can, of course. Know as much as you can. Shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world, but don't try to dazzle or astonish the people with it. And don't imagine a thing is so simple because you may happen to think it. Don't be too sorry for your father because he knows so much less than you do. He used to think he was as much smarter than his father as you think you are smarter than yours. The world has great need of young men, but no greater need than the young men have of the world. Your clothes fit you better than your father's fit him; they cost more money; they are more stylish. He used to be straight and nimble, and perhaps thought his father old-fashioned. Your mustache is neater, the cut of your hair is better, and you are prettier—oh, far prettier!—than "pa." But, young man, the old gentleman gets the biggest salary, and his homely, scrambling signature on the business end of a check will drain more money out of the bank in five minutes than you could get out with a ream of paper and a copper plate signature in six months. Young men are useful and they are ornamental, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a picnic successfully without them. But they are no novelties. They have been here. Every generation has a full supply of them, and will have to the end of time; and each crop will think themselves quite ahead of the last, and will live to be called old fogies by their sons. Go ahead. Your sons will, by and by, pity you for your old ways. Don't be afraid that your merit will not be discovered. People all over the world are hunting for you, and if you are worth finding they will find you. A diamond isn't so easily found as a quartz pebble, but people search for it all the more intently.

COL. BOB INGERSOLL'S BELIEF.

Man kneels according to his wants, and the beggar is always ruled by his patron. But I say that no gift of money to an institution which carries with it an obligation to teach the superstitions of the donor should ever be accepted. It is a curse and not a benefit. Some one left money to Andover Seminary poisoned with the condition that the mistakes of the donor should be perpetuated. Now arises in the history of that institution the question whether it shall lose the money or whether, on the other hand, it shall teach what we know are lies, out of pure economy.

We have to fight the dead. For instance Stuyvesant Park, in New York city, is closed at 6 o'clock every night, locked by a Dutchman who lived 200 years ago. I want the living to have this world. Let the dead take care of themselves. When we die we will abdicate to our children.

I hope it will turn out that there is a God. I wish there was to come a sacred joy for every tear that has been shed. For every martyr I would like to know that there is a life that would pay him a thousandfold, but I would not take it myself at the expense of hell for others. I've no objections to being happy in Heaven forever, but I would not want to be there unless those I loved were there also.

I would like to see pride and love of display taxed in our churches as well as the land the churches stand on. When the churches go into the dome business I say God ought to pay the taxes.

I would do away with all oaths in Courts. A jury is likely to put all evidences on an equality that is sworn to. A rascal can go into partnership for a moment with God. See? And the juror who would not believe the rascal gives credit to the firm. Even if I were a Christian I would want the legal oath abolished. We could have a chance at the liars then.

I believe in marriage, but no gentleman wants a woman to stay with him after she wants to leave him. The church seems to think that by keeping people together who won't keep the marriage contract they ennoble the human race. I deny it.

Finally, I believe in living for this world, in passing laws for this world, and letting the world to come take care of itself—Address in New York, Nov. 11.

TIRED EYES.

People speak about their eyes being tired, meaning that the retina, or seeing portion of the eye, is fatigued, but such is not the case, as the retina hardly ever gets tired. The fatigue is in the inner and outer muscles attached to the eyeball and the muscle of accommodation which surrounds the lens of the eye. When a near object is to be looked at this muscle relaxes and allows the lens to thicken, increasing its refractive power. The inner and outer muscles are used in covering the eye on the object to be looked at, the inner one being especially used when a near object is looked at. It is in the three muscles mentioned that the fatigue is felt, and relief is secured temporarily by closing the eyes or gazing at far-distant objects. The usual indication of strain is a redness of the rim of the eyelid, betokening a congested state of the inner surface, accompanied with some pain. Sometimes this weariness indicates the need of glasses rightly adapted to the persons, and in the other cases the true remedy is to massage the eye and its surroundings as far as may be with the hand wet in cold water.

"SISTER, HAVE YOU CAUGHT THE CAT?"

A young man who called on a young woman in Westfield the other evening was surprised to hear from the hall staircase—while waiting for her to appear—"Sister, have you caught the cat?" The little girl replied, "I'll have her in a minute!" In a few moments the child appeared in the parlor and, sitting by the stove, laid the cat on a rug. Pussy seemed to be content with its nest, for the parlor had been warmed in expectation of the coming man. When the young lady appeared the little sister bowed politely and went out of the room. Once during the evening the cat started toward the doorway, but its owner hastily closed the door and sent it back by the stove. The visitor's curiosity could be curbed no longer, and he inquired why she was so anxious to keep the cat in the parlor. No answer was given at first, but one was insisted upon, when she said: "You remember, my dear, that at the 'Mission' two weeks ago one of the fathers said that no young woman should be alone when she received a young gentleman. I did not want any other around when you called, so I have determined to avoid being alone by having the cat always with me—at least as long as we remain single!" The explanation was satisfactory, it is needless to say.

GOOD OLD MOTHERS.

Somebody has said that "a mother's love is the only virtue that did not suffer by the fall of Adam." Whether Adam fell or not, it is quite clear that the unselfish love of a good mother is the crowning glory of the race. No matter how long and how sorely it may be tried, its arms are ever open to receive the returning prodigal. One faithful heart never loses its affection for the wanderer who has strayed from the fold. Adversity and sorrow may come with all their terrible force, but the motherly affection clings to its idol closely. We never see a good old mother sitting in the armchair that we do not think of the storms which have pelted into her cheerful face without scouring it. Her smile is a solace, her presence a benediction. A man may stand more exertion of some kinds than a woman, but he is apt to lose much of his laughter, his cheerfulness, his gentleness and his trust. Yet we rarely find a frail mother whose spirit has been worn threadbare and unlovely by trials that would have turned a dozen men into misanthropes and demons. A sweet old mother is common. A sweet old father is not so common. In exhaustless patience, hope, faith and benevolence the mothers are sure to lead. Alas, that their worth too often is not fully known and properly appreciated until they pass beyond mortal reach! God bless the good old mothers!

GIRLS ARE DASHING.

The proper thing in girls this year is dashing and straight and strong. She greets mankind with an impressive stare as she strides along the street with her chin in the air, her shoulders well back and her arms swinging to and fro. This week settled it. The opera brought society back, and the proper girl came romping home with flashing eyes and ruddy glow of perfect health showing through the nut-brown tan of the summer's campaign. The clinging girl with tender eyes, the romantic girl with the yearning glare, the domestic girl with the purring voice, the brilliant girl with her turgid French, the smuggling girl with her artful smirk, and the girl who clung to the skirts of mamma—they are gone. They went away in a flutter with timorous screams at the snort of the engine and the rush of the burly world. Now they've come back, but they're not the same. Instead, there's an army of lofty, gay, intrepid, meddlesome, dashing girls, who swagger abroad with dilicious audacity, and who have brought the breeze of the mountain top, the salty flavor of the ocean's edge and the buoyant air of the Berkshire hills into the very heart of dirty, dusty and stale New York. Of all the types that the town has seen the girl of to-day, with her highbred look, her daring style and winsome assumption of manliness, is far and away the most fetching thing that the world can show.

THE BUSINESS HE WAS IN.

A countryman and his wife were in town the other day for the first time, and they were wandering around looking in the show windows and having a good time. Finally they came to a bank, and wondering what kind of a business it was that had no signs or display of any kind, the man stepped in to inquire. There was no one in at the time but a very nobby young clerk—who was also very smart—and as the rustic gazed around at everything, the clerk tackled him for some sport.

"Very fine place we have here, sir?" he said. "Can we do anything for you to-day?"

"Well, durn me," said the visitor, ignoring the question; "this beats 'em all. What kind of a dog-gone business do you do here, anyhow? What do you sell?"

"Oh, we do a great business. We sell mules."

"No, you don't say? Well, durn me." He stepped to the door and called his wife: "Sal, come here and look." She came in and he led her around. "Just think of it, Sal. Ain't it purty? An', Sal, they sell mules here. That's their business. Trade's good, too, Sal. Just look at him," he continued, jerking his thumb toward the clerk; "he's the only one they've got left, an' I reckon they wouldn't have him if the collar he's workin' in hadn't skinned his neck and shoulders."

As they passed out, the man remarked softly to his wife: "We may be from the head waters, Sal, but that's no sign we don't know mules."

THE DEAD LOCK AT TRENTON

[SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.]

TRENTON, N. J., SENATE CHAMBER, FEB. 17TH.—Joint Session met at noon. Two ballots were taken with no change in the result of yesterday. Adjourned until to-morrow.

PENSION FRAUDS.

It is certainly very strange that so many private pension bills, devoid of honest character, should be rushed through Congress apparently without consideration, and well is it for the country that a vigilant President is at the post of duty, determined to ferret out fraud and bold enough to interpose the veto power.

Here are a couple of specimen Congressional bricks—

Congress votes to pension a chap for "long and faithful service," when the records of the War Department show that he enlisted October 25, 1861, was reported a deserter soon afterwards, tried by court martial for desertion and sentenced to imprisonment until the expiration of his term of enlistment.

Is that the kind of faithful service Congress would reward?

Here comes another noble fellow to the Treasury door, endorsed by Congress as a hero deserving of national gratitude.

What is his authenticated record?

Read it as follows:

He enlisted August 14 1861, was soon admitted into hospital, and discharged from the service for disability under a certificate worded thus:—

"This man has been in this hospital for the past eight months. We do not believe him sick or that he has been sick, but completely worthless. He is totally unfit for the invalid corps or for any other military duty."

That will do.

President Cleveland very properly denounces such bogus claims as insults to all decent veteran soldiers—men who enlisted to fight, not to shirk.

PARTISAN ANXIETY.

The Republicans having become very anxious about the enlarging Prohibition party vote, are busy hunting around for some means to stop the political exodus.

Do they really comprehend the truth of the situation?

We think not.

The Republican leaders evidently misjudge the real character of the Prohibitionists, who, discarding the craft of politics, hold principles of far higher value than party allegiance of any kind.

That briefly, but truthfully portrays a Prohibitionist.

Republicans may jeer, and Democrats denounce, yet there the Prohibitionist stands, convinced that he is right, and bound, if possible, to make all other people believe and act as he does.

You cannot drive a genuine Prohibitionist. He is like a mule; the harder you strike, the stronger he will pull back.

Friends! Listen to a few words of wisdom.

Say what you please about the injustice and absurdity of liquor prohibition, certain facts stare you straight in the face. For instance:—

The avowed advocates of prohibition will not compromise with what they deem to be an evil, and honestly declare, before all men, their determination to battle on, beneath their own flag, for the final success of a cherished cause, wound whom it may.

The Prohibitionists constitute an intelligent and growing power throughout every section of the United States.

Well known facts.

It is folly to shut your eyes and say the prospect is lovely, and that Prohibitionists are nothing more than cranks.

If the Republican party will go over flat-footed and undisguised to the Prohibitionists, and adopt and carry out in good faith all their peculiar principles and measures touching the liquor question, the breach may be closed.

Not otherwise.

No half-way station or sugar-coated plums will satisfy the steel-armored Knights of the Crystal Fountain.

Mark that!

Large numbers of politicians have been in attendance at the Joint Meeting at Trenton the past week.

Speaking of the action of Mr. Throckmorton in voting for ex-Governor Bedle in the joint meeting of last week, the Monmouth Democrat says that "there is nothing in his position that indicates that he will not act with the majority of the Democratic caucus on that question when the time arrives, and his friends throughout the State need be under no apprehensions upon that score."

Leon Abbett has been a consistent and staunch Democrat all his life, not only acquiescing in party nominations that were distasteful to him, but supporting the candidates with all the energy of his vigorous nature, and the Democratic masses will not now see their representative stricken down by bribery and corporate influence without taking vengeance upon traitors of high or low degree.

The leading officers of the coal corporations now admit that the main reason of the strikes which have paralyzed business in and around New York, and cost both parties immense sums of money, was the reduction in the wages of "topmen 22½ to 22 cents per hour." How these men can account to themselves and the public for doing so great an injury for so slight a cause, would puzzle anyone, unless it were a leading officer in a coal corporation.

There are now upon the pension rolls 365,783 persons, and there are bills in Congress which, if passed, will swell the number to 865,000 persons, and require an annual expenditure of $147,000,000. This pension business is being swelled to such proportions and stretched to such limits as to be a serious abuse. But it needs moral courage to meet the subject dispassionately and fairly, and as that is not a staple article among our national statesmen, there is every probability that the abuse will continue to grow until it either falls of its own weight, or drags other and better institutions down with it.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Passaic county was well represented at Trenton this week by numerous influential Democrats.

At the annual banquet of the "Eclectic Club," a colored organization of Trenton, one of the speakers advised his race to rally to the support of Cleveland in 1888.

According to the Morris county newspapers the office of Sheriff in that county has become so poor that a man of business ability cannot afford to seek it. If it were not for traffic in tramps the office would not be worth seeking in Burlington county.

The annual wealth producing capacity of the United States is far in advance of any other country. The statistic are United States, $825,000,000; France, $375,000,000; Great Britain, $325,000,000; Germany, $200,000,000; other countries, $725,000,000.

Chemists are advancing so rapidly in the perfection of explosives that we may soon be prepared to hear of the destruction of a fleet by a bomb or of an army by a grenade. The last frightful invention is a composition known as melinite, said to be ten times as powerful as nitro-glycerine or any other substance heretofore put together.

The once famous "Brick" Pomeroy is at the head of a company whose purpose is to build a tunnel through the Rocky Mountains for the railroads. Should the scheme be carried out each railroad will be expected to pay a certain amount for the use of the tunnel. At present the heavy snow storms and subsequent snow slides interfere with and interrupt travel east and west.

According to the Postal Guide, there were in the United States on a recent date 54,166 post-offices. Of these 2,290 are "Presidential," that is, are filled by direct appointment by the Executive. They are divided into three grades by salaries. Of the seventy-five offices of the first class New York State contains ten. This State also leads in the second and third grades, having a total of 216 Presidential offices. Illinois follows with 178. In fourth grade offices Pennsylvania leads with 3,879. Illinois has the largest number of money-order offices, 611.

The regular army of Great Britain, as at present constituted, comprises 209,280 men; the cost of the military establishment, including extraordinary expenses, is $102,477,010. France, which outnumbers Central European military establishments, has a roster of 523,283 men and a military expenditure budget of $127,366,086. The United States, with an effective standing army about large enough to police a big city, has, or will have, if certain pending pension bills, as passed and approved by the President, an inefficient force of 865,783 individuals, whose pay will amount to $147,000,000. And the woods are full of anxious applicants, who are waiting to be recognized. In other countries war veterans die out; in the United States they increase and multiply.

Even the Holy Land is being deprived of all its picturesqueness. A big soap factory has been built where of old stood the town of Shechem; Bethlehem has been rebuilt and gas introduced, Nazareth has become the headquarters of a large company of olive oil speculators. Cesarea is being rebuilt in modern style, Mount Carmel has been bought up by land speculators, a glue factory is going up at Ramoth Gilead, while Jerusalem has been delivered over to all sorts of occidental improvements, including clocks on the public buildings, a street-cleaning bureau, the Parisian fashion journals, and even an occasional bicycle and telephone. The world is being too rapidly civilized into a cosmopolitanism which leaves no room for individualism or picturesqueness.

One of the most remarkable formations of common salt in this country, and indeed in the world, is that on the Island of Petite Anse, 125 miles West of New Orleans. It was discovered in 1862 while sinking a well, and was immediately seized by Jefferson Davis as a Confederate supply. The salt is underground at a depth ranging from ten to twenty-three feet. One hundred and fifty acres have, up to the present time, been traced, and a depth of 140 feet been reached. The salt is taken out in massive crystalline blocks, and is of the clearest white appearance. It is nearly chemically pure, contains 99.88 per cent. pure salt, the remaining fraction of a per cent. being gypsum and chloride of lime. The mines are owned by the Avery family, and are worked by a New York firm, which pays $3,000 per month as a royalty for the privilege.

A bill intended to prevent swindling by writing a promissory note above a signature which has been obtained for some other purpose, will be pushed in several Legislatures this Winter. If it passes, it will give farmers relief from the horde of swindlers who are traveling about the country selling Bohemian oats, patent rights, etc. These chaps require the farmers to sign an agreement, contract or receipt of some kind which turns up in the course of a few weeks at the neighboring bank in the form of a promissory note. This is done by having the contract so worded that a portion of it may be cut off so as to leave an iron-clad note; or, the blank above the farmer's name may be filled in with lead pencil, and after he has signed it this is rubbed out and the regular form of note is inserted. A bill to prevent swindles of this nature should be enacted in every State and Territory. But more effective still will it be if every person will refuse to sign his or her name for every stranger.

Natural gas wells are being utilized in the West. An editorial in the Age of Steel gives some valuable points gathered from Prof. John F. Carroll of the Pennsylvania Geological Survey. He has just returned from a tour of visitation to all the points in Illinois where there have been any indications of natural gas in any considerable quantities. *It was learned through him that a con*siderable number of the houses in Cerro Gordo, a town twelve miles from Decatur, are being lighted and heated with natural gas, which is obtained from a depth of not over seventy feet. All over the central part of Illinois sufficient quantities of gas for household purposes may be obtained by drilling to a depth of from 50 to 125 feet. In this connection it was noticed that a gentleman in Guthrie county, Iowa, while boring for water at a depth of 140 feet struck a strong flow of gas, which has continued to flow out of the two-inch pipe so strong that a man cannot stop it by pressing on the end with all his strength.

JOINT MEETING.

A joint meeting of both branches of the Legislature was held at Trenton at twelve o'clock Wednesday noon last. The meeting was held in the Senate chamber. The Republicans nominated Senator Fish for chairman of the meeting and the Democrats named Assem*blyman Hudspeth. Fish* was elected by a vote of forty-four to thirty-six. Sewell was nominated by ex Speaker Armstrong, Beckwith nominated Abbett, McBride nominated Kays, Throckmorton nominated Bedle, Chase nominated Ludlow and Donohue nominated Potter. After a long wrangle over allowing Messrs. Turley and Walters to vote, the roll was called. Although only six names were placed in nomination, ten were voted for. Carroll and Donohue, the Labor members, voted for Erastus E. Potter, the Morris county schoolmaster; Senator Cattle and Assemblyman Throckmorton, both Democrats, voted for ex-Governor Bedle; Senator McBride and Assemblyman Kinney, also Democrats, voted for Thomas Kays of Sussex; Senator Chase, Democrat, voted for ex Governor Ludlow; Speaker Baird voted for William H. Morrow, a Belvidere lawyer and Prohibition politician; Assemblyman Hawkins, Republican, voted for William E. Potter, a country lawyer, and Assemblyman Young, Republican, voted for Fred. A. Potts, the New Jersey coal baron, who has an office on Broadway, New York. Following are the votes for Abbett and Sewell:

Abbett—Messrs. Arnwine, Baker, Barrett, Beckwith, Bloomer, Bogert, Crane, Edwards, Feeney, Harrigan, Heppenheimer, Hildreth, Hudspeth, Kays, Lennon, Livingston, Matthews, McDermott, McLaughlin, Moog, Mulvey, Mutchler, Newell, Noonan, Pace, Peal, Pearson, Pitney, Scott, Scudder, Tumulty, Turley, Walter, Werts and Wolverton—35.

Sewell—Ackerman, Armstrong, Carter, Chamberlain, Condit, Cranmer, Dickenson, Doron, Fish, Gardner, Goble, Griggs, Haines, Herring, Hill, B. C. Hutchinson, S. B. Hutchinson, Large, Law, Lawrence, Letts, Lufburrow, Lyon, Mariott, Miller, Norwood, Oviatt, Pancoast, Peck, Roe, Rue, TenBroeck, Thompson, Underhill and Vandenburgh—35.

The joint meeting then adjourned to meet again on Thursday.

A Registered Letter Thief Caught.

For two months past the Post-office Department at Washington has been receiving complaints of the loss of registered letters passing through the mails on the railways of Northern New Jersey. Letters that contained money passing through Deckertown rarely reached their destination. The railway detectives were puzzled, for every man on the route was well-known and seemingly above suspicion. Several weeks ago Special Agent Warren P. Edgarton, of the department, was detailed to work up the case. On Tuesday he brought before United States Commissioner Muirheid, in Jersey City, Raymond B. Noonan, a railway postal clerk, and charged him with embezzling and destroying a registered letter mailed at Libertyville, N. J., by Martin R. Drake, addressed to John Howell, of Newton, N. J., containing twenty-five dollars. Special Agent Edgarton also charged the prisoner with taking and destroying a number of registered letters and packages between December 28, 1886, and January 24, 1887. It is alleged that the prisoner hardly ever permitted a registered letter containing money to pass through his hands intact. Commissioner Muirheid committed Noonan for further examination. —Iron Era.

Bills Introduced in the Senate.

Legislation has been a secondary consideration the past few days. On Wednesday the Senate passed a single bill—authorizing railroad companies to mortgage their property for certain debts contracted. Bills were introduced as follows:

Mr. Chase—Allowing Finance Boards of cities to adjust past due taxes.

Mr. Cattle—An act to prevent discrimination by telephone companies, especially where telegraph companies use the instrument.

Mr. Cranmer—Making slight changes in section 4 of the act of April 5, 1878, for the preservation of fish.

Mr. Pancoast—Provides that 8 per cent. interest may be charged upon bills, bonds, &c., in case of special contract to that effect; but on book accounts, &c., where there is no special contract, the rate shall be 5 per cent.

Mr. Fish—An act to provide for the making and collecting of benefit assessments for the construction of sewers in the cities of this State in certain cases. It provides that the benefit assessment shall not exceed the special benefit which each property has received or will receive when the lateral sewers are laid.

Mr. Fish—Provides for the division of any ward in town or township where it contains over three hundred voters.

Mr. Fish—Requires that every person practicing veterinary medicine shall be a graduate of some legally chartered veterinary college, and before practising shall deposit a copy of his diploma with the County Clerk. The penalty for violating the act is $25 fine or six months imprisonment. Exemption is granted to persons with ten years' experience of the veterinary practice and who have practiced that length of time in the same locality.

What Strikes Cost.

Bradstreet contains detailed estimates of the cost of the labor disturbances in this country since January 1, 1887, based upon statistics gathered by that journal. The following table is given to show the amount of wages lost on account of strikes from January 1 to February 10 of the present year:

Port New York, longshoremen, boatmen, etc.	$900,000
Boot and shoe factory employes	900,000
Coal handlers, New Jersey shipping ports	400,000
N. Y. and N. J. railway freight handlers	140,000
Tobacco and cigar factory operatives	65,000
Textile (carpet and cordage) employes	50,000
Iron and steel mill employes	12,000
Glass factory employes	8,000
Miscellaneous	150,000
Total wages sacrificed by striking employes	$2,600,000
The estimated total loss of wages by about 28,000 industrial employes thrown out of work through scarcity of coal or on account of strikes by others, within forty days past is	300,000
Grand total wages sacrificed since January 1, 1887	$2,900,000

The total decrease in the value of domestic trade of the port of New York, due to strikes, as indicated by New York bank clearings, is estimated by Bradstreet's at $25,000,000. The following interesting table shows the aggregate estimated losses in various ways from strikes since January 1, 1887:

Total of wages sacrificed by striking employes	$2,600,000
Total of wages sacrificed through enforced stoppages of work	300,000
Total extra amount paid for coal through strikes	700,000
Total losses incurred by steamship companies through delays	100,000
Total losses to coal shippers, various causes	100,000
Total estimated losses export trade New York, two weeks	$3,250,000

The total number of striking employes since February 1, is given at 15,000, and at 93,000 since January 1. These, with 38,300 men thrown out of work from other causes within six weeks, account for 131,000 stopping work during 1887. These men have lost $3,000,000 in wages, have reduced the total value of foreign trade $3,250,000 at least within two weeks, and at New York alone have entailed $900,000 extra expense on employers and the public.

LITERARY NOTE.

Among the features of the Golden Argosy, during February are new serials called "Little Nan," by Mrs. Mary A. Denison, and "Nature's Young Nobleman," by Brooks McCormick; sketches of Murat Halstead, M. P. Handy, Samuel Bowles, and Wm. M. Singerly, and a number of interesting stories and articles and fine illustrations, among which are handsome full-page pictures of "ice-boating" and "tobogganing."

Where it Goes.

State Treasurer Toffey has just issued his annual report, and for those who have a taste and care for figures, there is some nice reading. For instance, Judge Depue drew his salary every month in installments of $806 27 and Chancellor Runyon also draws his monthly, but he receives a warrant $833.33. Nearly all the justices draw their salaries monthly with the exception of Chief Justice Beasley, who allows his to accumulate for several months. Justice VanSyckle also has a fashion of drawing his salary in lumps as big as $1,750. Knight & Knight, stenographers, received $1,450 for work in the Chancery Court, and Walter J. Knight, received $1,380 on account of the same court.

Most of the members of the Legislature draw their salary the first or second month after they are sworn in, and many of them on the first day. The treasury was raided by the beneficiaries of the incidental bill on April 30th and May 4th and 5th. A long string of ministers received $10 apiece for praying for the spiritual guidance of the members. It cost the State $350 for prayers for the members last year.

Governor Abbett always drew his salary every three months, and drew $1,250 at a time. Most of the other State officers collected their salaries monthly. Secretary of State Kelsey got $500, usually at the end of the month; Comptroller Anderson drew $375; Treasurer Toffey, $333.33; Quartermaster General Perrine, $100; State Librarian Hamilton, $75; Attorney General Stockton draws $1,750 every three months, and one or two Railroad Commissioners let their salaries accumulate.

The State spent $12,445.11 for pensions, $11,333.33 for the Riparian Commission, $11,138.97 for the Agricultural Experimental Station, and the enormous sum of $10,892.94 in the impeachment trial of State Prison Keeper Laverty. In the expenses of the Riparian Commission, $125 was paid to Mrs. B. G. Ogilby for salary due her husband as a commissioner from March 1st to 31st. Her husband was discovered to be a defaulter to the extent of $80,000 as treasurer of the New Brunswick Savings Institution on March 10th, and is now in State Prison.

For stationery and postage the modest sum of $6,251 84 was expended, and $1,268.82 of this sum is credited to the purchase of postage stamps. With the amount of money 63,441 two-cent stamps could be purchased. The clerks in the State departments at Trenton are a hardworking set of men.

It cost the State $6,131.61 for its fisheries, $5,621.25 for the Industrial School; $3,692.55 for labor inspection; $3,450.93 for dairy protection; $3,415.28 for the maintenance of the Bureau of Statistics; $3,300 for the Gettysburg monuments; $4,184.22 for the Bureau of Vital Statistics; $3,164.29 for the erection of the Monmouth Battle Monument; $3,000 for the preservation of records; $2,827.49 for the Department of Agriculture, $2,500 for the maintenance of Washington's Headquarters at Morristown; $2,389.87 for the State Board of Health; $2,215.93 for the State Library; $2,242.07 for the suppression of pleuro-pneumonia; $2,218.05 for milk inspectors, and $1,064.50 for incidental expenses. The State's part in the obsequies of Gen. Grant cost $878.99

SEE what the new marriage license law in Pennsylvania has done. During the past year 3,893 marriages were recorded in Camden, N. J., an increase of 2,942 over 1885. The New Jersey clergymen in most places, all along the line of the Delaware, are reaping a big harvest.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER.
The great popularity of this preparation, after its test of many years, should be an assurance, even to the most skeptical, that it is really meritorious. Those who have used HALL'S HAIR RENEWER know that it does all that is claimed.
It causes new growth of hair on bald heads—provided the hair follicles are not dead, which is seldom the case; restores natural color to gray or faded hair; preserves the scalp healthful and clean; cures dandruff; prevents the hair falling off or changing color; keeps it soft, pliant, lustrous, and causes it to grow long and thick.
HALL'S HAIR RENEWER produces its effects by the healthful influence of its vegetable ingredients, which invigorate and rejuvenate. It is not a dye, and is a delightful article for toilet use. Containing no alcohol, it does not evaporate quickly and dry up the natural oil, leaving the hair harsh and brittle, as do other preparations.
Buckingham's Dye
FOR THE WHISKERS
Colors them brown or black, as desired, and is the best dye, because it is harmless; produces a permanent natural color; and, being a single preparation, is more convenient of application than any other.

OH, for a street railway!

OH, for a paid fire department!

BLUE BIRDS were heard twittering in this city on Wednesday morning last. No chestnut.

THERE was an unusual amount of mail matter handled at the post office on Valentine's Day.

YOUNG men of proper appearance and affability are wanted as clothing salesmen by McGregor & Co., of 850 Broad street, Newark.

STREET COMMISSIONER ANGLEMAN will find work for many a day to come in carting the mud off the macadamized streets we are so justly proud of.

THERE is one thing we don't believe our citizens will approve of, and that is a horse railway jangling its noisy bells and rattling its bob-tail cars through our streets.

WHAT the prohibitionists have fought for for a century and would not be able to accomplish in another hundred years to come, is brought about in this city by a fight among their enemies.

JUST as the ladies express a willingness to remove their tall hats in public places, dame fashion decrees that the hair shall be peaked to the top of the head. So 'twere better to let well enough alone.

NO licenses were granted to the hotels and saloons at the Council meeting on Wednesday night last. The indications are that such desired favors will be granted at the next regular meeting in March.

JUST upon the completion of Plainfield's system of continuous-connecting macadamized streets, the Council will not probably grant permission to a horse railway company to dig up the smooth surfaces and relay with rough blocks.

THE young ladies of the Presbyterian churches held their annual Mission Band tea in Crescent avenue church, Monday evening, at which were also present their pastors, the Rev's Richards and Ketcham. The jugs broken contained $76—a larger sum than has before been realized.

THE "Crescent Division" of uniformed Knights of Pythias of this city are holding semi-weekly drills in The Crescent preparatory to their first public appearance, Friday evening of next week, at Scotch Plains. In a few weeks the Division proposes to give a grand reception ball in The Crescent.

IT is pretty conclusive that the Bound Brook post office burglar, who was not caught last week, is a native of Dunellen, N. J., and known as "Winkie" Conover. He is the son of respectable parents, but has always been a wayward youth. It is pretty conclusive, too, that his body does not lie in the bottom of the Raritan river, filled with No. 12 shot, from Bro. Gaddis' breech-loader.

THE Trenton Emporium says: "Assembly bill No. 7, which provides that the counsel for the defense shall have the privilege of making the last address to the jury is one of the few excellent bills now before the Legislature. If a counsel's address can raise a last doubt in the minds of the jury, the prisoner ought to have the benefit of that doubt, and the jury when they retire should have before them the whole defense, and the whole comment thereon. A prosecution that is not strong enough to allow a reply, is not strong enough to convict.

THE Park Avenue Social Club held another of its very pleasant evening dances at Cutter's Hall, Thursday evening of last week. The music was remarkably fine, and the ladies provided an enjoyable collation that was served at Schorb's dining-rooms. Mr. F. Haberle led the grand march with Miss Searing, followed by the Club's members with their lady friends, and many invited guests. The Committee of Arrangements consisted of Messrs. J. C. Blimm, J. C. Martin, E. C. Searing, G. R. Schlereth and W. B. Smith. Messrs. F. Haberle, J. Blimm, Jr., and L. C. Sutton were the Floor Managers.

THE school census of children between the ages of five and eighteen years in the State has been tabulated and an approximated estimate of the total number of inhabitants, based on the number of school children, has been made, which gives 1,300,000 people living in the State on January 1st, 1887. The State census of 1885 gives 1,278,033 inhabitants. This would show a gain of 21,967 in two years. This large increase consists mainly of immigrants from other States, who have built up new towns along the coast, and of laboring people from Europe, who have found employment in the big manufacturing towns and on the farms.

THE Supreme Court will hear the argument of the test case brought against the Fire Department, on Wednesday next. Evidence has been taken under rule of court obtained by plaintiff's counsel, and on Friday the Fire Department propose to offer evidence in rebuttal. With Attorney General Stockton, his able associate, Wm. Johnson, Esq., and Geo. P. Suydam, the local counsel to the Fire Board, all engaged for the Fire Department, it need not be feared that the defendant's case will not be ably handled. The interests of the plaintiff and those associated with her are equally safe in the hands of her counsel, Craig A. Marsh, Esq., of this city.

SATURDAY morning last, Hackman Keeley accidentally drove into Rev. David F. Robertson of Emily street, near Duer, North Plainfield, as the latter was crossing Somerset street. Mr. Robertson, who is quite aged and almost blind, was knocked down, his head cut and collarbone broken, and will be confined to his house for some time. The hackman, who claims that the victim stepped unexpectedly in front of the horse, has since offered twenty-five dollars in settlement of the case, but the injured party who is in indigent circumstances, demands, besides, the payment of all cost of physician's services that may arise in consequence.

THE new advertisement of Messrs. Geo. Watson & Co., the celebrated Newark clothiers appears in our columns. This old established firm have never been led away by any new advertising schemes, (which they fully explain in their advertisement) but have always confined themselves strictly to the making of perfect fitting clothing, cut in the latest correct shape, and sold at one uniform low price, to all, marked in plain figures on each garment, and advertised in the leading newspapers. They claim to be able to fit out a man, boy or child, with garments cut by special patterns in the latest fashion plate shape, that cannot be told when worn from custom made goods. To those of our readers who go out of town for their clothing we cheerfully recommend this firm.

THE backbone of Winter is broken, but it will very likely be mended again before Spring.

NEXT Wednesday is "Ash Wednesday" and Lent begins. Easter Sunday is dated April 10th, this year.

REV. E. P. KETCHAM, of this city will conduct the meeting for the study of the Bible lesson, at the Trinity Reformed church to-night.

AT John W. Morris' extensive sales stables in New Brunswick, is offered the largest and finest assortment of horses for all work and uses in the State.

REV. DR. LANSING, of the Theological Seminary, of New Brunswick, N. J., will occupy the pulpit of Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning and evening.

THINGS are not exactly right. A careful political economist closely calculates that women in this country might annually save $3,000,000 in ribbons which the men might spend in cigars.

THERE will be a business meeting of the "Y" Monday, February 21st, 1887 at 4 p. m., in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. It is hoped all the members will be present and all young ladies are cordially invited.

THE sidewalk on Park avenue just East of the railroad bridge where the wagons drive over it to and from the freight house, is usually covered with an inch or two of mud, and is a disgrace to our city.

THE Dover Iron Era contained eighteen and a half columns of excellent local reading matter in its last issue. Barring its politics, which are as Republican as Republican can be, the Era is an excellent and newsy paper.

A COUNTRYMAN recently got his name in the Trenton papers, simply because he pulled the wrong strap in a horse car. He was ringing for the car to stop as he thought, but instead of that he was piling registered fares on the conductor.

THE public interested will be glad to know that the majority of the Board of Directors of the Hillside Cemetery Association are in favor of forbidding the erection of any fences or railings to divide off the separate plots within the burying ground.

POSSIBLY advertisements of future local entertainments will close with the announcement that "choice reserved seats for the coming concert may be secured at Muldowney's pharmacy." This might prove quite a convenience for the residents of the Boulevard.

THE discourses of Rev. R. S. Holmes, at the Trinity Reformed church, last Sunday morning and evening, were masterly efforts, and were greatly enjoyed by the members and congregation present. The wish was freely expressed that he would soon again favor them.

TWO medical journals are fighting over chewing gum. One thinks it preserves the teeth, develops the gums, and should be encouraged; the other points out the injurious draught upon the salivary glands and digestive organs, and its crushing effect upon female loveliness.

WE understand that a number of our citizens in possession of interesting, curious and valuable relics of the late (its getting very late) war, would contribute them to the Art Gallery if its Board of Directors would set apart and fit up a room for their proper exhibition.

THE Mayor and Council of the North Plainfield Borough held an adjourned meeting, Friday evening of last week, to finish up the business of the past year. Reports were received from the Collector and the Street and the Finance Committees showing a careful and judicious use of the public funds.

PROGRESSIVE dinner parties are quite the fashion, nowadays, and a source of much comfort to us of the sterner sex. We move up at each course, and find it so much easier to tell the same story and retail the same morsel of gossip to a half dozen ladies, than to be compelled to tell six different tales to one.

DURING the sickness of the Chairman of one of the Borough Council's Committees, last Friday evening, some of his associates were so discourteous as to seize this advantage of his absence, and take action in a matter that mere civility would demand should be left to the judgment of the committee whose proper and only business it was.

IT may not be generally known that the government may revoke a pension because of misconduct on the part of the receiver, but it is a fact. Julia Annin, a colored woman of Somerville, whose husband died in the war, has been receiving a pension for some years, but now it has been stopped upon the ground of "conduct unbecoming a ward of the Government."

OUR esteemed friend Geo. Gaddis, proprietor of Hotel Gaddis, at Bound Brook, was the hero of that village all last week. His futile efforts to capture a post office robber was the cause of it. It is said that since he failed to bring down the fleeing robber with his charge of No. 12 shot, he will not enter as a contestant in the big sweepstakes at the tournament next week.

THE next lecture in Prof. Holmes' course on English History, will be delivered in Y. M. C. A. Hall, Thursday, Feb. 24th at 8 p. m. Subject—"William the Conqueror and his Times." Ladies are cordially invited to attend. Admission free. These lectures have been a delight to all who have heard them, and this one promises to be especially instructive and entertaining.

A NEW firm of young merchants has been formed consisting of Messrs. A. M. Vanderbeek and H. L. McIntosh, who have succeeded to the sporting goods business of A. Vanderbeek, at the old stand, No. 33 Park avenue. The new firm are having their store thoroughly overhauled, refitted and decorated, and will add to their already large assortment a full stock of everything desirable in their line.

MUSIC HALL was filled, downstairs, Tuesday evening, by a more or less pleased audience. Those curious to see the great General Wallace were satisfied, but those who expected to find another quality to be admired in his elocutionary ability, were disappointed. A lecture upon some of the places he has visited, or scenes and adventures he has personally experienced, would have better entertained.

POSITIVELY the last performance of "Mikado" by the original company, will be offered us as a holiday matinee, next Tuesday afternoon, in Music Hall. We are promised the same company under the management of Mr. John Templeton as before proved so acceptable to us, and with an orchestra also as satisfactory, the rendition of "Giroflé-Girofla" in the evening must prove a distinct treat. Seats are now on sale.

MRS. ELIZA NAYLOR, the aged mother-in-law of Councilman David B. Weaver of North Plainfield, fell at her daughter's residence on Manning avenue, Monday evening, and broke her hip. In descending a stairway the unfortunate lady supposed she had reached the finish, but unexpectedly sinking another step resulted in the accident described. Dr. Fritts set the fractured bone, but the patient's 83 years will possibly prevent her entire recovery.

THERE is so much natural rivalry between the respective committees of the Bicycle Club, as to which table will be graced by the greatest quantity and quality of womanly beauty, we would suggest that the Bazaar's visitors be permitted to decide the question by their votes—at so much a vote. As we now look the field over from where we sit, it seems possible that the table in the billiard room upstairs, presided over by the Misses Waring, Fairbairn, Murray, Drake, Doper and Ericksen, would "get there" by a large majority.

WE publish in our Council proceedings in this issue the latest of the petitions for permission to construct a street railway in Plainfield. From those to hand the Council should have no trouble selecting that for the best interests of the city.

THE premises at No. 26 Park avenue are being refitted and furnished in a most comfortable and convenient manner for the patrons of Prof. Edwin Maynard, who will remove his tonsorial studio from North avenue to the new parlors as soon as completed.

THE Council should at least grant the applications presented for permission to keep an inn and tavern. As it now is, the hotel keepers are placed in a false position—compelled to keep their houses open for the sake of their guest, yet doing so without the legal consent of our city fathers.

EVERYBODY most has been invited to go to the Dickens, to-night. Mrs. George H. Goddard, of Third place and Ninth street, will, consequently, entertain a large number of Plainfielders who will imitate in dress and character a long list of the immortal novelist's creations from "Quilp" to "Dora."

Counterfeit Silver Dollars.

Counterfeit silver dollars are said to be in circulation and are so cleverly executed as to be calculated to deceive almost any one. They are said to be exactly the same weight as the genuine coin, and have the true ring. On the counterfeit there is a peculiar curve in the letter "d" in the motto, "In God we trust," the "d" sloping backwards like an Italic letter.

A Grave Question.

Some of the newspapers of the State are taking strong positions against the infliction of the direst penalty of the law upon Janitor Titus. While public opinion in Warren county is strongly against him, there is outside, among unprejudiced people, a feeling that the case was not conclusively proven, and that he should not be hung while there remains a possibility that the crime might have been done by some one else. For ourselves, we never believed in convicting a man of an alleged crime on circumstantial evidence.

Judges Magie and Parker Re-Appointed.

Governor Green sent to the Senate Tuesday afternoon the nomination of William J. Magie and Joel Parker as Justices of the Supreme Court. The Senate in executive session paid them the compliment of an immediate confirmation. Justice Magie was originally appointed a Supreme Court Justice by Governor McClellan in 1880. His circuit consists of Morris, Sussex and Somerset counties. Justice Parker was also appointed by Governor McClellan in 1880. His circuit consists of the counties of Burlington, Camden and Gloucester. The term of office is seven years, the fixed salary $7,000 per year and the fees, sufficient to bring the total pay up to $10,000 a year.

Presented to a Sister Church.

In severing the ties that bound the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond to the Dutch Reformed Church, the Classis of Newark adopted the following resolutions:

"In severing the official relations of the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond with this body and with the Church of his fathers, the Classis of Newark desires herein to express its regret for the loss of his presence and services in the church to which he has successfully ministered as pastor during the past six years, and in the denominational work committed to its care.

"Testifying to his abundant and efficient labors, and giving him to a sister church, holding a common faith, as a 'workman that needeth not be ashamed,' we commend him to the loving kindness of Him whose blessings are promised to the good minister of Jesus Christ."

The Bi's Bazaar.

The public will undoubtedly largely and liberally respond to the cordial invitation of our Bicycle Club to visit its home again, Monday and Tuesday of next week. The community is proud of this representative organization of young gentlemen, and as they, assisted by their young ladies, will spread before their visitors an array of elegant articles such as has never before been exhibited at a Plainfield Bazaar, the public will undoubtedly seize the opportunity to contribute much towards assisting the Bi's in cancelling the Club House debt. One special feature will be the restaurant under the management of the Club's married members assisted by their wives who are all noted as most gifted caterers and bountiful providers.

Of interest to Freeholders.

The Boards of Freeholders in the various counties of the State will shortly be called upon to protest against the payment of forfeited recognizances into the State treasury instead of that into each county, as has been the practice for many years. A meeting is to be called of representatives from various Boards to consult as to the advisability of petitioning the Legislature to change the law by which forfeited recognizances, or bail bonds, are to be paid to the State Treasurer, and to direct the same to be paid to the collectors or treasurers of the counties in which such recognizances have been issued. By the present law the State receives a very small amount. Many of the counties have not paid anything for the last two years. Where the responsibility rests is not known, but it is deemed just that as the counties pay the expenses of criminal trials, forfeited recognizances should be paid into their treasuries.

Improving the Bell, Not the Chestnuts.

The inventor of the chestnut bell was before the Patent Office Wednesday endeavoring to patent an improvement on his previous atrocious invention. The improvement consists of an attachment which will probably give a new lease of life to the now obsolete chestnut bell. The new device consists of an elastic band connected with the bell but fastened to the other side of the waistcoat. When the bell is struck a miniature rat runs across the breast of the wearer and stops in full view of the victim. To make it more effective the word "rats," in white letters on a black background, is inscribed on the rat. The inventor wanted a patent that would cover not only the device but the word "rats" also, his idea being to prevent any infringement upon this expression. After due deliberation the examiner decided that so necessary a word as "rats" was not patentable, and declined to grant the monopoly to the enterprising inventor. The other features of the device were favorably acted upon.

Reform Club.

A large and very attentive audience listened to an eloquent and instructive discourse from Rev. J. Lyman Hurlbut, in Reform Hall, Sunday evening last. The learned gentleman took for his subject "character building," and in a masterly manner pointed out the defects of construction, and urged upon every individual the vital importance of planning wisely and using only the right kind of material in rearing and preserving the most essential work of life—good Christian character. The address was appreciated by all present, among whom were many young men. President French presided, and Freeholder Vanderbeek ably led a truly excellent choir. Notice was given by the President that Tuesday, February 22d, being Washington's Birthday anniversary, and also the anniversary of the origin of the Reform Club of Plainfield, a meeting would be held the evening of that day under the auspices of the Reform Club, the exercises to consist of short speeches, choice music, etc. A grand time is expected, and the people of Plainfield and vicinity are cordially invited to attend. The club is in a prosperous condition. All its meetings are occasions of great and increasing interest.

Supreme Court Decision.

The Supreme Court has rendered the following decision: "A Township Committee has no power to bind a township by an acceptance of an order drawn upon the Committee by a road overseer in favor of a third person, directing the payment of money to be appropriated in the future to a road district. An attempted assignment of such moneys is void upon grounds of public policy. No action will lie against the inhabitants of a township for the recovery of moneys for work done upon roads in advance of an appropriation, although the appropriation be afterwards made."

Free Post Office Delivery.

Post Office Inspector Warren P. Edgarton, of Philadelphia, visited Plainfield on Tuesday last, and called upon Postmaster Force, receiving from him all necessary information required respecting the proposed new benefit for Plainfield—the free delivery of letters from the Post Office to all parts of our city and North Plainfield. To the Postmaster Mr. Edgarton expressed himself that the proposed service would be applicable to Plainfield when the houses and stores were properly numbered and the streets designated by signs. It will be some months yet, however, before the service will be commenced, but without a doubt it will eventually be given to our fair city, which will make one more accommodation our citizens desired and needed. The territory to be covered is large, and will require a force of at least five carriers, with forty letter boxes located in convenient and proper localities. Full information regarding the proposed new service will be given from time to time in the columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

Egg Swindlers.

The most despicable and meanest swindle is that practiced by some men and women in disposing of eggs to the merchants of the city which they declare have been laid by their own hens and are fresh, but when examined are found to be rotten and worthless. One merchant alleges that within the past few days a demure looking woman clad in respectable apparel with a new white nubia over her head has been doing a profitable business in Elizabeth among the dealers. On Saturday she entered a butter store with a basket which she tenderly laid on the counter as she inquired if she could sell the proprietor some very nice fresh eggs.

When asked repeatedly if the eggs were surely fresh, she seemed to be offended and said, "If I had a hundred dozen I could dispose of them to my neighbors."

Two dozen and four eggs, arranged carefully between clean, white towels, were then counted out, the woman paid and she left. A few moments later the eggs were examined. Twelve of those on the top layer were found good, sixteen of the bottom layer were worthless—several of them bursting before they could be carried from the store.

A short time ago a boy in a dilapidated looking wagon, stained with mud and covered with sprigs of hay to give it a rural appearance, called at several of the stores and victimized the dealers with rotten eggs.

Hardly a day passes but that the dealers are not approached by would be swindlers who have eggs to sell.

Fresh eggs, the dealers claim, are always desirable and saleable. Within the past week eggs have taken a big drop in price, and there is no doubt but that the criminal annoyance will cease, as the price will not encourage house wives to store up their hen's productions. The police have been informed of the egg swindlers and will keep a sharp lookout for them.

Personals.

Mr. E. P. Thorn is still confined to his house in consequence of illness.

Mr. Seymour G. Smith has been suffering from illness the past few days at his residence on Central avenue but was able to be out yesterday.

Mr. George Miller, of Laing's Hotel, returned from the Montreal Carnival Monday evening of this week. He met several Plainfielders while in Canada.

Mr. Harry Lindsley has been unable for a short time to preside at the Crescent avenue organ, but has now so far recovered that he is expected to occupy the position again next Sunday.

Miss Jean Erickson's Cotillion of Wednesday evening, was a brilliant success. There was a large number of young society people present, and figures and favors were particularly pretty.

Mr. Thomas Bright has been appointed postmaster at Woodport, Morris Co. N. J., which lies at the head of Lake Hopatcong. We know Mr. Bright will suit the people of his section in his official position.

Attorney David F. Manning, son-in-law of Mr. Robert Manning of this city, sailed for London Saturday in the interest of the heirs of Sir Alexander Ball who has left an estate worth over $1,000,000 and the usual number of claimants.

Mr. C. H. Hillman, of the Crescent avenue church, has been elected Superintendent of the Warren Mission of North Plainfield, to succeed Mr. F. H. Gardner who, after many years of faithful service, could not be persuaded to consent to another re-election.

Mr. John L. DeCamp, son of Hiram H. DeCamp of Chester, N. J., and nephew of John W. Laing, Esq., of this city, is visiting his parents and friends, after an absence of over two years. His place of residence is St. Paul, Minn., where he is engaged in a lucrative business and has many friends.

Mr. A. L. Mundy, a former merchant and resident of Plainfield, and now doing an extensive dry goods business in Somerville, N. J., dropped in upon us one day last week, and made the whole sanctum cheerful by his reminiscences of old times. Alpheus, you are always welcome, as all good braves are.

The New York Tribune describes our handsome Fire Commissioner, William H. Brower, as a large and heavy man who would show well in a picture as one of the early settlers of Manhattan, and states that he has made a fortune in flowers at his well known store at Fifth avenue and Broadway.

At her residence on West Second street Wednesday evening last, Mrs. Hannah Staats tendered a wedding reception to her son and bride. The occasion was attended by a large circle of friends, and over 100 sat down to the generous supper that was spread before them. The affair was most auspicious, and the hearty congratulations of all were tendered the happy couple.

One of the most popular conductors of the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co., for the past twenty-four years, is Mr. Charles W. Hewlett, who has resigned his position to engage in the hotel business on the corner of Eighth and Greene streets, Philadelphia. As this location is directly opposite the railroad station, his place of business will be handy to the traveling public, to whom he is cordially recommended.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Reformed church met at the residence of Mrs. Dr. Titsworth on East Front street, Tuesday afternoon, and presented their late President, Mrs. A. V. V. Raymond, with a solid silver token of their esteem in the shape of twelve coffee spoons with gold bowls, twelve oyster forks and a dozen table forks. The presentation was made by acting president, Mrs. L. E. Hall, with a most pleasant address to which Mrs. Raymond feelingly responded.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

The Council met in adjourned meeting, Wednesday evening. Present—President Marsh and Messrs. Bowers, Carey, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Voorhees, Wilbur. Absent—Messrs. Cuthbert, Simpson, Taylor. The following was presented and referred to the Committee on Streets:

NEW YORK, February 9th, 1887.

To The Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—We would respectfully petition your Honorable Body for permission to construct, equip and maintain a street railway in the City of Plainfield, the motive power of which shall be electricity, and the route to be through such streets as you may think will best serve the convenience of your community, and, at the same time, best meet the wishes of the greater number of your property owners. We will agree to all reasonable restrictions and proper demands you may make in the interest of the people you serve. Such provisions as your Committee on Laws might include in any ordinance to be enacted relative to the rate of fare, the character of the road bed and surface within and without the rails, the time of completion, etc., would be met by us in the most liberal manner consistent with justice to ourselves. That we can honestly promise the public better service, greater comforts and more advantages under our system and with its equipment, is assured by the fact that more miles of street railway of our system than any other of its kind, are now in operation.

While possessing ample means for the construction, equipment and maintenance of the road, we propose, upon its completion, to throw open the books to everybody for subscriptions to its stock. In this way, if so desired, the citizens of you city may be the owners of the road.

Trusting that we may be, at least, granted an early opportunity of meeting with your Committee on Streets, and placing before it our plans and intentions, we remain.

Very Respectfully Yours,
W. H. GILLETT, Manager,
The New Jersey Rapid Transit Company.

Also read and referred a petition for a cross-walk on Park avenue between Second street and North avenue, and for electric lights at Richmond and Fifth and Third streets. The N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co's offer to continue its service at the same rate as in the past, was referred. His Honor the Mayor suggested to the Council in a communication the need of collecting the fees due from those who connect with the North avenue sewer, and the tax delinquents. Messrs. Wilbur and Bowers presented a majority report on the position of the Rev. A.V.V. Raymond and others, to the effect that the time had not come, and the people by their suffrages had not shown a desire, to carry out the policy suggested. Mr. Dunham presented a minority report in favor of the petition. Both received and ordered filed. Mr. Voorhees moved that the application of Mr. P. Day for a liquor license be taken from the table, which was not seconded. Mr. Voorhees then moved to take from the table the application of Mr. J. B. Miller, which was seconded by Mr. Cox, but was not carried. An ordinance in relation to certain sidewalks on Park avenue, was taken from the table and referred to the Committee on Streets. Mr. Voorhees moved to take from the table the liquor license application of Mr. Blimm, but the motion was not seconded. On motion the City Treasurer was requested to collect the fees due for connection with the North avenue sewer. The Council then adjourned.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Bishop Scarborough pays his annual visit to the parish of Grace Church on Sunday morning, Feb. 27th, next.

Mary O'Connor, daughter of Daniel O'Connor, died after a lingering illness of consumption, on Tuesday morning last; interment at Plainfield to-day.

The Rev. Mr. Patton, of Washington, D. C., was installed on Wednesday evening as pastor of the Congregational church, in place of the Rev. H. Neill resigned.

Our Township Committee have published the present week, the 93d annual report of the Township. It shows the township in good shape, financially, all bills having been paid that were presented, and only the average amount of unpaid taxes for the year 1886. The amount voted last spring was not enough to run our street lights for only about nine months of the year, the balance was made up by subscription by a few of our residents.

Hattie, youngest daughter of Postmaster Clark, died on Monday morning last, from a spinal affection which she contracted about a year ago, in coasting down hill on a sled. Her funeral occurred on Tuesday from the residence of her parents, interment in the family plot, Fairview cemetery. We noticed among the many friends and relatives that were present, Surrogate Gerber, of Elizabeth. Hattie was the pet of the household, and Mr. Clark and family have the sympathy of our whole community.

The Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, owe an apology to the public who filled Arcanum Hall on Thursday evening Feb. 10th, for the performance that they had liberally patronized in buying tickets and attended. The show was a miserable failure with but two exceptions, none of them were good amateur performers. They would not do for an outside patent medicine show; we have had several in Westfield advertising and giving their show free, which would far exceed the Fitzgerald and Rigbys Great Comedy Success, "Who owns the trunk" from Paterson, New Jersey.

Fanwood Township Meeting.

Township Committee of Fanwood met at Excelsior Hall, on Saturday 12th inst. at 2:30 p. m., all the members were present. The treasurer reported balance on hand, $764.44. Henry Cook, special constable, submitted report of collection of delinquent taxes of 1885 as follows: Uncollected taxes, as per report of 1885—'86 $703.24; amount collected by Wm. Hetfield after date of report, $59.40; remitted by Township committee as uncollectable, $34.46; property redeemed by payment to treasurer, $66.93; held by Township for unpaid taxes, $2.76; collected by D. H. Terry collector, $70.06; collected by Henry Cook, special constable, $352.14; uncollected taxes, $116.49. Total $702.24. The committee by resolution instructed Township Counsel to collect from North Plainfield the school money due school district No. 14 in Fanwood township for 1885, $11.99, for 1886, $25.24, total $37.53. The following bills were presented and ordered paid: Levi Darby, Overseer of Poor, $30; John Lambert, boarding P. Laddy one year, $130; Vincent W. Nash, Justice of the Peace, issuing tax warrants, $9.70; Daniel H. Terry, collector, $161.63; F. W. Westcott, M. D., physician Board of Health, $16; Chas. A. Smith, coal and wood by order of Overseer of Poor, $8.50; L. W. Miller, services as Township committee, treasurer, etc., $40.98; Wm. H. Terry, services as Township committee and Board of Health, $40; Norman Dunn, services as town clerk and extra services, $39.20; George Kyte, services as Township committee and Board of Health, $45.50; Chas. H. French, (assessor) services Board of Health, $4. Adjourned subject to call of chairman.

THE Senate has passed the bill appropriating $[illegible] to reimburse ex-postmaster Dawson, of Boonton, for government money stolen from his safe in 1882.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

It will be legal to catch trout with hook and line in New Jersey, on and after March 1st, 1887.

Ten smart, active boys are wanted to act as trappers during the Middlesex Gun Club Tournament, next week. See adv., in another column.

The law not only forbids the catching of black bass, but prohibits the sale of them in the markets of this State between Dec. 1st and May 30th.

We learn with pleasure that Miss Annie Oakley, who gave such a satisfactory and pleasing exhibition of her skill with fire arms on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen, some weeks since, intends to enter as a contestant in the clay pigeon sweepstakes at the tournament of the above mentioned gun club on the 23d. Miss Oakley is a member of the Wild West combination now performing at Madison Square Garden, New York city.

The second of a series of pigeon shooting matches between Mr. James Pilkington, of New York and Mr. Harry Campbell, of this city, came off at Campbell's Club House last Friday. "Harry" again came off victorious by a score of 17 to 13 out of twenty birds shot at. The third match comes off at Oak Point, N. Y., next Saturday. Mr. Pilkington is a good shot, and entertains his friends right royally who visit him at Oak Point, where he has fine grounds. He has many friends in this vicinity.

There are a lot of bills relating to and amending the game and fish laws of this State now before the Legislature. Every year some one who thinks he voices the sentiments of the whole sporting fraternity, has a bill drafted and presented to our legislative solons, altering or amending the game and fish laws, and works assiduously to have said bill passed. We trust that our representatives in the Legislature will give their attention to a matter like this, which will affect a portion of their constituents. If they, themselves, don't own a breech-loader or a fine fishing rod, and don't know how to use them, they should remember that a large number of other people do, and that it is desired to have proper laws to be properly upheld.

Should the weather prove propitious next week, there will undoubtedly be a large attendance of sportsmen and visitors on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen, N. J., on the occasion of the 1st Annual Tournament of that popular and growing Club. All arrangements have been satisfactorily arranged, and the entries for the grand sweepstake pigeon match on the 22d, include nearly all of the crack pigeon shots of this country. We last week mentioned the names of several of them. It is now positive that there will be at least twenty five entries in this match, which requires an entrance fee of $100 for each contestant. The first money will represent about $1,000 to the best shooter. The conditions, etc., will be found in our advertising columns. In the clay pigeon sweepstakes on the 23d there are a large number of entries. A large and commodious grand stand has been erected on the grounds capable of accomodating at least 500 persons. Beneath it will be a restaurant, under the management of Mr. Chas Smith, of this city, whose catering cannot fail to please the most fastidious. No arrangements for the convenience of visitors or spectators has been left undone by the committee appointed by the Board of Directors. There is no doubt but that out of this tournament, where so many of the best pigeon shooters and "crockery breakers" of the county will assemble, there will be matches made that will represent money and good shooters. When such men as Budd, Stice, Stark, Perry, Organ, Kleinz, Brewer, People, Harrison, Hayes, Graham, the English champion, and others enter as contestants in the $100 sweepstake match it is sufficient guarantee that "business" is the order of the day with them.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

The "Rogers Colony" has grown smaller and beautifully less, much to the satisfaction of the citizens.

Burke, who was committed for participating in the post office burglary here, was released upon a bail bond of $200, and it seems extraordinary that any Judge could accept such a nominal amount, considering the gravity of the offence. If he had put the facts before him he certainly should not have acted without first obtaining them. The Bound Brook robbery has created fresh interest in the affair, from the fact that Conover was considered a party to the affair here, and it is an open secret that warrants for his arrest upon more than one charge are in existence. The charge against Burke and Runyon seems conclusive, notwithstanding an effort is to be made to prove an alibi, but they have already sworn to testimony as to their whereabouts which will conclusively be proved upon trial to be false. Complaints of the position and statements made by employees at the tanks have been submitted to railway officials and also as to the habit and custom of harboring and countenancing loafers, tramps and criminals at that point, which I am told upon good authority will be abandoned. There is no doubt that members of this infernal gang have been encouraged in their nefarious operations and it is time to call a halt. The guilty parties must not escape. BROAD BRIM.

A CAREFUL computation in the last number of Bradstreet's journal shows that the late strikes directly lost to workingmen in wages alone $3,650,000, indirectly $350,000 to the workers, while capital suffered to the extent of $4,000,000, making about $7,000,000, all told. Consider the figures and you will find that Labor pays too dear for its strike whistle.

WAS IT MURDER?

Was it murder?

A group of officers stood in an Atlanta book store one sultry afternoon, in 'sixty-four, discussing the execution of a batch of deserters. It was just before the seige. Sherman was on the other side of the Chattahooche, and as the officers talked the sullen boom of cannon every now and then interrupted their conversation.

But was it murder?

This question was uppermost in my mind as I listened horror-stricken to the running talk around me. It had been remarked that one of the deserters who had been shot an hour before was a youth of sixteen.

"I felt sorry for the boy," said the Captain.

"Oh, it's all right," observed the Major.

"Discipline must be maintained at any cost," put in the General.

"Yes, of course," assented the Captain.

"Beyond a doubt," was the Major's comment.

"Besides," said the General, "he was no longer a boy. He was a soldier, and when he deserted he knew the consequences."

"Just so," echoed the others simultaneously, but their faces wore a cloudy look.

The General picked up Jomini's "Art of War," and spoke of it as a greatly overrated book.

"What is the price of it?" he inquired.

"Fifteen dollars," replied the bookseller.

"You see, gentlemen," said the General, "how these cormorants take advantage of our misfortunes. Fifteen dollars for a book worth fifty cents!"

The military men all glared at the bookseller, who wisely said nothing.

"Yes," said the Captain, apparently resuming his talk, "I never was so affected in my life as I was when I saw that little fellow shot."

"Did he flinch?" asked the Major.

"Not a bit. He was very pale, and his eyes had that far-away look peculiar to men who are looking death in the face. He stood it like a hero, never trembled, and had his wits about him to the last."

"Died instantly, didn't he? said the General.

"Yes. Four balls through the heart."

"So much the better. He did not suffer." And the General picked up "Mahan on Field Fortifications."

"I heard that the boy belonged to a good family," said the Major. "He ran away from home and joined the army, and fought bravely. His desertion was more of a little escapade than anything else."

"If Sherman was not pressing us so infernally hard," interrupted the Captain, "he would have been let off, but the court-martial just rushed things through, and there was nobody to look after the boy."

"Boom! Boom! thundered the cannon over the hills at the front.

"Why should anybody look after him?" interposed the General. "We must look after the army and its discipline."

Boom!

"The fact is," continued the General, "matters have reached a point where we must make an example of every man who fails to do his duty."

"I admit it," replied the Captain, "but it makes my blood run cold to slaughter mere boys."

The General tucked Jomini's "Art of War" in his pocket and paid for it. Then he turned around and cleared his throat.

"Now listen to me," he said impressively. "You certainly will give me credit for the average amount of kindness, sympathy and human feeling. Yet I cannot agree with you about that deserter. According to all accounts he was a sensible lad. He knew his duty as a soldier. He knew that if he deserted he would be shot. What did he do? When the enemy was marching on, threatening this very city, endangering the existence of the Confederacy, he sneaked off to the woods. Some say he was going to see his mother. It does not matter. He was a deserter. If we spared him others would have to be spared. The army would be demoralized. Desertions would be the order of the day. We had to shoot him as an example. It could not be avoided. Now, let us drop the subject. I know that I am right, and I should like to see anyone stand up and say that I am wrong."

Boom! Boom!

The wave of thunderous sound rolled over the whole city, and people stopped to listen.

Just then a light wagon covered with dust and evidently from the country stopped in front of the store. Two women alighted and came in. One was quite young, and the other, who was old enough to be her mother, leaned on her arm.

"Have you an evening paper?" the young woman asked the bookseller.

He handed one to her, and the old woman, arranging her spectacles, looked nervously over it.

"Yes, it is true that there was an execution here to-day," she whispered hurriedly to her companion.

Boom!

For some reason the officers relapsed into an embarrassed silence. The Major with his index finger commenced drawing fortifications on a map of Georgia. The Captain looked moodily at the floor. The General pulled Jomini's "Art of War" out of his pocket and then thrust it back again.

"Oh, mercy!" exclaimed the young woman in a low tone, "those people told us the truth then."

"Oh, my God! My poor murdered boy!"

So wild, unearthly and piercing was the cry that every man in the room started in alarm.

The old woman had fallen back in a chair gasping for breath, with her face as white as a sheet.

Her companion gently fanned her until she laid her gray head on her hand and sobbed aloud.

Turning to the sympathetic and silent spectators the young woman pointed to a paragraph in the paper and said:

"It was her boy—her only son. The paper calls it military justice. We call it murder!"

The General gradually moved toward the door. His head was bowed and his hands trembled. As soon as he got outside he walked off at a rapid pace. The Major made several ineffectual attempts to build a strong redoubt with his finger tip on the map of Georgia, but suddenly collapsed and abruptly bolted. The Captain remained. He brought the old woman a glass of water, and fanned her while he listened with a sad but kindly face to the young woman's story.

It seems that the boy's mother lived thirty miles in the country. Vague reports reached her that her son was in trouble, and she rode in with a neighbor, arriving an hour or two after the execution. I caught this much of it, and then an eager desire seized me to follow the example of the General and the Major. As I went out of the door I looked back. The old woman was silently praying, while the tears ran down her withered cheeks. Her friend looked down upon her with pitying eyes, and the Captain had one hand over his bronzed face. The big guns continued to boom all the afternoon, but I did not hear them. I had something else to think of.—Atlanta Constitution.

A NICE QUIET FAMILY GAME.

A veteran married man living on the east side says that cards came within an ace of ruining his domestic happiness. Contrary to the orthodox method of ruination in this particular line of vice, he did not frequent gambling rooms, clubs, or saloons to find the broad path, but stumbled into it right in his own house. He had taught his wife to play poker two or three winters ago, and frequently since then they had friendly little sessions, using buttons for chips. The other night, though, he brought home a box of the genuine, nice stacks of whites, reds and blues.

"Now," he said, "I'll just show you how poker is played among the boys. I never could take any interest in it with them cussed buttons, but this seems natural. We'll call it a dollar limit; whites a nickel, reds a quarter, blues fifty cents, and take five dollars worth each. Now if you break me I'll buy you that seal muff."

The game proceeded without any material change in the size of the piles for nearly an hour, when Mr. Brown had three tens pat. Mrs. B. took three cards—pair of bullets all the time—caught the third and beat him out of three dollars. This was all right, except that Brown remarked that he had never in his life seen a poor player that didn't have all the luck. Finally he lost the other two dollars.

"Gimme 'nother five and if I don't knock you out in fifteen minutes by that clock I'll never turn another card," he said.

Mrs. B. didn't answer; that is, she didn't say anything, but her look said: "That's all right." The luck seemed to go Brown's way this time, and he pulled in quite a few chips. Mrs. Brown was dealing, a third party, Brown's brother, was a looker-on at this period, and of course it was Brown's age.

"I'll come in," said Mrs. B.

"Oh, of course you will," said Brown; "well then, put up another dollar and you won't have so many chips."

"I'll raise you a dollar, James," said his spouse.

"You will, will you? Dollar better'n you."

Mrs. Brown just came in and drew two cards. Brown thought he'd keep his, and when his wife chipped without looking he promptly raised the limit. After carefully looking them over the lady thought she'd raise it another dollar. This made Brown fairly bound off the chair, but he had to call, only to have a flush beaten by a full. He quit there, and when his wife giggled said:

"I don't see anything funny about it at all. Anybody could play with the cards you get. If I had them, you would have been broke two hours ago."

SAYINGS BY SAM JONES.

I despise these little two-wheeled Christians.

God pity a man that has got a fork-tongued wife.

Religion is only love going about doing something.

I'd rather be a noble, generous sinner than a stingy Methodist.

The happiest creature is he that has no thought for himself.

Sin not only makes a man wicked, but it makes a fool of him.

It is mighty hard to keep a 200 pound fat, sleek Methodist straight.

A man will never be what he ought to be until you show him what he is.

The creed that is no good at all is that by which men claim to be the elect.

God never made two men alike, and if he did, one of them was of no account.

There are some men in the pulpit who are only preachers, and not much at that.

If you want a powerful preacher, quit talking about him and go to praying for him.

If there is a class of men on earth that you can bank on, it is Methodist preachers.

Where is the preacher who is not striving for a bigger church and a bigger salary?

A man isn't a sinner because he is an infidel, but he is an infidel because he is a sinner.

Heaven is just the other side of where a man has done his level best through and through.

What is a creed but an old skin stuffed with sawdust, good to be exhibited in a museum.

I have seen many a cultured man who has not had sense enough to keep sober.

Jesus would put the angels on half rations before he would let a soldier in his army suffer.

I wish you could all get so you would be afraid of fire. I want all my fire this side the grave.

Let us leave off singing about the "sweet by and by," and sing about the sweet now and now.

How people shun the poor in the church and look closely after the old colonels and judges!

It is mighty hard for a woman to be a Christian when her cook has got more religion than she has.

This world has been keeping its eyes open for 6,000 years, and yet they have never seen a good man want.

Hope is a mile post on the road to heaven to tell a fellow just how far he has got and where the end is.

What you did with the grace you got yesterday will determine largely what you will receive of grace to-day.

It does help a fellow mightily once in a while to get sick, and shake him over a coffin every four or five years.

That fellow lying in the gutter drunk is a better man in the sight of God than those fellows talking about him.

Every true revival ought to begin in the heart of the preacher. You cannot have it with an icicle in the pulpit.

When the soul longs for Christ in preference to all things else, then that soul is the centre of gravity to Christ.

These religious women who are gadding about all over creation and neglecting their homes—I don't like them.

I want to see the day when voluntary contributions will support the church, and when it will be a crime to hire a pew in it.

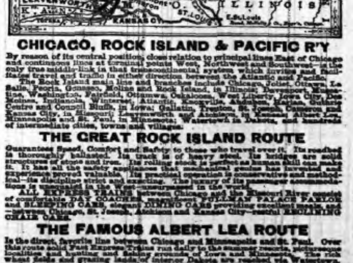
WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE



CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y
By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific. The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE
Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.
ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLEEPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE
Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown.
A short desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points.
All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly attention.

Surface Indications
What a miner would very properly term "surface indications" of what is beneath, are the Pimples, Sties, Sores, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions with which people are annoyed in spring and early summer. The effete matter accumulated during the winter months now makes its presence felt, through Nature's endeavors to expel it from the system. While it remains, it is a poison that festers in the blood and may develop into Scrofula. This condition causes derangement of the digestive and assimilatory organs, with a feeling of enervation, languor, weariness—often lightly spoken of as "only spring fever." These are evidences that Nature is not able, unaided, to throw off the corrupt atoms which weaken the vital force. To regain health, Nature must be aided by a thorough blood-purifying medicine; and nothing else is so effective as
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
which is sufficiently powerful to expel from the system even the taint of Hereditary Scrofula.
The medical profession indorse Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and many attestations of the cures effected by it come from all parts of the world. It is, in the language of the Hon. Francis Jewett, ex-State Senator of Massachusetts and ex-Mayor of Lowell, "the only preparation that does real, lasting good."

Poetry.

WHAT IS LIFE?

A little crib beside the bed,
A little face above the spread;
A little frock behind the door,
A little shoe upon the floor.

A little lad with dark brown hair,
A little blue-eyed face, and fair;
A little lane that leads to school,
A little pencil, slate and rule.

A little blithesome, winsome maid,
A little hand within is laid;
A little cottage, acres four,
A little old-time fashioned store.

A little family gathering round
A little turf-heaped, tear-dewed mound;
A little added to his soil,
A little rest from the hardest toil.

A little silver in his hair,
A little stool and easy-chair;
A little night of earth lit gloom,
A little cortege to the tomb.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

"ALL BUT."

"Good-by, dear Mary. I hate to have you go. It's like going into another world, so far away. Tell John I never shall be satisfied till he settles East. I never have quite forgiven him for moving to California."

"Oh, mother! when he's doing so well. I don't want to go, but he did not get on here; a small salary, and no prospect of a better, and the children coming!"

"Well, well, it was natural, and you can't feel it as I do, being younger; but you want to see the children come!"

"I guess I do!"

"And by that you may guess how I want to see you."

And the old lady wiped her eyes. She was a stout woman, in a plaid flannel dustcloak and poke bonnet. The cloak was odd and conspicuous, but Mrs. Watrous did not care for that, she wanted something soft to cover her dress, something that she could shake out of temporary creases, and keep on the hat-rack for daily use; that cloak covered her morning dress when she went out for daily supplies, and hid the worn sleeves and faded waist of her old black silk when she took a shopping tour, or a drive with some kindly friend; for Mr. Watrous did not keep a horse. It was a useful garment, and her husband always called it "Charity," because he said it covered a multitude of sins in his wife's dress.

Mary Watrous, the only child of this respectable couple, had married eight years ago the teller in the bank where her father had been cashier for many years. At first John Dutton had been content with his position; but after his three boys were born he began to reflect on the future, and having a good offer from a cousin of his in San Francisco, a successful merchant there, he put his small patrimony of five thousand dollars into Sam Dutton's business, and now Dutton & Co. were making money steadily. This was the first time Mary had been home to see her parents after a three years' absence, and she had a new grandchild to exhibit—plump, rosy little Molly. The three boys were left at home with their father, under the nurse's charge, Mary thinking that she could take care of Molly better than John could look after the boys without Katy's help.

Mr. Watrous had gone to get the baggage checked, and Mrs. Watrous stood by the car, which waited on the track to be coupled to the express train just whistling in the distance; a train that made no stop in the next hundred miles.

As Mrs. Watrous wiped the tears from her kind eyes, Mary held up Molly to the window to comfort the mother's heart with that lovely baby face set in yellow curls, lit by soft hazel eyes, just like her mother's, and sparkling with dimples.

"By, danma!" she shouted, kissing her fat hand, and smiling. She was delighted to go, for she liked to ride—for a time.

"You darlin' baby! Good by, good-by."

"Hullo, Molly!" put in Grandpa's crisp voice.

"Good-by, danpa!" baby responded with another kiss.

"Here are your checks, Mary. Good-by, again, dear. Mother, are you ready to go? I must be at the bank."

"Oh no! I must stay and see the last of them."

"Be careful, then, old lady. Don't get on to the track, knocked down by the train. Counted your checks, Mary?"

"Yes, father. Good-by."

And off trotted Mr Watrous, quite agrieved to part with his "girl" as he still called her, as his wife felt; but, manlike, unwilling or unable to express it.

Just behind the car, perhaps a rod from it, stood the engine of a local accommodation train, spitting and hissing ready to leave as soon as the California express should draw out. Mrs. Watrous was still close to the car when the fast train came in, passed her, and then was switched on to the rail and coupled on to the waiting car. She was holding Mary's hand when the two met, and the jar disturbed her; she started and almost fell.

"Oh, Mother! do be careful," were Mary's last words, as she let go the clinging fingers and gave a long, last look at the dear face, streaming with tears.

In another instant, just as she had replaced Molly on the seat and shut the window, she heard a scream outside. She sprang up and saw through the door, near which she was seated, her mother, lying prostrate on the track and the other engine coming from the station, though slowly. The express train on leaving this station at once took a curve to the south, so all that Mary saw was a part of her mother's body, in that unmistakable cloak, and two or three men running toward the track; but she saw enough. She dropped in a dead faint, hit her head against the corner of a seat, and lay insensible for hours; Molly screaming at the top of her voice, and all the women in the car devoting themselves to her and her mother.

At last Mary came out from her long swoon, and was able to tell the shocked passengers what she had seen, just as they reached the first stopping place. She insisted on getting off there, though she trembled all over, and her head swam with the blow which it had received. There would be no eastward train for three hours, the conductor said, and in that time, she thought, her self-possession would return. The conductor took Molly out, and into the station, and Mary was helped by a kindly passenger, who spoke with authority to the woman in charge. He was a director on the road, and, consequently, Mary was well cared for—seated in the one rocking chair, a cup of hot tea brought her, and Molly beguiled by the woman's little child, who always accompanied her mother to her place of work. Left to herself Mary began to recall the fearful sight, to shudder, to remember her mother's words: "I must see the last of them!" Poor mother! She had indeed seen the last of her daughter and pretty Molly. And oh! why had she fainted? But for that she might have persuaded the conductor to stop right there and let her get off. Now, she could not return to her father till he knew all, and had to bear the shock alone. She had three hours to wait here, alone, impatient, distracted; and she could not reach her father before six, his dinner hour.

Then she thought of him, of the sudden horror that had smitten him, and, woman like, her thought went on into the future. Would he care to stay in L——? would he not come to her? But her house was small, her children growing; how could she make him comfortable? She would telegraph to John, her trunks coming before her would startle him. Then she reflected that he would not know the trunks had come unless she were there too. But he knew she was to leave L—— to-day. She raised herself feebly from the rocking chair, and asked the woman in charge where she should find the telegraph office.

"Well, I can tell you, but it won't be of no use. The' was a tornado swep' over the country yesterday afternoon—at least over the south part of it—and the wires betwixt here and Sent Lewis is all down." Mary sank back in her chair; she could do nothing for John; he must put up with his anxiety. An hour went by, local trains came and went, the usual sort of travelers came and went also.

Molly began to cry; she was tired and hungry. Mary crept over to the restaurant, now open to feed the passengers of a northern accomodation train who din[e] there. She got some bread and milk for the child, and tried to eat something herself, but the food choked her; she could only swallow another cup of tea; she took Molly on her lap and the child fell asleep then; the baby head resting on her bosom comforted that sore heart, yet she cried bitterly over it, recollecting how often she had sat in her own mother's arms in her childhood, and, resting on her soulder, found that blessed consolation that only a mother's arm can give. Oh, what should she do without mother! If she had only died peacefully in her bed, with tender ministry about her, loving words of faith, tears of parting, looks of farewell; but to be so snatched out of a happy life, so rent from all this world in one crashing moment. Oh! if ever she reached her California home in safety, she would never tempt a railway again! What if there had been an accident to the cars, and she had seen Molly crushed to death and could not lift a hand to save her?

She clasped the child so closely at that horrid thought that she cried out in her sleep. Mary hushed her, and tried to control her thoughts. She endeavored to recall the consolations of her earnest religious faith; but the words even of Scripture fell lifeless on her memory. Poor human nature is so weak, both in mind and body, that a blow staggers it, and shakes even the foundations. She was stunned, hurt, desperate, neither submission nor resignation came at her call; she could only whisper a helpless, vague appeal to God, like—

> "Children crying in the night,
> And with no language but a cry."

Presently Molly woke up, cross, hot, and quite intractable enough to occupy her mother in the next half-hour in soothing her fretful temper, washing the warm face and hands, smoothing the damp curls and beguiling her sorrows with a red apple from the lunch-counter.

Then, after a little while, the window of the ticket office opened. Mary bought her ticket to L——, dropped a dollar into the station-maid's hand, who received it with an astonished stare, and a grim "Thankye," and then, grasping little Molly's hand, went out into the fresh air and paced the platform till the porter shouted:

"Western Ex-press! Passengers for the East'ard, all aboard!"

Once homeward bound, it seemed as if her grief and terror were renewed. Molly slept; but in spite of all her efforts, Mary could not help recalling the last thing her eyes saw before she fainted, and her soul cowered before what she must meet now.

The way seemed interminable; there was a delay at one station waiting for a freight train that had jumped the track in the morning, and was neither off nor on as yet; and that delay involved another further on, when an excursion party of railway directors and their friends were due, and had the right of way. It was dark when Mary reached L——, but she took the first carriage that offered, and lifting in sleepy Molly, torn herself by conflicting emotions of grief, dread, and anxiety, she at last arrived at her father's door.

She paid the driver hurriedly, and with Molly in her arms rushed in at the front door, which happened to be unlocked. A bright light streamed from the glass door of the dining-room at the end of the hall. Breathless, panting, pale as a sheet, and with a face of woe, she flung open the door, dropped Molly from her grasp, and, with a wild shriek, flung herself into her mother's arms. Yes; there was that deplored mother, stout, hearty, uninjured in life or limb, just rising from the dessert that lingered on the dinner table, to see who came in at the front door in that eager, familiar fashion; and there sat her placid father, with the remainder of a big pear on his plate, his eyes as wide as eyes could open, his mouth agape, struck dumb by her entrance; for he had just said:

"I hope Mary has got to C—— by this time, and taken her section in the sleeper. I telegraphed them to reserve a whole section; she will be so much more comfortable with Molly along."

"Why, I never in the world thought you was looking out, or I'd have telegraphed to the train. You see that other engine was very near, and I'd got my eyes sort of dull with crying, and for a minute I stood still to get my balance, that coupling of the cars shook me so, you know. Then I saw the engine begin to come, and I started across; it was foolish, but there was time enough, only my cloak had got unbuttoned at the top, and slipped back so it was caught in a splinter on the end of a tie, and that sort of hindered me. I stumbled, a woman screamed, for she thought I was going to fall; but I didn't. I caught myself up, the cloak tore off my back and fell down; for in the pull the other button went, and I got over the other rail only just in time, and then I did fall, but not to hurt me, for a man had run forward to get me off the track, and I fell right against him. There's the cloak, pretty well run over."

Mary turned. The torn and dusty remnants of "charity" hung on a chair; for Mrs. Watrous had brought them out to illustrate her story to her husband.

Mary seized the ragged mass with eager fury and thrust it into the open fire, forcing it under the flame with the tongs.

"Oh, Mary!"

"Mother, I can't help it. The thing ought to be destroyed out of sight. I never could look at it again. Think! It made me believe you were run over; gave me all this agony of a whole day, this new journey, and brought me back, expecting to find you killed by the train."

"Well, dear, I was; all but."

Mr. Watrous roared, Mary burst into tears, and mother placidly remarked:

"A miss is as good as a mile, isn't it!"

Nobody answered.

A TALE OF LOVE'S CRUEL TEST.

I had brought a bundle of papers home with me from the office of the Fantasia, of which magazine I was sub-editor. By home I mean furnished apartments; and there I sat, following the adventures of a wonderful hero, who, when not "pale with passion" or "white with anger," was "livid with rage."

My neighbors above were having a party and I could hear the strains of "Pop Goes the Weasel," the noise of galloping feet, followed by a certain stoppage of harmony, a loud crash, and screams of laughter, all tokens that they were indulging in the festive amusement yclept "musical chairs."

Instead of minding my business, I began to picture to myself the people who were indulging in the game, until a rap at the door roused me to the utterance of "come in," and entered my friend Will Moultrie, a very good fellow in some things, and a gentleman in all.

He had not, I am sorry to say, any profession, though he dabbled in literature. His parents died in his infancy, and ever since he has been treated as a son by his uncle, old Gen. Moultrie, who spoiled the boy, but could not spoil the man. Uncle and his nephew had pulled well together until within the last year.

Gen. Moultrie found an heiress for his boy to marry; and his boy, instead of being grateful, point-blank refused to propose to the wealthy Miss Norris. He had given his word, his heart, and his love, to pretty little Nellie Brooke, who had not a cent in the world to bless herself with. The old General flew into a violent rage on being told this; but instead of ordering the rebel to leave the house, he left it himself, returning at the end of a month with a wife.

To do the old man justice he was rather ashamed of himself. He had married an old sweetheart in haste to repent at leisure, for Will's new aunt had the worst temper in the world. She had lived in single and selfish blessedness until the General lost his head, and in the endeavor to break Will humiliated himself. Will like the excellent fellow he was at heart, tried to make the best of things, and the old man was so touched by this that he forgave his nephew, and though still refusing to countenance the engagement with Miss Brooke he ceased to urge Will to lay seige to the heiress.

Goaded one day by his wife's bitter tongue the old General solemnly made his will in his nephew's favor, and took care that the world knew he had done so.

"Hallo, Will," said I shaking him by the hand, "what ails you, old fellow? You look down on your luck."

"The enemy has carried the day," he replied, with a foreign laugh; "my uncle has turned me out."

"Nonsense!" cried I.

"No nonsense to me, old fellow. We had a row royal this morning. I put my name to a bill for Lennox, and, as a matter of course, he left me in the lurch to pay it. I had to appeal to Uncle John, telling him the whole affair, and he would have helped me without demur but for that blessed wife of his. My stars, Murray, she has him under her thumb! He paid the debt and then showed me the door—with a bow, Murray!"

His voice shook.

"My dear old Will don't break down," said I in infinite distress myself.

"I came up to town straight away," Will went on, "and went directly to Nelly; I told her everything and set her free from her engagement. She's a world too good for a penniless ne'er-do-well, that she is!"

"So you have lost her, too!" I said blankly.

"Have I?" cried Will, his great gray eyes flashing. "Why, when I told her, she refused to give me up, the blessed little angel, that she did! She said she would wait for me until her hair was gray, if need be—and—Oh, Murray, old fellow, it makes me choke—she wanted me to take fifty pounds of hers that she'd made by those poor, dear, little sketches of hers! Oh! by Jove, I could cut my head off for her!"

"Your head, my dear fellow, is more likely to benefit her on your shoulders," I replied.

"But isn't she a downright little brick, Murray? By George, I'll go to work at once! Oh! I do wish I had taken your advice, my boy, and had gone in for work long ago. If I had done so, I might have been able to offer her a home now, the darling. I shall begin in right earnest now."

He had had his shoulder to the wheel for some time when, unknown to him, I went down to Moultrie as a peace-maker.

"I suppose," he said, not unkindly, "that you come as ambassador from my unworthy nephew?"

"No, I don't, General. Will knows nothing of my being here. I must say that I am sorry for the estrangement."

"He brought it on himself," said the General, sullenly. "I suppose all is over between him and that girl?"

"Quite the contrary, Miss Brooke is true as steel!"

"Pooh! Catch any woman remaining true to a penniless scapegrace."

I waxed warm in Nelly's defence, the old man listening with a cynical smile. He would not hear a word on Will's behalf and I am sorry to say we parted rather coldly. I returned to town thinking that I would not tell this to my friend until I had made a second attempt at mediation.

Will worked hard for Nelly's sake, and that brave little woman toiled for his, painting and sketching and I am sure denying herself many harmless vanities that her fifty pounds might be increased to a hundred. So time went on and Will's first novel was published, and to our delight was selling well.

One day, which I think I shall not forget for long, I was coming away from the station, after seeing a party of actors off north, when some one ran full tilt against me, and as he apologized I recognized the Moultrie lawyer, Percy.

"Beg your pardon," said he, as we shook hands, "but I want to get the 3:30 train down to Moultrie. The old General's gone."

"Gone where?" cried I.

"Can't say. He died this morning of apoplexy."

And with a wave of the hand he passed on, leaving me to recover as best I could from these sudden tidings of the death of an old friend.

It was too true. The General had died almost in a moment with no time to utter his boy's name.

I broke the news to Will, and then, as he was completely stricken down by it, I took him to my chambers and made him stay with me, doing my best to console him.

We both received invitations to attend the funeral through Mr. Percy, and as a matter of course we both went to render the last service—pay the last tribute of respect. The house, with its paraphernalia of mourning, looked strange and sad; as the heavy wheels rolled down the long avenue to the graveyard it seemed to me they were rolling over my heart.

We returned after the funeral service was over, to hear the will read. Mrs. Moultrie, in widow's weeds, made her appearance, leaning on her shaky brother's arm, and neither could restrain a glance of triumph at the young fellow whose inheritance they had obtained. Mrs. Moultrie scarcely noticed me; she despised authors, particularly those who have been on the stage, as have I; her late husband's nephew she completely ignored.

Mr. Percy opened the will with his usual cough of importance, and we all listened attentively. Mrs. Moultrie was amply provided for; there were a few legacies; a diamond ring left to me as a souvenir; the residue—mansion, house, contents, Moultrie demesne, tenements and farms bequeathed unconditionally to "my beloved nephew, William Moultrie."

There was a dead silence broken by a scream of rage from Mrs. Moultrie.

"That is not right!" she cried, "there is another will!"

"This is the only will Gen. Moultrie made after his marriage," said the lawyer, serenely.

"Why, after his precious nephew had gone, did not he make a fresh one?" she cried. "My brother was a witness, and you"—turning to me with blazing eyes.

"I beg your pardon," said Percy politely, "that document merely related to a lease. If you wish it produced"—

But Mrs. Moultrie was in hysterics, and his sentence was drowned in her screams.

THEY TOOK TINTYPES INSTEAD.

A man and a woman were loudly disputing in a doorway on Park avenue yesterday when Officer Lynch happened along and asked what was the trouble.

"It's just this," replied the farmer. "She's my wife. We live out here about seven miles, and she had the toothache for three days and nights. We drove in this morning to have the tooth pulled, and now she wants to back out."

"But it has stopped aching," protested the wife.

"Yes, but it will begin again as soon as we get home."

"No it won't."

"But we can't drive fourteen miles and lose half a day for nothing."

"You might have your tintypes taken," suggested Officer Lynch. "That will be the next thing to having a tooth pulled."

"I'll agree to that," promptly replied the wife. "I'm willing to suffer, but it's no use to pull a tooth unless it aches."

"Well, we'll do that then," observed the husband, "and I'm much obliged to you, stranger, for the suggestion. There's a place right over there, and I guess we can be performed on and get home in time for dinner."

HE GOT IT.

The occupant of an office on the fourth floor of the Campau block cried "Come in!" yesterday to have the door open and ancient African enter and remark:

"I'ze a leetle behin' han', sah, but I'ze heah all de same."

"Who are you?"

"Dey calls me Uncle Isaacs, sah. I used to sweep out your room, you 'member?"

"Oh, yes. And what do you want, now?"

"Chris'mas present, sah. It's a little late, but I'z heah."

"H'm. You should have come around before."

"Couldn't do it, sah. De man wouldn't hear to it."

"What man?"

"De gem'lan who bosses de Work House, sah. He jist turned me loose dis noon, an' I hurried right up."

"Well, here's fifteen cents."

"Thanks, sah. If I doan' come aroun' next y'ar at the proper time, doan' you worry about me. You'll know I'ze up dar agin, an' dat de gem'lan absconds to my deliberatin' myself out till de sentence has dispired."

MIXED UP RELATIONSHIP.

A man who is his own grandfather and the father of his wife has been found. The way people can mix up themselves and their relatives in the matter of marriage was perhaps never better illustrated than in the case of a backwoods Maine family, of which a correspondent writes:

A father, son and grandson married three sisters.

That looks simple enough, doesn't it? It hasn't dawned on you yet? Well, see here:

1. Amos, the father, married Abigial.
2. Benjamin, son of Amos, married Betsey.
3. Charles, son of Benjamin, married Carolina.

What then?

Amos is brother to his son.
Amos is brother to his grandson.
Amos is grandfather to his daughter.
Amos is grandfather to his sister.
Amos is father to his wife.
Amos is father to his grandson.
Amos is his own grandfather, his own son and brother-in-law to himself.
Benjamin is brother to his father.
Benjamin is brother to his son.
Benjamin is brother to his mother.
Benjamin is brother to his daughter.
Benjamin is the son of his sister.
Benjamin is the husband of his sister.
Charles is brother to his father.
Charles is brother to his grandfather.
Charles is brother to his mother.
Charles is brother to his grandfather.
Charles is grand-nephew to his mother.
Charles is grand-nephew to his wife.
Charles is the grand-child of his aunt.
Charles is married to another aunt.
Charles is the son of his aunt.
Charles is the husband of his sister.

Maine is responsible for a good many things, but the foregoing will show that she is still engaged in the good work.

PROPOSED OIL PIPE LINE.

An [illegible] says: "The Standard Oil company proposes to run an iron pipe, six inches in diameter, that will stand a pressure of 3,000 pounds to the square inch, direct from Constable Hook across Newark bay to Elizabethport, and from thence if possible, through the remaining part of the State to Pennsylvania. The oil will be forced through the pipes by means of pressure exerted by powerful stationary engines. The pipes will be laid from two to four feet under ground. Permission from the various cities and towns through which the pipe will pass is yet necessary in order to execute the scheme. If this movement will meet with success, the service of the numerous oil trains will no longer be required, as the oil can then be transferred from the source to the seaboard in one continuous channel."

WEALTH.

Labor creates wealth.

That is an important and positive fact which some people appear to be either ignorant of or anxious to ignore.

What is real wealth?

They are only evidences of wealth.

Cultured farms, constructed railroads and canals, shaft-driven mines, buildings for the production of the many fabricated articles required for the convenience and comfort of the human family, constitute the reality of wealth.

Everything that legitimate labor produces, from a steel rail to a horseshoe, from the clearing of a forest to the building of an ocean steamer, is the creation of wealth and only real and enduring wealth.

Labor is the sole architect of wealth, the originator of capital and its preserver.

Therefore we contend, that the rights of labor, of the industrial classes, should be foremost to receive protection, and that such protection consists mainly in equal and exact justice and the free bestowal of honest reward.

Labor asks only that.

That labor should receive.

WASHINGTON.

We have just passed the 155th anniversary of the birth of GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To honor aright the memory of that great man is to bow obedient to the highest decree of patriotism.

Remembrance of the peerless worth of Washington can be demonstrated in various ways, but in no manner more effective than by imitating his virtues, public and private.

Could the politicians of the present age only be induced to study the character of Washington, and honestly follow the example of his life actions, what a change would ensue!

Happy to contemplate.

Then would the violent bitterness of partisanship be subdued, if not extinguished.

Then a widely different class of men would dominate all legislative bodies, men ambitious to serve country first and self afterwards.

Then the occupancy of official positions, from the loftiest down to the most humble, would mean the discharge of duty as a sacred trust.

Honor the memory of Washington.

Honor it at all times and under all circumstances.

But, with honor, blend the obligation of imitating his virtues.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—An adverse report was to-day ordered by the Senate Finance Committee on Senator Beck's bill, to provide for the retirement of United States legal-tender and national bank notes of small denominations, and the issue of coin certificates in place of outstanding silver and gold certificates. The bill also requires the Secretary of the Treasury to issue these certificates in denominations of one, two and five dollars on all the surplus coin and gold bullion held by the Treasury as the property of the United States in excess of $100,000,000 of gold and silver coin and gold bullion and to pay out the same in discharge of Government obligations, except such as are made payable expressly in coin. Senator Beck gave notice that he would call the bill up in the Senate at the first opportunity.

DOINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

The State Legislature honored Washington's Birthday by an early adjournment of both houses. No business was done after the joint meeting. By that time the Senate had entirely cleared its calendar. The most interesting event on that side of the House was the reception of a nomination from Governor Green. The Senate immediately went into executive session. The nomination proved to be that of Attorney-General John P. Stockton for a new term. Under the rule the nomination went to the Judiciary Committee.

The regular proceedings, beyond the substitution of a new bill for Senate 60, exempting soldiers' widows from taxes, there was nothing but the passage of these bills: Senate 62, supplement to an act providing for drainage where necessary to public health; Senate 55, fixing a penalty of $1,000 fine or fifteen yards imprisonment for betraying a girl under sixteen years; Senate 35, permitting the Jersey City and Bergen Horse Railroad to take lands for erecting a depot; Senate 32, providing the procedure for the expenditure of public money by municipal Boards; Senate 89, requiring farmers to cut down the brush, &c., growing on the public road in front of their premises; Senate 86, regulating stenographers' fees in chancery cases.

The bill appropriating $75,000 for the erection of an Executive Mansion in Trenton was reported adversely by Mr. Carroll, of the Committee on Public Grounds and Buildings, but the report was subsequently withdrawn at request of Mr. Hudspeth, introducer of the bill. The bill appropriating $5,000 to the McClellan Monument fund was laid over. Only one bill, relating to the compensation of masters, jurors, &c., in certain cases, was passed. The new bills were.

The Republican Anti-Saloon Convention.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—

Since the Republican political meeting held recently in Plainfield addressed by Mr. Alfred Griffin, of Kansas, Dr. Bancroft and A. G. Mabee, it has been repeatedly asserted that the gathering was designed to favor the prohibition of the liquor traffic, and that the Anti-saloon Republican convention held at Chicago, fully determined to destroy the saloon, that the party meant to crush it out, etc. etc. What may be the purpose of the party here is a matter of doubt, but it is pretty certain that the Chicago convention was infinitely more anxious about saving the Republican party than advancing the interests of temperance. Party was first all the time, and it was very clear that they were more anxious to destroy the Prohibitionists than destroy the liquor traffic. The reasons for our belief are numerous, and are as follows:

First. The second call for a convention signed July 13th, 1886, by Albert Griffin and his secretary, clearly shows that the object of the conference was not to endorse prohibition. It says: "In the opinion of those who called this National Convention the party should not be asked to commit itself nationally to or against specific law, but should announce as its settled policy that it will everywhere strive to reduce the business of dram selling and the evils resulting from it as much as possible—each State to decide for itself, from time to time, what laws are best adapted to secure the end in view, etc.

Second. Mr. Griffin's own statement made in Chicago at the conference of Republicans, held in the Grand Pacific Hotel, September 24, 1886, proves that the design was to save the party rather than destroy intemperance. He said in speaking of Republican senators and congressmen at Washington: "I found that these statesmen were of opinion that it would not do for the Republican party to take position in favor of prohibition; that the temperance element must be satisfied by the party's declaration of opposition to the saloon-keepers and the saloon-element." The Chicago Tribune (Sept. 3d) says that "All seemed to realize that it wouldn't do for the party to take a position in favor of prohibition, but that something had to be done to satisfy the temperance element and keep it from going out."

Third. Mr. Griffin in an interview with a reporter of the Chicago Tribune July 18th, acknowledged that prohibition was not to be sought. He said: "The object of this movement is not to bind the Republican party to indorse prohibition or any specific measure in regard to the liquor traffic. * * * I think something of this kind is absolutely necessary to save the Republican party."

Fourth. The Chicago Tribune (Rep.) declared that the object of the movement was not as much against the saloon as against the third party. It says editorially, July 22d, 1886: "In plain words the object of this movement is to draw Prohibitionists back to the party."

Fifth. The Chicago Evening Journal (Rep.) virtually says the same thing in its issue of Sept. 13th, 1886. "The purpose of this Conference is to prevent the advanced temperance element from deserting the Republican party and going over to the Probibitionists," declares that paper.

Sixth. At the Chicago Convention, when it was proposed in the Committee on Resolutions—composed of the leading men—that the Republican party make the issue a National one, it was defeated by a vote of twelve to five.

Seventh. When it was proposed in the Committee, not only to submit prohibitory amendments to the people but also to adopt them, it was voted not to adopt by a vote of nine to six, two not voting. They were unwilling to do anything specific and so would not adopt, but simply submit, amendments, which they promised to do in New York and Pennsylvania years ago, and never did all the same.

Eighth. The proposition to ask the United States Government to refuse to sell revenue stamps, and cease to issue liquor "permits" in States that had prohibitory laws, was denied.

Ninth. The Convention proper refused to "adopt" and sustained the "submission" idea.

Tenth. The Convention was asked to change the word "tax" in the fifth plank, as it implied license, but refused to do it.

Eleventh. When an amendment was offered, that when a dram-seller was nominated for office it was the duty of Republicans to vote against him, it was defeated. Of course that would alienate United States Senator Williams, of California, a liquor-dealer and Amos Townsend, liquor dealer, of Cleveland, Ohio, Republican nominees for Congress; Sheridan Shook, brewer, New York city, and Louis Froelich, of Brooklyn, ex-President of the Liquor Dealers Association, and that large Republican element in New York in the Brewers and Dealers Association, which comprises four out of five of the members—according to the secretary's statement made two years ago.

Twelfth. When Mr. Conger asked the convention to nominate only "clean men", opposed to the liquor traffic, it was voted down.

We might give other reasons for our belief that this Chicago convention desired above all things else to serve the Republican party, and that temperance was secondary, but it seems quite unnecessary especially when members used such language as follows: "What I want to know is how I can best help the Republican party;" and, "We are Republicans and are going to stay Republicans. There is no danger of our being read out of the party. It can't be done" etc., etc.

We would like to call the reader's attention to a few extracts from Republican papers which may explain why this anti-saloon convention thought it wise to take such an indefinite stand on this temperance question. "There are hundreds of saloons in Cincinnati and other Ohio cities that are substantially Republican club houses."—Commercial Gazette.

A "Republican Brewer" in the New York Tribune Oct. 11th 1884, says: "Our National organization is twenty-four years old. During all these years the Republicans have been in power in National affairs, and I submit to every candid brewer, be he Democrat or be he Republican, if the brewing iterests of our country have not grown to immense proportions, if our rights and our interests have not been protected, and fostered and encouraged by our Government."

"The Republican party is not and cannot be made a prohibition party."—Brooklyn Times.

"Prohibition originated with the Democrats. They passed the Maine law which has always been the mainstay and model of Prohibition legislation elsewhere. In the rural districts everywhere there are as many Prohibitionists among the Democrats as among the Republicans."—Chicago Tribune.

Other extracts might be given but it seems useless, especially when we remember the Raster resolution passed in 1872 by the National Republican Convention, and the Brewers Convention of 1885, when it was claimed in the convention that three fourths of the brewers were Republicans. These things being so there is no doubt that Anti-saloonism is designed mainly to save the Republican party and head off those Prohibitionists who really desire temperance to prevail.

Chapter CXXXVI Laws of 1882, a supplement to the act of March 15, 1882, contemplates the making by the Mayor and Council of the foregoing exhibit. The said act declares that you shall name and recommend such sum or sums of money to be voted for and raised by tax as in your judgment are necessary to defray the expenses of the Borough for the ensuing year. While the term Road Money is not used in the language employed in the Act, we are of the opinion that the Act contemplates a like recommendation on your part as to what in your judgment is necessary to be raised for road purposes. If this view is correct, a brief resume of the results had, by the disposition you have made of the Road Fund raised for the year 1886, may enable you to better determine the sum or sums you will recommend to be raised for the coming year. Before authorizing any work whatever, you directed your Committee on Streets, etc., to make an examination of the streets, roads, etc., of the borough and report with recommendations. This examination was made by the full Committee and they were unanimous in the opinion that if dirt roads were to continue as the accepted road, or, if stone were to be used, the surface drainage of the streets was a matter of first importance. For it is the rule (and not the exception) that the streets as at present graded will not carry off properly the rain fall. Although anxious to accomplish as much as possible in the way of improvement, as the limited means at your disposal would permit, you very wisely we think, made a contract with Mr. F. A. Dunham for a complete set of grade maps. These grades when adopted, we hope, will secure to the borough.

First—As near as may be perfect surface drainage, with the least disturbance of existing road-beds, when the streets are worked in accordance [illegible]

[illegible]

If we may be permitted to revert again to the work of the past year, partly for the purpose of continuing our suggestions, we recommend that the stone walls on the south side of Green Brook road from Grove street to the brook be covered with either plank or flagging.

This was a work of importance and permanent in its character. This roadbed is now safe from inundation and will cease to be a source of continual expense.

The total expense of this work did not fall on the borough. It was met in part by the adjoining owner and the Chosen Freeholders.

Grandview avenue contained a slough several hundred feet in length. It was not possible to correct this in one season, for it was absolutely impassable. But much was done to lessen the evil and with some little attention this season a fairly good road at this point may be had. If neglected, however, what has been accomplished may go for naught.

And in closing permit us to express the hope that whatever consideration you may accord the suggestions herein contained, you will not lose sight of the fact that you are charged with the care of over twenty miles of streets and roads, on many of which no repairs have been made since they were opened. It is true some of these are not so called county roads, yet they require and should receive their proper share of attention.

Convinced (as we are) that road appropriations so small in amount as to render permanent work impossible is false economy, we ask for this your favorable consideration, that the responsibility may rest where it properly belongs.

Respectfully submitted,
To Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, Feb 1st, 1887.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. OH, for a paid fire department!

TWO children of John Naylor, a lamplighter of this city, living near the Short Hills, died of scarlet fever, yesterday.

THE Rev. John S. DeWitt, of New Brunswick, will preach at the Trinity Reformed Church on Sunday morning and evening, 27th inst.

EDSALL has a new and interesting announcement in another column pertaining to new Spring styles in wash and all-wool dress fabrics, kid gloves, etc.

IT is impossible to reconcile the facts that liquor licenses are not granted and that as many drunkards as ever are seen on our streets. On Sunday's recently are more exhibitions of intoxication than ever. 'Tis the fate of most prohibition places.

PROFESSOR HOLMES will lecture at Y. M. C. A. Hall, on Thursday the 24th at 8 p. m., on "The Norman Kings" beginning with "William the Conqueror." Ladies are cordially invited, and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance. Admission will be free.

LENT has begun and the season of denial is upon us. Some religiously give up one thing and some another. We hear of young ladies surrendering all kinds of luxuries from Huyler's candies to bustles; and one that with intense penitence thinks of giving up her Sunday school class.

WE have just received Vol. 1., No. 1. of The Royal Craftsman, a journal devoted entirely to the interests of the masonic fraternity. It is dated from this city and edited by our popular City Judge, John Ulrich, P. M. It is a model of typographic art, and most interesting in a literary way.

As ludicrous as most statements from the same source and as false as many, is the assertion that the Hotel Netherwood will not open the coming season if liquor licenses are not granted. The Hotel will be opened for the comfort of its guests and not as a saloon. So the refusal of licenses will not affect it.

THE elegant silver-mounted uniforms of the Crescent Division, uniform rank, Knights of Pythias of this city, arrived Monday. The members look handsomer than ever dressed up in their aristocratic regalia; so we trust they will soon present themselves in marching order on the street, and give the girls a treat.

THE residents in the vicinity of Fifth and Division streets have subscribed the necessary amount towards erecting and lighting an electric lamp at that corner, and one soon will be burning. The residents in the vicinity of Fifth and Park avenue would gladly subscribe likewise if the same success would result, and bring a light on that corner.

HAVING disposed of his music and sporting goods business at No. 33 Park avenue, Mr. Andrew Vanderbeek is now devoting his entire attention to the renting and sale of first-class pianos an organs. At his office in the Chautauqua Building, next to Reynolds' Pharmacy, he has some very desirable instruments in stock, and will furnish any special makes at the lowest cash prices or on instalments.

THOSE who advocate prohibition and rejoice over the refusal of licenses, encourage free rum—merely that and nothing more. The festive growler may be seen carried through our streets continually during day and evening, with the froth of the beer flowing over its edge. Why do not these intemperate temperance members of prohibition societies that are merely the means used by their leaders to play at politics, join with the truly temperate whose plan of license restricts the sale.

A NOTICE is given elsewhere by the Electric Light Co., to the effect that certain lights in North Plainfield on which nothing has been paid since started up in December, will be discontinued after Tuesday next, March 1st. It will be a shame if just a few of the many benefited by these lights and the value of whose property is enhanced, do not send their names at once to the Company, and by guaranteeing the payment of the small monthly cost of the lights, continue their service.

THE Bazaar of the Cyclers at the Plainfield Bicycle Club House, was the greatest of the Club's successes. The lady friends, old and young, of the members sent hundreds of useful and ornamental articles of value and beauty, that were disposed of during Monday and Tuesday. The net financial result will probably reach about $500, which success is due largely to the efforts and assistance of the ladies. The Bi's will now undoubtedly arrange some way of tendering their sentiments of appreciation to all who helped them.

DURING last Summer, for the purpose of frightening owners of dogs into muzzling their animals, a proclamation was issued to the effect that dogs running at large without a muzzle would be shot. This was what the boys call a "big bluff", but an unsuspicious special police officer did not so understand it and shot one of the animals designated as condemned. He was sued by its owner and fined $14 by an intelligent jury, but appealed the case. This appeal resulted on Monday before Judge McCormick at Elizabeth and another jury, in a verdict against the officer for $100 and costs.

THOSE who have made an effort to secure the consent of property owners along the proposed route of a street railroad, have met with the most unexpected success. The necessary majority has been secured in all cases, and only the granting by the Council of the franchise is now needed. It is thus shown that the people are willing and anxious, but we do not believe that they would favor the granting of the franchise to outside speculators when such well-known citizens and tax payers as Messrs. J. Wesley Johnson, F. T. Lerned and ex-Councilman Karl T. Polak stand ready to build, equip and maintain the road.

"MIKADO" and "Girofle-Girofla" were given at Music Hall, Tuesday afternoon and evening, by as good a company as Mr. John Templeton could engage at short notice among professionals out of a situation. None of those who appeared here before were present with the exception of "Lucille Meredith," yet only in the chorus work was this to be regretted. Miss Baker as "Katisha" was the best of the batch, and Mr. Armand as "Nanki-Poo" and "Marasquin" gave entire satisfaction. Miss Meredith sang as true as ever, and as shrill. Mr. Chapman as "Ko-Ko" and "Bolero" proved himself as clever an actor as we have ever seen in these parts. He is really a pleasing comedian. The choruses did not lack voice so much as they lacked rehearsing, and they were seldom with one another nor with the orchestra.

OH, for a street railway!

AN informal meeting of North Plainfield Democrats will be held in the basement of the School House, Friday, February 25th, at 8 p. m. All Democrats are invited without further notice.

THE tax case against the Fire Department that was to have been argued before the Supreme Court at Trenton, Wednesday, went over to the next term at the request of Attorney General Stockton for the defense.

THE Young People's Society, of the Trinity Reformed Church, have secured Rev. R S. Holmes to lead the meeting for the study of the bible lesson, in the lecture room of the church, to-night (Friday), at 8 o'clock. All are welcome.

WE learn that the system of electric street railway that the petitioners before the last Council meeting propose to construct in this city, is the same as is now in successful operation in Scranton, Pa., Port Huron, Mich., Appleton, Wis., Windsor, Ont., Detroit, Mich., Montgomery. Ala., Minneapolis, Minn., and other places. The company, it is asserted, has more miles of electric railway now in continuous daily use than all the other electric railways in the World combined.

BY reference to our advertising columns it will be noticed that Messrs. N. B. and A. I. Smalley have formed a copartnership under the firm name of Smalley Bros., and propose carrying on the butcher business at the old stand, No. 78 Somerset street. The reputation of the gentlemen composing the new firm is such as will insure patrons getting first-class meat at market prices. They have recently enlarged and renovated the premises, and they present a clean, tidy appearance. Give the young men a call.

WE publish elsewhere at the request of a number of our many subscribers over-the-brook, the second annual report of the receipts and disbursements of the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield for the year just ending. We need make no comment on it—it speaks for itself. It our neighbors will have the luxuries they must pay for them—Johnston Drive, Somerset Street macadamizing, and a Borough Government are three such which they have lived to regret. We don't expect the North Plainfielders will vote $5,000 more for the purpose of the latter.

Warren Union Mission.

The Sunday evening services at the Warren Union Mission have been largely attended and full of interest for some time past; so much so that extra Gospel services are to be held in the Chapel, commencing next Sunday and continuing through the week, excepting Wednesday evening. One of the attractive features of the meeting will be a large choir in addition to the Dunham Choristers, under the direction of M. M. Dunham. The Rev. Mr. Bridge will have charge of the devotional exercises next Sunday evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Bring your Gospel Choirs with you.

Reform Club.

Notwithstanding the unpleasant state of the weather, a large and interested audience met within Reform Hall, Sunday night last. President French being absent on a visit to Monmouth, Vice-President Harper occupied his chair. The first of music was rendered by Mr Vanderbeek and his well drilled choir, with Miss Alice Smith as organist. Professor Holmes conducted the devotional services and afterwards delivered an address replete with sound argument and undeniable truths. He closely criticised the Crosby crowd who pretending to be friends of temperance, advocate high license and refuse themselves, because they can afford the luxury, to abstain from private liquor drinking. The Professor had no words of eulogy for gentlemen of that stripe. The meeting closed with the benediction from Rev. Mr. Honeyman.

Electric Light Notes.

The wiring of the Crescent avenue church is about completed and the church will be lighted on Mr. Wright's return from Pittsburg.

Mr. Wright, of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, goes to Pittsburg to order material and machinery for a large extension of the company's works on Madison avenue.

There are a few lights on Somerset and Duer streets for which the subscription lists have not been filled and for which the Plainfield Electric Light Company have received no payment from the time, Dec. 15th, when they were started regularly. Mr. Wright informs us that while he is averse to doing so he will be compelled in the interests of his company to discontinue these lights after this month. We feel sure that there are enough enterprising citizens in the Borough who will follow the example of those who are now so liberally maintaining the other lights.

Sudden Death of William Cory, Esq.

Mr. William Cory, son-in-law of the late Stephen O. Horton, died suddenly on Saturday, Feb. 19, 1887, of enlargement of the heart at his residence on Somerset street, North Plainfield. Mr. Cory went to Arizona when but nineteen years old. It was at that time a frontier country and the deceased was present during the severest of the Indian troubles. Mr. Cory held many offices of public trust for fourteen years successively, besides attending to the business in which he was engaged. After his marriage with the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Horton, he settled his business as speedily as practicable and returned to Plainfield, the home of his childhood, intending to make it his permanent residence. By his kind and genial manners deceased has acquired hosts of friends and admirers who will sadly miss him and deeply sympathize with his afflicted wife and relatives in their sudden bereavement. The funeral on Tuesday afternoon last was largely attended and the services were conducted by Rev's. Richards and Honeyman. The remains were laid by those of his relatives in the Presbyterian cemetery, North Plainfield.

Reform Club Anniversary.

Reform Hall never presented a more attractive appearance than on last Tuesday evening, February 22d, it being elaborately and most tastefully decorated in honor of a double anniversary—the birth of the illustrious Washington, and the birth of the Reform Club of Plainfield. The occasion drew together a very large and enthusiastic concourse of people. President French presided with his usual dignity and felt exceedingly happy, as did all the members and friends of the club. Owing to the number of designated speakers it was necessary to limit each one to not over five minutes, which rule was faithfully obeyed. Those who made short addresses were Mrs. Dr. Tomlinson and Mrs. Coard on behalf of the W. C. T. U., Reverend Messrs. Yerkes, Hurlbut, Honeyman, Rodman, Richards, Lewis, Holmes and Bridge and Judge Harper, Geo. W. F. Randolph, Lot Marshall and President John H. French. Such remarks of course varied widely, some grave and some gay, but they all referred to one grand object—the triumph of the cause so earnestly advocated and upheld by the Reform Club. Another marked feature of the occasion and which drew forth warm applause, was the musical; in addition to Mr. Vanderbeek's most excellent regular choir, the talented services of Mrs. and Master Felsinger, of New York, and Miss Carrie Dewey and Mr. Corydon Tyler, Jr., of Plainfield, making it in effect a first-class concert. It is always proper to give credit to whom credit is due, and therefore right to say, that the beautiful decorations of the hall were the artistic work of the lady members of the choir, assisted by Mrs. Lindsay and Mrs. Smith, and Messrs. Spencer, Liebsinger and Beuerlache. At a late hour the exercises closed by the choir singing "America."

"Grab 'Em Quick!"

The sale of seats will begin to-morrow for "A Rag Baby," at Music Hall, Thursday evening of next week. We would recommend it to all who want to enjoy a good big laugh. The Daily of San Francisco a few weeks ago said of it and the same company that appears here: "The bundle of absurdities and pot-pourri of song, entitled 'A Rag Baby,' drew out everybody and his neighbor, last night. It has a rapid, rattling 2.40 gait, effervescing with fun of a healthy kind, like the soda drawn from its own fountain. Its allusions are aimed high, and carry heavy charges to make the satirical shots at the drug business count, but they bring the laughs, aided by comical situations and funny doings. 'A Rag Baby' baffles description; it must be seen to be enjoyed. The house is nearly sold for this evening, seats are going fast, and you 'must grab 'em quick.'"

Union County Court of Common Pleas.

Before presiding Judge McCormick and Associate Judges Hyer and Harper. The first case tried on Monday last was that of Michael Burke vs. Randolph Marsh. This was an appeal taken by Mr. Marsh from the judgment of Levi Hetfield and a jury for $14 damages for killing a dog. The result was a verdict in favor of Mr. Burke for $100 damages and costs. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh and ex-Judge Suydam were counsel for Mr. Marsh. Wm. R. Codington represented Mr. Burke.

The second case was that of Peter Katzenbach, proprietor of Trenton House, vs. ex-Assemblyman John Vetterlein, and was an appeal taken by Mr. Vetterlein from judgment of Louis F. Wadsworth and a jury for $92.50 for a board bill. The result was a reversal of the judgment below and a verdict in favor of Mr. Vetterlein, of no cause of action. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh and Mr. Walker, of Trenton, were counsel for Mr. Katzenbach, Wm. R. Codington represented Mr. Vetterlein.

Proceedings to reverse both these judgments, will be instituted forthwith.

The Congregational Church Concert.

Vocally, the Congregational Church Concert, Thursday evening of last week, has never been excelled in this city. Instrumentally, it was not a success. The sweet toned organ whose recent birth was to be honored by the occasion, deserved more skillful manipulation than it received from Mr. Frederick Preston, that its possibilities of brilliant and charming effects, and its capabilities of power and expression, might be brought forth. The "William Tell" overture that opened the programme was carelessly executed. Batiste's "Grand offertoire de Cecilia" was neither smoothly nor artistically played, and the lack of contrast in its light and heavier parts, produced but tame effect. The Haydn and Handel selections were rendered in a manner not remarkable in one way or another, but Mr. Preston's own gavotte was as like and as pretty as other's gavottes, and, as also an "Andante in F," was well played.

Of the rest of the programme naught but in praise can be said. Mme. Lasar-Studwell's first contribution to the evening's enjoyment and success was "Hear ye, Israel," from Mendelssohn's "Elijah"—a grand solo, perfectly and beautifully sung. Although loudly accorded an encore, she only responded with a bow. Her second selection was "Christ the Pilgrim," by Blumenthal, which she rendered exquisitely, but upon a recall the "Lost Chord" was injudiciously offered, and showed a lack of that roundness so requisite in the lower tones. The accompaniments of Mr. David Lyon, the organist of the First Baptist church, were particularly satisfactory. The Dudley Buck Quartette is not excelled in most of its ways, and added fresh laurels to its wreaths, upon this occasion. Its singing of its patron's composition, "Twilight," was a work of the closest harmony and most delicate shading ever listened to. Every selection presented was enthusiastically encored, but when "Once Again" was given in answer to one of these recalls, the quartette should have been struck down in its tracks.

About three hundred were present and the profit to the church will reach almost that figure in dollars, as about the entire expense of the affair was contributed by certain generous ones of the congregation.

An Excise Board in Plainfield.

MESSRS EDITORS:—As the everlasting liquor license question is continuously agitating our Common Council, and influencing our municipal elections at the expense of more important questions, it seems to me that it would be wise of the Common Council of Plainfield, if it would establish an Excise Board, as authorized by a law passed last June, chapter CCLXXI, (page 397 P. L.) Said Board of five members would be elected by the people, and would virtually give us local option. Please publish the law. M.

Below is the law our correspondent refers to, but if he will read it carefully he will see that the existence of such a Board is entirely at the will of the Council. Even should the people elect a license Excise Board, a temperance Council could repeal the ordinance creating it, or vice versa. The Council would control the question, as it does now, at all times. Therefore what is the use of a salaried Board of figure heads?

CHAPTER CCLXXI.

An Act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish an excise department in cities of this state," passed April eighth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section one of the act to which this is an amendment be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

[1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in all cities of this state it shall and may be lawful for the common council or other governing board of said city to pass, enforce, alter and repeal ordinances to take effect within said city for the following purposes, to wit: to provide for the establishment of a board of excise commissioners, to consist of five members, to serve for the term of three years, no more than three of whom shall belong to the same political party, which board shall be elected on a general ticket at the charter election in such city next after the passage of such ordinance, in the same manner as other officers in said city are elected; provided, however, that no voter shall vote at such election for more than three of said commissioners, and the five persons receiving the highest number of votes for such office shall be declared duly elected; that the salary of said commissioners shall be fixed by ordinance, but shall not exceed the sum of three hundred dollars each per year, and the said salary shall be paid out of the license fees; that upon board of excise commissioners shall have the sole power within such city to make, establish, amend or repeal ordinances and by-laws to license and regulate or prohibit inns and taverns, restaurants and beer saloons, and when licensed to revoke or transfer such license, and to prohibit all traffic in or sale of intoxicating drink or drinks, to license, regulate or prohibit billiard saloons and bowling alleys, and to prescribe and enforce a penalty or penalties, either by fine or imprisonment, for the violation of such ordinances or by-laws, which said penalties shall be enforced and collected by said board of excise commissioners in the same manner as any other penalties are enforced and collected in any such city, and that every ordinance or by-law of such board of excise commissioners shall, after its introduction and before its final passage, be published for four insertions in two newspapers, if so many there be published and circulating in such city, and be concurred in by at least three members of such board of excise commissioners as may be present at its final passage; and no other license for such purposes within said city, granted by any other authority shall be lawful; that all fees for licenses granted by said commissioners shall be paid to the city clerk, who shall, in addition to his other duties, act as the clerk of said commissioners, and by him be paid over to the city treasurer.]

SPORT AMONG THE SHOOTERS.

The First Annual Tournament of the Middlesex Gun Club a Grand Success. Big Shooters Attend and Participate. Splendid Marksmanship. Attendance Large and Everyone Satisfied.

Although the organization known as the "Middlesex Gun Club" is barely over a year old, it has become a household word, in one sense, among the sporting fraternity. Officered by prominent men, and well-known lovers of trap shooting, the "Middlesex" boys have earned a reputation second to none among sporting men, for their efforts to provide a pleasing and honest entertainment. On Monday last commenced the first day's shooting in the First Annual Tournament of this popular club, which is to last until Saturday.

There were fifteen contestants in the initial event of the day's programme, the terms of the contest being twenty single clay pigeons each, limited to ten-bore guns, entrance fee $5 and the birds. Messrs. Stice, Swater and Wagner tied at nineteen birds each and divided first money, amounting to $30. Second money amounting to $22.50, was divided by Messrs. Stark, Allen and Luther, who tied at eighteen birds each. Messrs. Brewer and Dickey, having tied at seventeen birds each, divided third money, amounting to $15, and Mr. M. C. Smith won fourth money, amounting to $7.50, with a score of sixteen killed. The following is the score:

In the second event, the terms of which were ten pairs of clay pigeons each, entrance fee $5 and the birds, twenty-one yards rise and limited to ten-bore guns, there were fifteen entries. Mr. Smith captured first money, $30, by scoring 18 killed, a feat of marksmanship rarely excelled. Messrs. Stark and White tied at 16 each and divided second money, $22.50. Third money, amounting to $15. was divided by Messrs. Swater, Jones and Luther, who tied at 15 each, and fourth money, $7.50, was halved by Messrs. Budd and Dickey, who tied at 14 birds each. The third event developed a fine exhibition of marksmanship and the ties for the first and second moneys were hotly contested, the match lasting until it was too late to permit the entries to compete in the other events scheduled on the programme. The terms of the contest were: Ten live birds each, handicap rise for guns, Hurlingham rules, thirty-five yards boundary, and entrance fee, $10 and the birds. Of the twenty-two competitors ten killed ten birds straight and for first money, and shot off the ties at miss-and-out. Six killed nine out of their ten birds and also shot off the ties for second money. With scores of eight birds each, Messrs. Kleinz, Hudson and Complete divided $44, third money, while Messrs. Heft, Bowert and Manitz divided fourth money, $22, with tied scores of seven birds each. The scores are given below:

On Tuesday, the grand event of the tournament, the open sweepstakes to the world, for $100 entrance fee and the birds, brought together a large attendance of the best pigeon shooters of the country, representing such men as Graham, of England, Maddock, of Chicago, Brewer, of Camden, N. J., Eley, of Allentown, Penn., Stark, of Winchester, Mass., Budd, of Des Moines, Iowa, Sampson, of Trenton, N. J., Wadsworth, of Chicago, Kleinz, of Philadelphia, Will. Haines, of Newark, N. J., Davis, of Greenville, N. J., Stice, of Jacksonville, Ill. Fifteen of the best pigeon shooters in the land entered the match. The only drawback was the inclement state of the weather, it being stormy when the match commenced in the morning, although the sun came out and the weather cleared up in the afternoon. The attendance was very fair, some 200 persons being present to witness this contest of giants at trap shooting. Below is the score.

Scorer—W. I. Ritch, of the Middlesex Gun Club.

The third day of the tournament opened well on Wednesday morning in the presence of 200 people. The first event was the postponed match at fifteen single clay pigeons. A dozen crack crack shots entered, the fee being $5 and the birds. Budd, the Western champion, captured $24, first money; Stark, of Massachusetts, and Dickey halved second money, $18; Hudson won $12 and Smith took fourth money, $6. Nine competitors then shot off another postponed event—ten single and five pairs of clay pigeons, with an entrance fee of $5. Wagner won first money, $22.50; Stark, $13.50, and Budd, $9.

The next was a match at twenty single clay pigeons, the entrance fee being $5. About twenty contestants participated, and first money was divided by Messrs. Stice the rifle-shot from Jacksonville, Ill., Davis and Allen, who tied and did not care to shoot off the tie. Messrs. Dickey, Wagner and Strater tied with the next highest score and divided second money. Budd took third money.

In the next event, a match at ten live pigeons, there were two dozen entries. The conditions of the match called for an entrance fee of $10, Hurlingham rules. Messrs. Budd; Graham, the English champion; Brewer, the Camden expert; Eley, of Pennsylvania, and Swater tied with ten straight kills. The five divided first money, $96. Others shot off ties for second and third money.

The twenty-two contestants of the next event, a match for five pairs of live birds shot in squads. The terms of the match called for a handicap rise, the shooting off of ties at miss and out, and an entrance fee of $10. Messrs. Budd and Lever led with a clean score of killed and divided first money, $86. Messrs. Eley, Heft, Graham and White only missed one bird each and quartered $66. Others shot off ties. The final event was a sweepstakes match at ten pairs of clay birds, in which there were only ten competitors. First money, $40, was won by Dickey. Messrs. Stice, Stark and W. L. Davis divided $24, second money, and Messrs. Brewer and Wagner halved third money, $16.

The Committee on Tournament, Messrs. E. H. Robinson, F. R. Stevens, W. Fred Quimby, Seymour G. Smith and W. I. Ritch, deserve great credit for their excellent work in arranging all the details of this, to sportsmen and spectators a week of interest and pleasure. It has been no child play work for them. Especially to the President of the club, Mr. E. H. Robinson, is praise due for the success attending the tournament, both financially and in the matter of enjoyment to those interested. "Emery" is a hard worker and a faithful one, too, in anything he undertakes.

Mr. G. W. Watson kindly assisted in the success of the tournament, by acting as Treasurer, a position which required not only patience but financial ability.

The writer of this also "desires to say" that the gentleman filling the position of General Manager, Mr. Fred. Quimby, just filled the bill to a nicety. His efforts toward the success of the tournament is highly appreciated by the club and those interested. Mr. Quimby is a thorough sportsman and gentleman. Mr. W. I. Ritch satisfactorily acted as official scorer during the progress of the tournament. Mr. Chas. Smith, of this city catered to the hungry in a most satisfactory manner, in his commodious quarters under the grand stand. Under the management of Mrs. S. there was no lack of good and substantial eatables.

The clay pigeon traps were under the management of Mr. Kickwood, of Boston, Mass., Secretary of the Boston Gun Club, and a gentleman who thoroughly understood his business. He assisted materially in making the "crockery breakers" feel at home.

In the live pigeon sweeps of Wednesday the grand retriever dog, "Duke" owned by Mr. Ali Heritage, better known among sporting men, as "Old South Paw," of the Jersey City Heights Gun Club, did fine work in bringing in dead birds.

At the close of Wednesday's shooting a contest was arranged between Mr. Graham, the English champion and Mr. Brewer, of Phila., Pa., to shoot at live birds. Two matches were arranged. The first one to be shot at the Jersey City Heights Gun Club grounds, March 17th; the next one at Suffolk Park, Phila., Pa., on March 24th. Conditions of match, $250 a side, 100 live pigeons, Hurlingham rules.

Argument of the Fire Tax Case Postponed.

Wednesday was the day fixed for argument in the Supreme Court of the case of Taylor pros., vs Plainfield Fire Department. Both sides were represented in Court, the prosecutrix by Craig A. Marsh, and the defendants by Attorney-General Stockton, Geo. P. Suydam, William M. Stillman and Wm. Johnson. The Attorney-General stated that the case was of great importance involving the validity of municipal bonds, and presenting many questions of law of great delicacy and nicety. The Court had required prosecutrix to bring on the argument at the present term, and the case had been printed, but there had not been sufficient time for the defendant's counsel to prepare for the argument. He therefore asked that the argument be postponed until next term of Court. Mr. Marsh stated that he was ready and urged that instead of putting the case off for the term, a day be fixed for argument during the present term, if that would give opposing counsel time enough to prepare their briefs. One question he claimed was whether fire taxes should be assessed by the city or by the Fire Department, and delay would embarrass both, and seriously interfere with the collection of taxes. The Attorney-General claimed that the defense represented the only corporation in the case. Mr. Marsh replied that nominally that was so, but the question was raised. The Court asked when the taxes were assessed and counsel gave the information with respect to fire taxes and city taxes. After consultation, the Court stated that nothing would be gained by fixing a later day in this term, and therefore the case might go off for the term.

THERE has been a epidemic of measles in this city and North Plainfield.

The funeral on Monday at the First Baptist church, was largely attended. The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, assisted by the Rev. Wm. R. Richards, officiated. The pall-bearers were Messrs. J. B. VanDeventer, D. F. Randolph, Andrew Vanderbeek, R. MacDonald, W. B. Stewart, Jacob Long.

Despite the severe storm of thunder, lightning and rain that swept over the city, Friday evening of last week, a large part of the many score favored with invitations to the Dickens Party at the Goddard residence on Ninth street, was present on that occasion. The guests were received graciously, provided for bountifully, entertained novelly, gratified thoroughly, and enjoyed themselves consequently. It was one of the few entirely successful of such attempts.

Analyzing the Baking Powders.

"Royal," only, found free from lime, alum, and phosphatic acid, and absolutely pure.

Under the direction of the New York State Board of Health, eighty-four different kinds of baking powders, embracing all the brands that could be found for sale in the State, were submitted to examination and analysis by Prof. C. F. CHANDLER, a member of the State Board and President of the New York City Board of Health, assisted by Prof. EDWARD G. LOVE, the well-known United States Government chemist.

The official report shows that a large number of the powders examined were found to contain alum or lime; many of them to such an extent as to render them seriously objectionable for use in the preparation of human food.

Alum was found in twenty-nine samples. This drug is employed in baking powders to cheapen their cost. The presence of lime is attributed to the impure cream of tartar of commerce used in their manufacture. Such cream of tartar was also analyzed and found to contain lime and other impurities, in some samples to the extent of 93 per cent of their entire weight.

All the baking powders of the market, with the single exception of "Royal" (not including the alum and phosphate powders, which were long since discarded as unsafe or inefficient by prudent housekeepers), are made from the impure cream of tartar of commerce, and consequently contain lime to a corresponding extent.

The only baking powder yet found by chemical analysis to be entirely free from lime and absolutely pure is the "Royal." This perfect purity results from the exclusive use of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes, which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder but the "Royal."

Prof. LOVE, who made the analyses of baking powders for the New York State Board of Health, as well as for the Government, says of the purity and wholesomeness of "Royal":

"I have tested a package of 'Royal Baking Powder' which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates or any injurious substances.

"E. G. LOVE, Ph.D."

MISCELLANEOUS READING

ONLY A WOMAN'S HEART.

She was only a fair young creature, slender and sun-browned, with hazel eyes, and hair just of that burnished tint which Raphael loved.

He was a pale-faced youth, with haughty lips and calm azure eyes, in the steadfast gaze of which one read pride and strong ambition; a handsome youth, a trifle selfish, too lordly in bearing for all to like him, although heir to great wealth.

The rector of a small country district, Mr. Lane, finding his income too small, took occasionally a youth whom he prepared for college; and that is how these two met—the rector's daughter and the heir of the Eldens.

In the autumn he left the rectory, but not without having wakened the young heart of Elsinore Lane, and taught it the lesson of a first idolatrous love.

"You will be true to me, sweetheart?" he whispered, as they were parting. "I will come back for you some day."

"I will be true," she faltered, her sweet face white as death. "Whenever you come you will find me waiting."

"I know it, my dearest; and you will not doubt me? You will know that, once my own master, I will hasten here to claim your promise?"

"I well know it," she said. "Should I think otherwise for an hour, I would die. You will not forget—you will love me always best?"

"Best and only!" was his answer.

And then, with clinging embraces and sincerest regret on both sides, they parted.

She heard from him regularly for a year. His long, tender letters were life to her for one long year of hope; then suddenly they grew brief and infrequent, and at last came no more; and the sun of her existence shone for Elsinore Lane no longer.

Six months later her father died and she was alone, but her father's friend obtained for her a governess position in a distant city.

Young as she was, she had been carefully taught, and her employers were delighted with her. The little children given to her care learned to love her fondly; besides the little creatures who were taught by her, there was a fair daughter of the house—a beautiful, stately, blue-eyed girl, sweet and pure as day-dawn—and her name was Beatrice Arden.

She was betrothed, but her lover was not to claim her for a year; and while that year passed, the governess never saw him, nor was his name spoken in her presence; "Trixy's lover," the children always called him. Once, when he spent a month with the Ardens, Elsinore and the little ones were away at a farm-house among the hills, where they had been sent. Mrs. Arden and Beatrice went to stop some weeks beside a picturesque lake, and the party which they joined there was "Trixy's lover."

In the autumn preparations were made for the bridal, which would take place in November.

"I am so happy!" Beatrice said once to Elsinore. "I do not think there is a happier girl in the whole world than I. You shall see my prince, Miss Lane, and then you will not wonder that I have made an idol of him. He is so true and noble! I know that in his whole life he has spoken no single false word, cared for no one but me, and my heart is almost heavy with its weight of joy."

And Elsinore bent her face to hide the bitter drops that sprang to her eyes, while a prayer arose from her heart to Heaven that Beatrice Arden might keep her lover and faith—not lose them from her life, as she had lost hers.

Then came the night of the bridal. "Trixy's lover" had come for his bride, and Beatrice, with a new solemnity on her beautiful face, a new steadfastness in her blue eyes, surveyed her white-robed loveliness in a mirror.

"Will I ever be less happy, do you think?" she asked Elsinore. "Will my lover ever cease to love me—ever wish he had not made me his wife? Somehow, although my trust in him is absolute, to-night I have a presentiment of evil—a feeling as though my happiness was passing from me. Can you explain it?"

"You are nervous," smiled Elsinore. "Try to remember nothing but the fact that your lover is waiting for you—waiting to call you his wife! May God avert all evil from your future, my dear child!"

"Ah, you are kind!" and the bride bent and kissed her. "But how pale you are! Are you ill, Miss Lane?"

"I have a sharp pain in my side. It is nothing; I have had it occasionally for years. Ah, they want you, and you are quite ready. Go to your lover—go to love and happiness."

And Beatrice went—to love and happiness, leaving Elsinore, who dropped upon her knees at the bedside to pray and sob out the intense grief that pierced her heart.

Then she was sent for in the parlor. Still white from the pain she was enduring, with a wistful protest in her soft dark eyes, she obeyed the summons.

Then the ceremony commenced, and at the first pause when a man's "I will!" rang out clearly through the silence, a low cry left her lips, and her eyes flew open and fixed themselves upon the bridal party. There was Beatrice, with delicate downcast face; there was the clergyman saying the solemn words that were to bind two for a lifetime; and there, with the light glancing from the gold of his hair, and showing the calmness of lip and eye—there, linking his life to another's for all time, stood Gerald Elden.

The old love, the old memories, the vows he had spoken to her, the dream which they had dreamed, but only she remembered, crushed heavily on the heart of Elsinore; the lights about her swayed and dimmed; the haughty faces became blurred, and finally faded; she saw but one in that assemblage, and that one had said to her:

"You will not doubt me? You will know, once my own master, I will hasten here to claim your promise?"

Ah, how keen the lance was that went through her heart! How her face whitened and her pulses numbed and slackened under the pain! A low, moaning sob burst from her, but no one paid any heed; her knotted hands flew to her bosom, and were pressed there convulsively; but no one saw.

Beatrice Arden no more, but Beatrice Elden, the bride. At last, with a kindly remembrance of the governess, she crossed the great room and paused before the slight drooping figure in the great chair.

"Why, have you no good wishes for me, Miss Lane?" she asked cheerfully. "Everybody else has said something kind; will not you?"

But Elsinore, ever ready in the past with kindly gentle words, neither lifted her head nor answered.

"Are you ill? Is that pain troubling you still?" asked Beatrice softly, bending to look in the drooping face, her own pitiful.

The next moment a cry of alarm sprang from her lips, so sharp and shrill that it brought Gerald instantly to her side.

"What is it, love?" he questioned anxiously.

She pointed a shaking finger at Elsinore.

"She has fainted, or—or is dead!" she cried. "Look at her face. I am afraid, Gerald—afraid—"

He was turning the white, still face upward, and regarding its rigid young beauty with growing horror—was, perhaps, remembering the many times his lips had touched the softness of that cold cheek, the tender curves of those drawn blue lips.

It was well that other hands put him aside, and in the excitement his emotion passed unnoticed; well for him that the girl who had given her life into his hands in that hour never dreamed what he had seen in the face of the dead governess. For she was dead—she who had said to him, "Whenever you come, you will find me waiting!"

Heart disease, the men of science called it; some valve had closed; some tissue given away.

Gerald Elden did not listen. He only knew that, as he breathed his vows there, the girl he had taught to love him had died. Will that face of death haunt him through life?

Some United States Senators are superstitious about sitting in the draped chair of a deceased member. The other day Senator Dawes, while standing near Senator Logan's draped chair, beckoned to Senator Allison, and when Allison got to his side dropped into the seat, as if preparing for a conversation. Allison, whose face was toward the black-covered chair, uttered an exclamation and grasped Dawes quickly by the arm, thus checking his descent into the chair.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.—To Alice S. Brown, Bertha Gilbert, Alice Gilbert, Henry A. Elliott and Mrs. Henry A. Elliott.

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause therein pending, wherein Daniel J. Marshall is complainant, and you are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant, on or before the Eleventh day of March next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you. CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y

By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.

ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLEEPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown. A short desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points.

All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly attention.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

Poetry.

LET HER SLIDE.

I love her with an ardor
That naught on earth can tame—
The outburst of my passion
Is like old Etna's flame;
In short I quite adore her,
She's dearer far than life—
So keenly pulse the love throbs
That in my heart are rife;
And yet, this eve I take her—
My sweet, my pet, my pride!
Amid the swift toboggans,
And there—I'll let her slide!

FUNNY SIGHTS.

I saw a cow-hide in the grass,
A rush-light on the floor;
I saw a candle-stick in mud,
And a bell-pull at a door,
I saw a horse-fly up a creek,
A cat-nip at her food;
I saw a chestnut-burr and heard
A shell-bark in the wood.
I saw a jack-plane off a board,
A car-spring off the track;
I saw a saw-dust off the floor,
And then a carpet-tack.
I saw a monkey-wrench a hat,
From a fair lady's pate.
I saw a rattle-snake a bird,
An hogs head on a plate.
I saw a brandy-smash a glass,
I saw a shooting-star.
I heard the corn-stalk in the field,
And pig iron crow bar.
I saw a pin-wheel on a post,
And a wheel-wright in a shop;
I saw a gin-sling on a bar,
I saw a ginger-pop.
I saw a horse-fly o'er a field,
I saw an ox-roast too;
I saw a shad-row and clam bake,
And saw a chicken-stew;
I saw a sword-fish from a beak;
I heard the waters-pout.
I saw tobacco-spit, and then
I heard an eye-ball out.
I heard a fence-rail at the din,
I heard a waist-band play
A lovely strain—a sweet spit-toon—
And then I went away.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

BILL NYE'S VERDICT.

"With this number the time seems to have fully arrived at which to cease the publication of this paper. Many of our subscribers will not even get this issue. To be brief about it, we were not permitted to remove our print paper from the Adams Express office this week, although we have never, in these columns, said aught against Mr. Adams or his justly celebrated express. We have paid many a dollar into the C. O. D. department of this man's express company. Before we came West our physician told us we could not live without cod liver oil, and, indeed, he was right, for have we not been a C. O. D. liver oil the time since we started this paper?

"This last remark is offered as a gratuitous insult to every unpaid subscriber. Paid up subscribers may omit it. Or we will go to them personally and apologize.

"But let us seriously review the past two years' history of the World. What have we not done to aid and encourage our infant industries and advance the flagging commerce of Buffalo Wallow?

"Let our files show whether we have done what we say or not. Let reluctant capital read over our pages, covering the past, and answer if what we now state be not accurate.

"Have we not, at the instigation of leading citizens here boomed the condition of trade, when traffic was dead and currency nothing but a hollow memory?

"Have we not through the columns of the World asked that a bank be at once established here, when, as a matter of fact, for a year the postoffice here has had to sell stamps and take the pay out of the store?

"Have we not been gay and frolicsome in these columns that the world at large might not tumble to the woe within us? Have we not joked and punned and frolicked in print, when the shrill north wind was whispering abroad with his icy breath, 'he hath no underclothing whatever?'

"We had ever been loyal to the town in which we lived and this last act in our career shows how loyal the town has been to us. Other newspaper men with fewer brains and in better towns, have grown affluent. Low browed journalists elsewhere, in towns that are populated by human beings, have done well, while we, with a fatigued and vapid constituency, have thrown away our two best years and now go forth only with what is exempt from seizure and sale.

"We kept quiet when the convention made its nomination for member of Assembly last year and assisted in his election because he was a Buffalo Wallow citizen, well knowing even then that he would be the first man to put himself on the five cent counter. We knew then that he would take anything from a pass to an unguarded watermelon. But everybody said we should stand by the nomination, especially so long as the nominee was a man who lived here. So he went to the legislature, worked for the better protection to muskrats and downed his neighbors on every corner. His pay was $250 for the session, out of which he succeeded in paying $300 board and $600 whiskey bills, after which he found by a system of rigid economy, he had still enough left to purchase a two-moment horse and evade the grand jury.

"More than all that we have set up nights to edit and correct and revise and punctuate the alleged speeches of this man, so that his fellow-men would not think him the intellectual blight that he is. All through the campaign his imitation brains floated about in a pool of red-eyed rum, like the specimens in a doctor's office dancing on the bosom of a jar of alcohol. Then he would emit a speech! To-day; as the result of our toil, he is gay and free in Canada, while we go forth to begin life's battle once more, with the bitter memory of having assisted an intellectual angle-worm into a place where he could market his moth-eaten soul.

"We have stood by the people of Buffalo Wallow in every way while we have been running this paper. We have maintained that good order prevailed here night and day, when the facts would hardly warrant this statement. We have pointed with pride to our peaceful record as a town when the low refrain of the six-shooter, cooing to its mate, came stealing through the quiet night. We have asked the pious and prudish east to come and dwell with us, when we well knew that no stranger ever walked the length of our street in a plug hat and lived to tell his friends about it, unless the hat was made of boiler iron.

"Subscribers who do not get their paper hereafter will know why it is that way. They will understand that their subscriptions and the paper, also, have expired. Those who think that a publication is a public trust will do well to apply elsewhere.

"Readers of the World who find a large red cross and a notice of sale on the front door of this office will know that their subscription has expired."

HOW TO READ.

A great deal more can be accomplished by systematic reading or study for fifteen or twenty minutes daily, than appears possible to one who has never tried it. It would suffice to keep up French or German, and to become conversant with the best authors. Or a little time given daily to the earnest study of science, and one might become a skillful botanist or geologist. Or if English literature be more attractive—as it undoubtedly is to the greater majority—how soon would one become familiar with Milton or Shakspeare, Bacon or Macaulay, if a few sentences were read and considered daily.

Above all things it is important that one should read systematically, and not be guided by chance. Have always a good book, a standard work, that will repay careful study, at hand, and to that devote a part of the time that may be set apart for reading. Before opening the book recall as fully as possible what was read the day before, and on closing it see by reflection how many of the thoughts of the author you have made your own, and so cultivate memory.

A NAUGHTY, NAUGHTY MAN.

He bade his wife a tearful good-bye. "My love, my only one! The time will soon be here when I shall soon be in a position to snap my fingers at fate and set up as my own boss. Then we shall have no more of these cruel partings."

"And you will be true to me?"

"As I always am," he responded. "You did not forget to put that photo you had especially taken for me in my gripsack, did you?"

"Oh, dear, no. Are you sure you will look at it sometimes, love?"

"You wicked doubter! You know that I should be wretched without at least such a semblance of my pet to look at daily and nightly."

Draw the veil of charity over his grief and the treachery of one in whom he had such unbounded confidence.

In brief, she, his only love, his pet, his wife, had secretly planned to make him "wretched." She had taken that photograph from his gripsack, and was gloating over his misery when he should discover that only memory remained to him, for the time being, of his darling's looks.

"The dear fellow, how he will scold me for the trick," she thought; "but I will send him the photograph in the first letter I write to him."

Thus appeasing her conscience, she waited for his first letter. It came from Chicago and began as follows:

"MY HEART'S DELIGHT:—Got here O. K. this a. m. Have been wrestling with the trade all day, and a tough time I've had of it. Weary and fagged I have retired to my room, shut out the gilded atmosphere of sin that envelopes this terrible city, and taken from my satchel your sweet picture. It is before me as I write. I shall kiss it when I've said my evening prayer. It will rest under my pillow. It is my one solace until I hold you, my sweet wife, in these faithful arms again."

Thus far she read, then she toppled over on the floor.

What comfort she found there it is hard to say; but a great determination rose with the stricken wife, who went out an hour later and sought a telegraph office.

Her husband had been saying his prayers abroad that evening, and when he got to his hotel at out midnight, his spiritual emotions received a new shock by a telegram from his only "love."

It was elaborate for a dispatch, but under the circumstances one could not expect an outraged wife to transmit her feelings by the slow mail. This dispatch read:

"You are no longer the only drummer who is not a liar, as you have always claimed. Let the fraternity make you their chief in the heart. Had you taken the pains even to look for the photograph you say your prayers to, you would have discovered that I had—to tease you—removed it. My faith in you is dead!"

The husband clutched his hair.

"Why, what did I write to her anyway," he muttered.

After a while his face cleared.

"By Jove! I must have been piling on the taffy. That's what a man gets for trying his best to make a woman feel good! Poor little dear, what a lume she must be in! Lucky for me she gave her grievance away. What geese women are! Bless your little noddle, her faith shall be resurrected."

Forthwith he telegraphed to a knowing friend:—

"Send me, first mail, photograph of my wife. Beg, borrow, steal it, get it somehow. Will write all particulars soon."

A week latter a drummer, in dignified martyrdom, stood face to face with a stern, but very wept out wife.

She expected to see him meek and humble, but he gazed upon her with much scorn, and then passed on to his room in crushing silence. She was amazed. With quick impulse she followed, thanking heaven he had not locked her out.

"Well," she began, with wavering courage, "what have you got to say for yourself, now?"

Coldly, cruelly he looked at her. "I?" he queried. "Woman, if it were not for the overmastering love I bear for you, I should never look upon again."

His face was convulsed with tragic suffering that was balm to her heart to witness, but she only sneered,—

"Can you explain the deception you tried to practice upon me?"

"Can you obliterate the insult put upon your husband in that unwomanly despatch? A woman with so little confidence in her husband would be better off to live alone. For my part, I am not only disgusted, but disenchanted."

He turned sorrowfully away, and bowed his head in his hands. She approached him and laid the letter which had caused so much grief under his eyes.

"Read that. Knowing you had no picture of mine, what was I to think?"

"What any intelligent, right minded wife would have, though; you would have said to yourself, 'He is incapable of deceit; he has my picture, somehow.'"

"But you did not have it."

He looked at her, with sad, resigned sorrow. His lips quivered, as he sadly murmured,—

"Oh, woman! without an atom of faith!"

Then he put his hand in his pocket and produced her photograph.

"Oh, darling, forgive me! This old thing taken long before we were engaged! Why, I didn't know you ever had one of these."

The restored confidence made her blue eyes swim in tearful joy. She put her arms around him, asking his pardon, caressing even his coat collar.

"My dear," he said, looking into her face with grave, but loving reproach, "let this be a warning. Never doubt me again, no matter what appearances may be. I can always look you squarely in the eye, and say, 'I am innocent.'"

And she believed him.

THE SOLDIERS AT DINNER.

Would you like to see the soldiers at dinner in their camp? They are called Boys in Blue, for their coats and pantaloons are bright blue and so are their caps. They all dress just alike. There are thousands of them. Did you ever see 10,000 big, grown up boys in a field together? I have seen more than that take dinner in camp. They keep their caps on their heads while they eat. They sit on the green grass. They have no table to eat off. You see no table cloths there. Their cups are made of tin and so are their plates. They have no saucers, and most of them use no knives or forks. They use their fingers and pieces of boards to eat with.

Is not that queer?

Look on their plates. There you see on each plate a piece of fat pork with not a bit of lean, and four spoonfuls of beans, and four or five white crackers as big as your saucers. These crackers are hard as a rock, but the boys have strong, sharp teeth. Look in their tin cups. They are full of hot, black coffee, without any milk. Sometimes they have sugar to put in, but no milk. They have no cows in the army to give milk. They kill and eat all the cows they can get.

They do not always have such a good dinner. That one was a nice 4th of July dinner. Sometimes they have had no plates or cups, and nothing at all to eat but hard tack, which they had in their pockets, and this they had to eat as they marched along the road, for the man who was their master would not let them stop long enough to get dinner.

One day they marched thirty miles and had not a bite to eat. They were awfully hungry, and some of them said bad words. Some of them found some grains of corn which the horses had left, and they cracked that with their teeth. They said it made a good dinner. Another time they were going very hungry and found a patch of turnips and pulled them all up and ate them raw. Many a time they went to bed on the cold snow in winter without any supper. Soldiers have no houses. They sleep on blankets out of doors every night, and when they get cold they get boards or rails and set them on fire to get warm. They live out of doors just like pigs and cows. Sometimes it makes them sick, and 100,000 of them got cold and died. Their fathers and mothers did not see them—they were so far off. You know they all had guns and had to fight for you and the flag. Many times they were in battle when the guns were shooting all day and all night and not a bite to eat. So, you see, they had a hard time. Thousands of them got killed and needed no more dinner.—Private Dalzel's talk to little children.

TIM, THE COBBLER.

Tim was a philosopher in his way, and the dicta of his philosophy he had derived from his work—plain sayings such as these: "Choose a friend as you would a shoe—one strong and honest, whose aid will carry you through storm and sunshine; not polished looks or taking ways, but first-class leather—that's what pays.

"Helping a man is like tapping a shoe. Mend the shoe in time and it's most as good as new. So a cheery word, if you speak it now—a kindly deed, if you do it to day—may be a world of good to some weary soul that poverty and despair have laid their heavy hands upon.

"It's pretty much the same with life as with the shoe—not all springing sod and pleasant paths for the shoe, but dust and mire and grime—not all success for the man, but failure and sorrow.

"Let me fill my place in the world as well as a good shoe does, let me keep some weaker companion in life's journey from sinking into its sloughs or falling wounded on its sharp-edged rocks and I shall die content."

Tim lived his philosophy, facts not theories were its bases; and its reward, content, had written such lines upon his countenance that homely words and rugged face were eloquent alike.

Flowers and kind words were not his only gifts. Many a bit of mending he did that made him none the richer save in such treasure as thanks from the heart, tears of gratitude and glances that needed no words to be understood. A part of each day's earnings became, ere he entered his home, food for the hungry, medicine for the sick, clothes for the naked. Rich was the treasure that he laid up for himself in humble hearts.

But sweetest flowers fall before the reaper's sickle. Death, too, spares not the loveliest lives. When I came home last night I found the cobbler there before me, something unusual. He felt oppressed with weariness, he said, and had left his work at noon. Soon he went to his room where in a few minutes I joined him, finding him upon his bed. "You will stay with me, will you not, to the end?" he said; "for I feel that I shall not live long." I pressed his outstretched hand for an answer. The assurance in his tones and the great change that had quickly come over his face told me that truth was in his words.

Tim had fallen asleep and I still held his hand, sitting silent and motionless, hoping hopelessly against the belief that soon must the silver cord be loosed, the golden bowl be broken.

He woke shortly after, looked out on the channel filling with the waters and said "The tide is coming in," turned and fell asleep again. A sudden hope filled my heart. He spoke no longer of pain or death, simply as he was wont to speak as we had sat together many a night watching the same waters winding up the bed of the creek; surely many a day was left for us to share together.

The moon was far up the heavens now, the tide was creeping up among the reeds of the shore, and rocking the boats drawn high up on the bank, the sinuous bed of ooze was hidden and in its place was a serpentine ribbon of sparkling waters, the uppermost rings of green on the piles at the wharves and bridges were reached by the waters, the tide was at its height. Again Tim spoke: "It is full tide at last." Yes, it was high tide, high tide of three score years and ten, high tide of guileless, unselfish life, high tide of noble doing, and, as at full tide the stately ship weighs her anchor and sails for distant port, so Tim's soul had gone, hastening to a heaven not of this world. I folded his hands upon his breast and kissed the beautiful, peaceful face, then sat beside his clay and thought of all that he had done, and how his memory would live long after him, and while I pondered this vision came to me, awake or asleep, I know not:

From afar off I seemed to see a soul standing before the Judge of the World, and the Judge bade that the Books of the Record of Life be brought and read, and as they were read, the stern lines seemed to fade from the face of Him who sat upon the throne, ineffable tenderness shown upon His countenance, and in tones of marvelous sweetness He uttered these words that fell like a benediction on the waiting soul: "Inasmuch as thou hast done it to one of the least of these, My brethren, thou hast done it unto Me."

MARKERS INSTEAD OF PENCILS.

A glance at a ball programme usually suffices to convince one that writing is a rare accomplishment among dancing men, and they should be thankful for the new markers, which take the place of pencils. They contain the owner's name in raised type and a little ink pad, and are furnished with a clasp by which they may be fastened to a gentleman's watch chain or to an order of dances. The only objection to them is that they quite preclude the possibility of mistaking one's partner's name, a thing which some naughty girls occasionally do.

NOT THAT JOHN.

He was having his fortune told.

"I see," said the medium, contracting her eyebrows and turning her toes in, "I see the name of John."

"Yes," said the sitter, indicating that he had heard the name before.

"That name seems to have given you a great deal of trouble."

"It has."

"This John is an intimate friend."

"That's so," he said, wonderingly.

"And often leads you to do things you are sorry for."

"True, every word."

"His influence over you is bad."

"Right again."

"But you will soon have a serious quarrel, when you will become estranged."

"I'm glad of that. Now spell out his whole name."

The "medium" opened one eye and studied the face of her sitter. Then she wrote some cabalistic words and handed it to him in place of her fee.

"Do not read it until you are at home," she said solemnly. "It is your friend's whole name."

When he reached home he lit the gas and gravely examined the paper. There he read in picket-fence characters the name of his friend:

"Demi John!"

SAM JONES' DAUGHTERS.

In speaking of parental duty Mr. Jones says: "I have got girls in the bud now; in two or three years more they will be full blooming young ladies on the carpet. I don't know how you parents feel about it, but I am less concerned about getting my daughters off than any fellow you ever saw. I will board them and take care of them as long as they are good girls, and if they never marry it's all right; but I will tell you what it is, I don't care how badly I wanted my daughters to marry, I would not push them out in certain circles of society. If you have a boy that wants a wife, and knew a girl just like your daughter in every way, would you want your son to marry her—a dancing, giddy, godless, Christless girl, would you? Now, honor bright, would you? You say: No, Jones, I give it up. God knows I want my boy to marry a better girl than my wife raised.

If you had a sweet, nice daughter, and a fellow had a fac simile of your boy, would you like to see her marry him? Let me say this: If I wanted to marry my daughters well I would try to have them taught how to bake bread, fry chicken and do all manner of domestic duties so well that when persons came in our house they would say my wife was the best house-keeper they ever saw, when in fact it was our daughters' work. Then there will be some first-class boy coming here, 500 miles from home, and marry her. I went 500 miles to get a first class wife from Kentucky, and I got her, too.

I put young men on notice. I told my wife that when any boys came to our house to ask them in the parlor and treat them like gentlemen, and then go out and hunt up little Paul and Bob to come in and see them, but to tell the visitors that my daughters were up stairs studying their lessons. Boys, if you want to see Paul and Bob, just rack around."

QUEER THINGS TO EAT.

Grasshoppers have been eaten from the earliest times. The scriptures contain an abundant proof of this, and the law of Moses is very plain indeed in its permission to the people of Israel to eat "the locust after his kind, the bald locust after his kind, and the beetle after his kind, and the grasshopper after his kind. Every flying, creeping thing that goeth upon all fours, which have legs above their feet, to leap with withal upon the earth," was "clean," that is, eatable to the children of Israel (Leviticus 11:22), and was unquestionably eaten not only by them, but by the Western Asiatic people.

There were two ways of preparing grasshoppers to be eaten. They were either crushed in wine and eaten without cooking, or else—and this is the way they are still prepared for food in Syria and Arabia—they were boiled in salted water, their wings plucked off, and then the insects dried in the sun, when they were ready to be eaten.

Ants are eaten in Africa. The traveler Junker relates that the chief of a tribe on the Mesharah river, in the Egyptian Soudan, sent him twenty basketfuls of ants for provisions on his journey. They are pounded into a sort of paste, which is said by Junker to "taste like liver."

Moths and butterflies have often been eaten, and the ancient Romans used beetles as food. Brazilians greatly esteem a bug that feeds on the palm-leaf. In Chili and Peru one of the national dishes, the chupe de chicho, is a sort of stew made of potatoes and the chicho, a beetle-like insect which is found in masses under stones along the water courses.

Flies are not by any means to be slighted in making up a list of the queer things people eat. The blacks of Narrinjeri, in Africa, live almost wholly on larvæ, or eggs, of the fly, which they find under the bark of pecan trees. Livingstone lived upon this food for some time, and gives an account of the natives going about with a sort needle stuck behind their ears, suggesting so many clerks with pencils tucked above their ears, ready for use. With these needles the negroes skillfully pierced the bark of the trees and dug out their food.

The Indians of Nevada also live partly on flies,—or such of these Indians do as remain in their original wild condition,—and make a sort of a cake out of the insects which is said to taste very much like salted meats.

All the vertebrate animals are eaten somewhere on the globe. In the Andaman Islands the eating of a live rat is made a test of manhood, and no man is permitted to marry until he has accomplished this feat. The Chinese are not alone in eating roasted dogs, for the Sioux Indians are very fond of them, and a century ago they were a favorite meat with the negroes of Louisiana. The African negro eat the lion, the jackass, the hyena and the crocodile.

A BIG HOOSIER.

John H. Craig, whose home is in Indiana, near Indianapolis, is six feet four and one-half inches in height and weighs 836 pounds. He measures eight feet two inches around the hips and eighteen inches around the ankle. He was born thirty years ago, and then weighed but eleven pounds. Two years later he took a prize at one of Barnum's baby shows in New York city because he weighed 206 pounds.—Boston Budget.

THE APPLICATION OF THE RULE.

Some time since the wife of a prominent citizen of New York city was trying to instill in the mind of her five-year-old son what it means to be generous, thus:

"Now, Willie, dear, suppose mamma should give you a cake and tell you to give part of it to Harry, and when you divided it one piece was larger than the other; if you gave it to him that would be generous, but if you kept it for yourself that would be selfish. Do you understand it?"

The little fellow thought he did.

The next afternoon, wishing to test the effect of her teaching, she gave Willie a large, juicy orange, saying:

"Now, Willie, take this orange and divide it generously with Harry."

When, to her surprise, the child (who was passionately fond of oranges) gave it back to her, saying, with a roguish twinkle in his bonny blue eye:

"Here, mamma, won't you please give it to Harry and tell him to divide it generously with me."

MORE ABOUT EYES.

Black eyes, or what are considered such, are indicative of passionate ardor in love. Brown eyes when not of the yellowish tint, but pure russet brown, show an affectionate disposition; the darker the brown—that is, the more they verge on to that deepest of brown which is in the eyes we are in the habit of calling black—the more ardent and passionate is the power of affection. The brown eyes which do not appear black—that is, which are not dark enough to appear so—are the eyes of sweet, gentle and unselfish nature, without the inconstancy of the light brown or yellow eyes—"golden eyes," as they were called by a lady novelist, and which are very little more to be trusted than green eyes.

Green eyes, although their praises are often sung in Spanish ballads show deceit and coquetry. We sometimes see eyes which are a combination of yellow, orange and blue, the latter color generally appearing in streaks over the whole surface of the iris, while the orange and yellow are set in flakes of unequal size around and at some little distance from the pupil of the eye. Eyes of this variety of tints show intellect, at any rate, a certain originality of character. No commonplace nature has this sort of eye. Hasty, irritable persons have frequently eyes of a brownish tint inclined to a greenish hue. Although the purely green eye indicates deceit and coquetry, the propensity to greenish tint in the eyes is a sign of wisdom and courage. Very choleric persons, [illegible] have blue eyes, have also certain [illegible] of green in them, and when under the influence of anger a sudden red light appears in them.

There are eyes which are remarkable for being of what might be said to be of no color. The iris has only some shades of blue or pale gray so feeble, as to be almost white in some parts, and the shades of orange which intervene are so small that they can scarcely be distinguished from gray or white, notwithstanding the contrast of colors. The black of the pupil is in these eyes too marked, because the color of the iris around it is not deep enough, so that looking at them we seem to see only the pupil. These eyes are expressionless, for their glance is fixed and 'dead;' they invariably belong to persons of the lymphatic temperament and indicate a listless and feeble disposition, incapable of enterprise, and a cold and indolently selfish nature.

LITERARY NOTES.

Henry George's theories are to be subjected to a searching criticism by George Gunton, in a paper to be published in the Forum for March.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich, the poet, editor, novelist, and children's writer, is the subject of a biographical fragment by Mr. W. H. Rideing, in the next St Nicholas.

R. M. Johnston, the well-known author of short stories recounting the eccentric phases of Georgia life before the war, contributes to the March Harper's another of his inimitable productions, entitled "The Rivalries of Mr. Toby Gillam." It tells the amusing love affairs of two rival coffin-makers in Dukesborough. A. B. Frost illustrates the story.

Composite Photography, the curious process by which is produced the average of an indefinite number of portraits, will be described by Professor John T. Stoddard, of Smith College for Women, in the next Century. The illustrations, which have a weird fascination, include composites of the classes of '83, '84 and '86, and a composite of these three.

The frontispiece of the forthcoming March Harper's is one of Abbey's naive pictures, illustrating a Sunday phase of the good old days of our grandmothers. It is called "The Day of Rest." In one corner of the high pew a young woman and her small boy are peacefully slumbering, while the worthy pastor stretches out his discourse. The spirit and aspect of life in the 18th century, as admirably represented in this drawing, is pleasantly described in "The Editor's Easy Chair" by George William Curtis.

The March Eclectic gives the place of honor to an extraordinary article called "The Land of Darkness." Mr. Gladstone reviews the progress made by England in the last generation in an optimistic strain. Andrew Lang criticises M. Renan in a study of his later literary works. Many people will be highly interested in Stuart C. Cumberland's "A Thought-Reader's Experiences," a discussion of a topic that now one of the nine days' wonders of the age. Helen McKerlie gives us a very vigorous protest in favor of her sex and its intellectual claims in "The Lower Education of Women." The entire contents of the number will, we think, be found of great attraction.

The young lady who had a poor partner in the waltz changed him for a more skillful one, because she said, she believed in the better whirled.

The unnecessary quantity of dirt and gravel—so much per load thrown upon our streets with the crushed stone, has now to be cleaned off at so much per load of mud.

HONOR TO WHOM IT IS DUE.

One of the most distinguished public men of our country at the present day is United States Senator Colquitt, of Georgia. Unblemished as a private citizen, practically honest, and intelligent as a statesman, and thoroughly grounded in the good old-fashioned principles of Jeffersonian Democracy, he stands a reliable authority, and to quote him is to give currency to golden words of truth and honor. From a recent speech of Senator Colquitt we extract as follows:

"My Democracy tells me that no man should shirk his load."

"It teaches me that in the conscience of all good men that man is no patriot whose treasure is wrung by indirect methods and unjust exactions from the bloody sweat of his neighbor."

"I believe in such Democracy as will hold every public servant to a faithful discharge of his duty, and then watch the taxes with a jealous eye."

"I believe that the best place for a dollar that is not righteously demanded for the public good is in the pocket of the man who earned it."

"I believe it is better to be poor in this world's goods than to suffer a famine in moral principle, manly honor and sturdy independence."

Who could possibly utter sounder political and moral doctrine than the foregoing few short sentences disclose? We know not the man.

Carry his avowed creed into governing effect and the death knell of Heartless monopolists,
Mercenary extortioners,
Political corruptionists,
Unprincipled legislators,
Treacherous officials, would be sounded, for the lasting credit of country and the joy, peace and prosperity of all honest people.

The oldest ex-Cabinet officer now living is George Bancroft, the historian, who forty-two years ago was a Democratic Secretary of the Navy.

A bill pending before the Pennsylvania Legislature makes two-thirds of a jury sufficient to acquit or convict. There may be merit in such a measure.

There is a $5,000 salaried office in Boston which no Democrat can be found to accept. It is the Sub-Treasuryship. Bond required a quarter of a million dollars.

The artesian well on Long Beach has been sunk to the depth of 475 feet and pure water found. The well is now flowing at the rate of 500 barrels per hour, and it will supply all of Long Beach with a bountiful supply of excellent water.

Singular coincidences happen in this world. At the recent municipal election in Philadelphia two opposing candidates were named respectively Benton and Clay. Fifty years ago political gladiators crossed arms in the Senate of the United States, one bearing the name of Benton and the other of Clay.

A bill was lately introduced into the Rhode Island House of Assembly prohibiting discrimination by Life Insurance Companies against colored persons. Can it be possible that in New England, the home of Garrison and Phillips, colored people cannot enjoy the privilege of being insured on a par with the whites?

It is suggested that a monument should be erected in Algiers to the memory of Commodore Stephen Decatur. All right. But, before Americans commence building monuments in Africa, they had better complete a dozen long delayed memorials of the kind within the limits of their own country.

Reports from Pennsylvania evidence that the iron and steel business is in a good and active condition. Where are those political croakers who were going to burn their property and hang themselves if Cleveland was elected President? Where! Why living as fat as pigs and making money out of predicted ruin.

A bill has been introduced in the State Senate, which makes it compulsory for Sheriffs to make out a public list of persons qualified to serve as Grand Jurors, and that twenty days before the meeting of the term of Court he shall take the list to a Supreme Court Justice for that District, who shall choose the full panel.

Among the appropriations embodied in the River and Harbor Bill, as reported by the Senate Committee on Commerce at Washington, last week, are the following: Channel between Staten Island and the New Jersey shore, $75,000; Raritan Bay, N. J., $20,000; preservation of Presque Isle, Erie Harbor, Pa., $100,000; Passaic River, N. J., $20,000; Raritan River, N. J., $30,000.

A writer in a Canadian paper, speaking of the possibilities of pulp as a substitute for lumber in the manufacture of furniture and other articles now exclusively made of wood, calls attention to the resources afforded by northern Canada for the best pulp-making woods. It is found that in some localities the forests are now at the best age for pulping purposes, and capable of yielding from forty to one hundred and twenty cords per acre, if the whole of the timber were utilized. By mixing the pulp with clays, steatite, asbestos, plumbago, mica, etc., substances of every possible color and compactness may be produced.

The Committee appointed by the House of Assembly to ascertain whether a ballot-box could be procured which would afford greater protection against fraud than those in present use in this State, have inspected a contrivance in the possession of a Newark man, and, it is said, will report in favor of its adoption. The box is at present in use in the State of Ohio, and the New York Legislature has just adopted it. The lid lock is opened by a combination. The ballot, folded, is pushed between two inked rollers with cog wheels, and with a turn of the crank the paper falls into the body of the box. Type on the face of the wheels prints the number of the ward and district in which it is used. Every ballot voted is registered on a dial, and should a double ballot be voted it can easily be discovered. First, the indicator would show the number of ballots voted, and the slip folded inside would not have been printed upon.

AT LAST!

The long contest for United States Senator is over and the mantle has fallen upon the shoulders of one least expected. While it is to be regretted that, through the doings of disgruntled Democrats, the high honor of United States Senator has not been accorded to the one so deserving of it, both politically and in point of capability, ex-Gov. Leon Abbett, the people of New Jersey may rest assured that in the selection of Hon. Rufus K. Blodgett, as the successor of Hon. Wm. J. Sewell, they have an honorable gentleman, a true Democrat, and an efficient representative. His election by the joint meeting of the Legislature, was brought about through the votes of Republicans, who, seeing no chance of electing Mr. Sewell, threw their votes for a "dark horse" and won. The closing scenes of the joint meeting were turbulent and not calculated to give credit to the participants or their party. There were two ballots taken. The first ballot resulted in thirty-nine for Blodgett, thirty-eight for Abbett, two for Sewell, one for Potter and one for Kays, as follows:

For Blodgett—Ackerman, Armstrong, Baird, Carter, Chamberlain, Chattle, Condit, Corbin, Cranmer, Doron, Fish, Gardner, Goble, Griggs, Haines, Hawkins, Herring, Hill, R. C. Hutchinson, S. B. Hutchinson, Large, Low, Lawrence, Lufburrow, Lyon, Marlatt, Miller, Norwood, Oviatt, Pancoast, Peck, Roe, Rue, Tenbroeck, Thompson, Throckmorton, Underhill, Vandenbergh and Young—39.

For Sewell—Dickenson and Letts—2.

For Potter—Donohue—1.

For Kays—Kinney—1.

The first name called was Mr. Ackerman, a strong Republican, who presented for the first time in the long contest the name of Mr. Blodgett. Ex-Speaker Armstrong, Republican, next followed with a vote for Blodgett. Then came Arnwine, Democrat, who voted for Leon Abbett. A hush fell upon the assemblage as the next name was called on the roll, that of Speaker Baird, a "kicking" Democrat. He voted for Blodgett. Carroll, the Labor member of the Assembly, when called upon said that he would rather vote for an anti-railroad man than a railroad man. He would therefore vote for Leon Abbett. Mr. Donahue, the other Labor member, said he would stand just where he started in the contest. He had voted for Erastus E. Potter all along and he would again cast his vote that way. Kinney voted for Kays. The result of the vote showed that Abbett had received thirty-eight votes, Blodgett, thirty-nine, Sewell, two and Kays, one. In the next roll-call, Letts, Republican, went over to Abbett, and Davidson for Sewell. Then Mr. Kinney voted for Blodgett, which gave that gentleman forty votes. Then Dickinson changed from Sewell to Blodgett, and that settled it.

Mr. Blodgett, the Senator-elect, is Superintendent of the New York and Long Branch railroad. He was born in Dorchester N. H., Nov. 9th, 1834. He represented Ocean county, this State, in the Legislature of 1878, 1879 and 1880. His legislative career is marked for his success in making six per cent. the legal rate of interest. He was one of the leaders of the Democratic party in the Legislature. He was Chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee under whose direction Governor Abbett was elected. Mr. Blodgett is a life-long Democrat, of New Hampshire birth and training, and like most Democrats from that staunch Republican State is very firm in his convictions. He prides himself on being a Democrat of the Jackson stripe. To Mr. Blodgett is attributed more than to any one else the refusal of Throckmorton and Chattle, Democrats, to vote for Abbett. At the State Democratic Convention which nominated Robert S. Green, Blodgett was a candidate and received the second highest vote. In personal appearance he is a typical Yankee, is six feet tall, and has a slender but well-built figure. His hair is gray, and his close-cut beard is set off by a prominent nose, sharp-gray eyes and broad forehead. He was educated in the common schools at Dorchester and at the Wentworth Academy. He was educated in the machinist's trade in the Amoskeag Locomotive Works in his native State. He came to New Jersey in 1876 and settled in Manchester, Ocean county. In August, 1884, he moved his place of residence to Long Branch, where he now resides. He is married and has one son, Henry T. Blodgett, nineteen years of age.

Mrs. Roxalana Druse, who murdered her husband, was hanged at Herkimer, N. Y., on Monday last. It has been thirty-three years since a woman was hanged in New York State.

We notice with pleasure the introduction into the House of Assembly by Mr. Matthews, the intelligent and active young Democratic member from Elizabeth, of a resolution favoring an amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by the popular vote of States, instead of the vote of Legislatures. We have before advocated just such a change.

Ex-Surrogate and ex-Assemblyman Robert McCague died at his residence No. 414 Garden street, Hoboken, Monday last. Mr. McCague was forty-five years old, and one of the best known citizens of Hudson county. He was born in New York in 1841. At the time of his death and for several years previous he was engaged in the real estate business in which he had succeeded in accumulating a fortune of $100,000.

The Legislature of West Virginia, with a good working Democratic majority, adjourned without making choice of a United States Senator, there being a determined opposition to Senator Camden, because of his alleged connection with monopolies. The Governor has appointed a man of the people to fill the vacancy, one who possesses sterling qualifications, and is honest and brave enough to fight mercenary power. That is the kind of Senator New Jersey needs and would have had in Leon Abbett.

Third Assistant Postmaster-General, D. Hazen, (Republican) has been removed and a Democrat appointed in his place. His successor is Henry R. Harris, of Georgia, a member of the present Congress, not re-elected. Mr. Harris has served in the forty-third, Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth Congresses. He has not particularly distinguished himself during his Congressional career. Mr. Harris is over fifty years of age and is a farmer. Those who know him best say he is well educated and quite competent to perform the duties of the office.

EDITORIAL MENTION.

The U. S. Senate has confirmed President Cleveland's nomination of Waldo B. Tichenor for Postmaster of Orange.

The recent convention of liquor dealers at Elizabeth announced as a leading part of its programme the organization of all saloon-keepers in the State into local associations, subject to the general body.

Senator Robert L. Livingston, of Union County, last week gave a terrapin supper at the Trenton House, Trenton, to representatives of the press and friends. It was said to be a grand and enjoyable affair.

The Firemen's Relief association of Passaic has re-elected the old Board of Officers, consisting of J. O. Totten, President; D. B. Bogert, Vice President; W. E. Gibbs, Secretary; J. S. Biddell, Treasurer, and C. Huber, Trustee.

The newspapers on this side of the water were rather premature in chronicling the demise of Cardinal Jacobini. The eminent churchman did not die until something like forty-eight hours after the fact was recorded by telegraph.

The Governor of West Virginia has appointed D. B. Lucas to succeed Mr. Camden in the United States Senate. Mr. Lucas is said to be an anti-monopolist and an old-fashioned Jeffersonian Democrat. He has been active in politics in his State and has served with distinction in the Legislature. It is claimed for him that he is a man of the people.

W. B. Williams, a "novelty" goods dealer of Montclair, near Newark, N. J., has been arrested by Anthony Comstock for sending obscene matter through the mails. Williams claims that all the articles have been approved by the post office authorities. He gave bail in the sum of $1,500 for appearance before the United States Supreme Court at Trenton.

While seven boys, aged between ten and fourteen years, residents of Easton, were walking on the track of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, three miles above Philipsburg, N. J., last Saturday night, they saw a passenger train approaching, and in stepping out of the way of it, stepped directly in front of another one, and were struck. Six of the boys were killed instantly, and one of the number escaped.

Despite the wish of the President and members of both Houses of Congress to avoid the necessity for a called session of the two Houses or a special session of the Senate, the opinion is entertained by many prominent Congressmen that matters in respect to appropriation bills are rapidly drifting into a position, if, indeed, they have not already reached it, which makes a called session inevitable.

All the banks in the State have received notices from Secretary of State Kelsey that notes and bills of exchange or drafts, falling due on January 1st, February 22d, May 30th, July 4th, Thanksgiving Day or Christmas, the legal holidays, shall be due and payable on the first legal business day following such holiday, according to the new law. The same law holds good in regard to the day of a general election for members of the Assembly and any day the Governor of the State may set apart for public observance.

The Supreme Court has rendered the following decision: "A Township Committee has no power to bind a township by an acceptance of an order drawn upon the committee by an overseer in favor of a third person, directing the payment of money to be appropriated in the future to a road district. An attempted assignment of such moneys is void upon grounds of public policy. No action will lie against the inhabitants of a township for the recovery of moneys for work done upon roads in advance of an appropriation to be afterwards made."

The annual report of the Superintendent of the State Reform School shows that 120 boys were committed to that institution during the year. Of this number, for offences committed, thirty-nine were on charges of petty larceny, sixteen for breaking and entering, twenty-three for incorrigibility, eight for grand larceny, seven for assault and battery, six for malicious mischief, and the remainder on charges varying from forgery to disorderly conduct. Their respective ages run from nine years to sixteen, inclusive, and there were two whose ages were not ascertained.

Henry P. Frost, who recently lived in Morristown, and finally drifted to Paterson, was arrested in that place for burglarizing the summer residence of Mrs. DeMille, an actress, and on Friday last sentenced to five years in State Prison, and costs of prosecution. Frost talked freely and said to questions put by the Court that he was not a regular burglar, but that he did a little of that kind of business now and then. He was not a steady hand. He had not done any stealing about Paterson before, but had confined his operations to Somerset county, where he worked the district lying between Scotch Plains and Plainfield.

The day is drawing near when the people will be called upon to elect their township officers. It is high time that the voters were casting about them and in their minds selecting suitable men upon whom to concentrate their strength on election day—March 8th next. There is some times too much carelessness in choosing township officials. The freeholder, committeeman, and collector, should by all means be men of the best integrity and intelligence, for these most closely are concerned with the finances. The Democrats of the various townships should make a full ticket this Spring, for by active, united efforts, they can elect one.

Messrs. Palmer & Mallory, the managers of the Madison Square Theatre, recently obtained an order from the courts for the examination of George Primrose, the minstrel, preliminary to the trial of the suit brought by them against Messrs. Thatcher, Primrose & West for $17,893.33 damages for the minstrels' failure to fill an engagement from March to July last year. Counsel for the defendants appeared before Judge Andrews, of the Supreme Court, on Monday, and argued upon a motion to vacate the order. Judge Andrews decided that the order was properly granted, but that the questions to be asked Mr. Primrose must be determined upon at the examination. He also says that it is impossible to say whether the testimony then elicited will be admissible.

A terrible earthquake at Nice has destroyed a vast amount of property and caused the death of over 600 persons.

Collector of Internal Revenue Alex. Troup, of New Haven, who is also proprietor of the New Haven Union and a prominent politician, was expelled from Typographical Union No. 48, of that city yesterday. Troup brought himself into disfavor with the printers by using the patent plate matter on the inside of his paper. This was one of the causes of his dismissal.

Just now New York journals are directing public attention to the charges made against Judge Hilton in connection with the will of Mrs. Stewart. Mr. Butler, the contestant, who is a relative of the late Mrs. Stewart, makes sundry charges against him of a very severe character, which are denied by Judge Hilton's son-in-law, Judge Russell. The complaint occupies three hundred pages of manuscript, and when published will no doubt excite public attention. In one letter published the late Mr. Stewart says to his wife that he wishes her to give to all public and private objects what he purposed while living, and of which she was informed. The public are not aware that the direction contained in the letter was ever executed. Doubtless when the trial takes place there will be some interesting revelations.

The Governor of New York, who is not unknown to the Democracy of New Jersey, made an elaborate speech to the Democrats of Brooklyn, last week, in which, with Jefferson for a text, he may be said to have "struck out," oratorically, "from the shoulder." He reviewed the Republican methods in several of the States in a correct but caustic manner. Thus, in Connecticut, today, the Governor of the State is not the choice even of a plurality of its voters, and the same injustice is possible in New Hampshire. Republican Rhode Island disfranchises any foreign-born citizen who happens to be too poor to hold real estate. The present Republican majority in the United States Senate is maintained by means of the vote purchased by that Republican rotten borough creation, the State of Nevada, with its 63,000 votes.

Rutgers College (the New Jersey State Scientific College)

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

AYER'S Hair Vigor cures baldness. Hair Vigor restores youthful freshness and color to faded and gray hair. It attains these results by the stimulation of the hair roots and color glands. It rejuvenates the HAIR and cleanses it. It restores to the hair that, either by reason of age or disease of the scalp, has become dry, harsh and brittle, a pliancy and glossy silken softness of extreme beauty. There is no dye in Ayer's Hair VIGOR and the good it does is by the VIGOR it imparts to the follicles, and the cleanliness and healthfulness of the condition in which it maintains the scalp.

AYER'S Hair Vigor renews the hair. Hair Vigor is the best cure known for Brashy Hair, Bald Head, Itching Humors, Tetter Sores, Torpid Follicles, and all other diseases of the scalp that cause the falling of the HAIR and its fading. Nothing cleanses the scalp of the nuisance of dandruff so perfectly, and so effectually prevents its return, as AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. In addition to the curative and restorative virtues peculiar to Ayer's Hair Vigor it is a toilet luxury. The Hair VIGOR is by far the cleanliest hair-dressing made. It causes the hair to grow thick and long, and keeps it always soft and glossy.

Ayer's Hair Vigor
Contains no deleterious ingredients. Its use prevents all scalp disease, secures against the hair growing thin or gray, and surely cures all baldness that is not organic.

North Plainfield Democrats.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—As the municipal election for the Borough of North Plainfield is near, cannot you, Messrs. Editors, through the columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST induce the sound Democrats to call a primary meeting and make a ticket that all good Democrats, and many other reputable citizens will support. The many Democrats should not allow themselves to be sacrificed to satisfy the little personal spite of a few. We do not want any Judas in the party who would betray it for malice or money. By publishing the above you will greatly oblige A DEMOCRAT.

[In answer to the above we would respectfully state that an adjourned meeting of Democrats will be held in the basement of the School House this evening, (Friday, March 4th), at eight o'clock, where all good Democrats are invited.]—ED.

OH, for a paid fire department!

THE partnership of Moore Bros., the North avenue market men, has been dissolved by mutual consent.

REV. R. S. HOLMES will occupy the pulpit of Trinity Reformed church on Sunday morning and evening.

THE advertisement of John W. Morris in another column, is of interest to all who want a horse for any purpose.

REV. L. T. SHULER, of Newark, will conduct the Bible study lesson at the Trinity Reformed church to-night.

ANOTHER devotional meeting of the "Y" will be held next Monday afternoon at four o'clock, in Y. M. C. A. Hall.

WHOEVER forgot to lock the door of the Evona station is responsible for the report that an "attempted burglary" therein occurred.

MAYOR MALE thinks an effort should be made towards the collection of delinquent taxes. We think so, too—and so do all but he who is delinquent.

NEXT Tuesday morning will begin the sale by auction of the household furniture, etc., contained in the Park House, as advertised in detail elsewhere.

IT is a source of pleasure and satisfaction to working people to again realize that the days are rapidly lengthening. They lengthen now sixteen minutes in a week.

WHOLE families, old and young, are sick with the measles in North Plainfield. The cases, however, are all of a light type with the exception of those among the adults.

IF we are to be favored with such weather as people are prophesying we will have an early Spring, and farmers will be enabled to plow for the season's crops in advance of last year.

IT is about time that steps were taken, as Mayor Male suggests, for the collection of the fees so long due from those who rent the privilege of emptying into the North avenue sewer.

REGULAR meeting of the Common Council, next Monday evening, but as yet no signs of a compromise or a deal in the license matter. Unless something more is agreed upon than is agreed upon at present, no license will be granted.

THE Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Trinity Reformed Church will give a sociable in the lecture room of the church on Tuesday evening next, 8th inst. To avoid over-crowding admission will be by tickets of invitation.

BOROUGH CLERK, Dr. W. E. Mattison, of North Plainfield, has given up his membership in the Board of Health, and also sent his resignation as a Justice of the Peace to Gov. Green, to take effect last Tuesday. A successor is to be elected next Tuesday.

THE fine property on Broadway and Sixth street, so many years owned by Wm. B. Stewart, Esq., has just been sold to Mr. John Brooks, Foreman of the Potter Press Works. The price paid we understand, was about $10,000, which is much below its value.

THE toboggan slide has been opened again for the enjoyment of its patrons, but the benefit that was proposed for the Bicycle Club is undoubtedly postponed until next season, at least. But then, with such profit as arose from the Bazaar of last week, the Club needs no benefit.

WE called attention last week to the fact that an Excise Board could be controlled by the Council and therefore unnecessary. But as the Council can not at present control itself on the license question, it is unfortunate that the selection of a Board of Excise at the last charter election, had not been provided for.

THE Y. M. C. A. Hall was filled to its utmost capacity on Thursday evening last, to listen to Prof. R. S. Holmes' lesson on "The Norman Kings," beginning with William the Conqueror. So ably did the Professor handle the subject that a flattering vote of thanks was tendered him at its close by the large and appreciative audience present.

AN exchange says: The farmer's hired man who has been getting out of bed every morning at four o'clock to feed the stock will be mad all over when informed that actual experiments prove that a horse can live eleven days and a cow nine days without food. As a hog can live twenty-nine days there is no use in feeding him but once in two weeks.

HORSE railroads are—"thank goodness"—things of the past. Cities of enterprise putting in new street railways are now adopting systems having cable or electric motor power. Not only are dirty little cars drawn by dirty and sickly horses thus excluded, but smooth road beds are not torn up and replaced by rough blocks of granite unevenly laid. The horse railroad has gone!

THE firm of Pope Bros., expired by limitation, Tuesday, and the business will be continued hereafter, as in the past, by Mr. Howard A. Pope. The best of goods, fair dealing and low prices will continue to bring success and prosperity to this establishment. Mr. Ashland Horton has again connected himself with the business, and his many friends are glad to be once more served by him.

OVER two hundred of the scholars are absent from the North Plainfield Public School either by reason of their own sickness or sickness in their immediate families. Because of the epidemic of measles in the Borough, Principal Boss will not permit the attendance of any scholar, no matter how free from ill health, that can in any way come in contact with those suffering from the measles or with their surroundings.

THE colored Free Masons of this city include in their number most of the representative gentlemen of their race. They had proposed soon to join with others of their Brotherhood throughout the State in a grand ball that will be quite a brilliant affair of its kind, but as one of their most active members is pastor of a flock in whose midst a revival is now in active progress, the event is postponed a few weeks out of respect to the reverend chaplain.

OH, for a street railway!

NEXT Tuesday evening is the regular date for the monthly meeting of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department.

MR. CHARLES E. STEINER, formerly with Pope Bros., has recently connected himself with the dry-goods establishment of S. H. Whitney, at No. 6 East Front street, where he will be pleased to wait upon his many friends.

THE Rev. Marion F. McAllister, Rector of Trinity church Elizabeth, preached in the church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, last Sunday evening, having exchanged pulpits with the Rev. T. Logan Murphy.

THERE is no room to doubt the reelection of Collector Newton Spencer of North Plainfield. He has conducted the office as faithfully as it has always been managed in the past, and the people are generally satisfied.

THE New Brunswick Home News recommends for this city's perusal—as a "solemn warning"—the history of the rise and fall of a syndicate of New Yorkers that obtained a franchise for a horse railway in that city.

THE many young friends of Mr. Willie McClymont, of Washington Avenue, North Plainfield, will regret to learn of his serious illness. Willie is a great favorite with his companions, and hopes are expressed for his speedy recovery.

A NEW firm of shoe dealers composed of Mr. John H. Doane (of A. Willett's) and Mr. Morris Van Arsdale (of A. M. Griffen's) have rented the premises at No. 22 West Front street and will soon open with a large stock of all grades and manufactures in their line.

THE late cold snap nipped in the bud the announcement of an elegant line of Spring clothing that McGregor & Co., of Newark, will offer. Overcoats have since been more in demand, but watch their advertising space in these columns, and in a week or two you'll see something to your advantage.

THE tenth annual report of the Children's Home Association just published shows how the good work continues. During the year passed about $1,500 was collected and disbursed for the care and comfort of the 'little ones;' but that amount is not one quarter as much as the cause deserves and the citizens could easily contribute.

ON Monday, March 7, an entirely new society drama, entitled "Walda Lamar," will be presented, with Helen Dauvray and her company, including the distinguished young actor, Mr. A. Salvini, at the Lyceum Theatre, New York City. The play will be mounted with the same liberality which has distinguished all productions at the beautiful Lyceum Theatre.

THURSDAY evening of next week the Crescent Uniform Division, K. of P., of this city, will be instituted with all the required ceremonies at the hands of the grand officers of the State. The division will then be established permanently, and will start out with such auspicious surroundings and circumstances as to become in time, under the charge of Commander George H. Polhemus, the finest division in New Jersey.

TUESDAY, April 11th, is the day fixed by law for the election of two members of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department of this city and the Borough, yet no one seems anxious for such position nor is any one even spoken of as "in the hands of his friends." The Commissioners whose terms of office expire are Senator Livingston and Mr. Cutter. The former, it is said, won't serve again, and the latter refused to serve at all, months ago.

WASHINGTON IRVING BISHOP, the "mind reader," the honored guest of Queen Victoria, Emperor William and other foreign rulers, as well as the most eminent scientists and philosophers of this country—has been persuaded by the management here to give one of his marvellous seances at Music Hall, next Monday evening. During the past few weeks in New York city, Mr. Bishop has been put to the most severe tests but has never failed.

ON Saturday last the Bridgewater (Somerset county) Republicans selected the following candidates to be voted for on Tuesday next: H. K. Gaston, town clerk; Jos. B. Smith, assessor; William Hardgrove, collector; W. H. H. Wyckoff, freeholder; Ferdinand V. Ditts, justice of the peace; Peter Dewitt, town committee. The Democrats on Tuesday nominated George Vanderveer town clerk; William S. Potter, assessor; Richard H. Brokaw, collector; Aaron C. Martin, freeholder; A. V. D. B. Vosseller, justice of the peace; James Dahoney, town committee.

MANY have supposed that like "Pinafore", "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was a play of the dim forgotten past. But next Thursday evening at Music Hall it is to be reproduced by the great Abbey company of double proportions. There are to be two of almost everything, even the brass bands, and singing by a colored quartette. Kate Partington and Marion Keller are the Topsys. The former plays the banjo and is assisted by the latter in songs and dances. James Marshall and John Mack are Marks, Sr. and Jr., and make much fun with their donkeys. Baby Peck plays Eva, and is one of the prettiest children ever seen here on the stage and Gus T. Wallace plays Uncle Tom.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., one of the magic cities of the New South, has discarded its horse-power street railway entirely, and we notice that one hundred and eighty worn out animals are offered for sale. The railway company of that city has contracted with the VanDerpoele Electric Co., for an equipment of all its cars with electric motors for the entire city. The VanDerpoele Co. has more miles of electric street railway already running with its system than all others in the World combined, and is, we understand, the system proposed for this city by the New Jersey Rapid Transit Co., that applied to the Common Council for a franchise at its last meeting.

WHETHER accomplished by mind reading, thought transference or nerve expression, Washington Irving Bishop's feats are so marvellous as to be almost miraculous. He writes the number of the bank note we may have in our pocket-book—that is if editors carried bank notes or had any use for pocket-books. He will find anything we may hide anywhere, having last week been put to a most severe test of this kind. The committee appointed left Wallack's crowded theatre where the public seance was being held, and after an absence of about eighteen minutes returned having hidden a ring, sealed in an envelope, in one of a hundred pigeon-holes behind the desk in the office of a hotel some blocks from the theatre. Mr. Bishop rushed the committee back through the streets to the spot where was the ring.

THE last of the W. C. T. U. Course of Entertainments will be given at Reform Hall, next Tuesday evening, and will consist of readings by Mr. Chas. F. Underhill, interspersed with music. This elocutionist has appeared so often in this city and is so well known that we need not add more than we have already said regarding his talent or ability. The N.Y. Times expressed itself recently in this way: "Mr. Chas. F. Underhill is a platform reader of charming talents and inexhaustible tact. His selections are mostly made from the sunny side of human experience and eccentricity, and his inherent jollity finds unobstructed flow in dialect humor. Last evening he had a fine audience of cultured and appreciative listeners, which he carried with an easy grace from peals of laughter to tears of sympathy. His humorous selections were especially strong." Tickets are now on sale at Reynolds' pharmacy.

THE Brooklyn entertainment at Arcanum Hall, Westfield, on Wednesday evening last, was slimly attended.

MR. GEORGE F. BROWN has sold his property corner Grove street and Linden avenue, North Plainfield, to Mr. John F. Wilson, whose son, Mr. Howard Wilson, will occupy the premises.

IF the report is true that the petitioners for a horse railway in this city are already offering the Plainfield franchise for sale, our Council will probably and forcibly sit down upon such a scheme.

AT the close of Lent the Bicycle Club will tender the ladies who more than assisted in the success of the late fair, a ball, reception, promenade concert or something of the kind—which they justly deserve.

AT a regular meeting of Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, held Wednesday evening, Messrs. John W. Murray and Robert L. Livingston were nominated for election as members of the Board of Managers of the Fire Board.

AN unknown but suspected highwayman plies his nefarious trade about the outskirts of Bound Brook. A number of solitary travelers have been stopped in lonely spots by a man who points a pistol in his victim's face and demands watch and money.

DR. J. H. COOLEY is, so far, the only candidate mentioned who has any chance of being elected Mayor of the Borough of North Plainfield. We know of one thing against him, however, but that is the only thing. He is a Republican—but he has our good wishes.

OVER three weeks have elapsed since young Barclay Peak shot his sweetheart, Mary C. Anderson, within a few steps of her own door, at Mount Holly, yet the case excites almost as much interest now as it did then. There is no improvement in her condition.

IF you have not seen that grandest of all the cycloramas—the battle between the Merrimac and the Monitor—you have no idea yet of the perfection that has been reached in this particular kind of art. We can't describe its wonders and merits but we do advise you to visit it in New York.

A MEETING of the Elizabeth wheelmen was held Tuesday night, and the plans for building a club house were fully discussed. A subscription list was started, with such favorable results that there is now no doubt that all the money required will be raised from the members of the club alone.

DR. HOWARD CROSBY'S recent address at New Brunswick, giving a temperate view of temperance, will be considered at Reform Hall, this city, Sunday evening, by Mr. Edward D. McCarthy, an eminent New York lawyer, who will review Dr. Crosby's utterances from a legal standpoint.

THE mission band of the First Baptist church gave a very novel and a very successful tea, last Tuesday evening, and if any who participated in the good things of the occasion passed a sleepless night, they were kept awake with thoughts of the gorgeous and whimsical costumes of the ladies, and not by the good things they served.

THE business of Moore Bros., the well-known marketmen of North avenue, has now passed entirely into the hands of Mr. George Moore, who continues to serve his large patronage, as formerly, at the old stand. Not only are all kinds of meats, fish and game offered at this establishment, but anything special that may be desired will be procured.

A PARLOR CONCERT has been arranged to take place at the residence of James W. Jackson, Esq., of Crescent avenue, for the benefit of the fund for building the new school rooms for the M. E. church. Such accomplished artists as Mrs. Karl Feininger, her gifted son Leo the violinist, and Mr. O. B. Smith, flute, will take part in the programme. Tickets are for sale at Reynolds.

CONOVER, the Bound Brook burglar, whose body the Raritan river at that place has been so industriously dragged for, is doubtless alive and well within a few miles of the scene of his escape. He is said to have solved the mystery of his disappearance with the explanation that he crept out of the water again where he went in, while his pursuers scattered along the bank above and below, and crossed to the opposite side.

BESIDES twenty-seven representative managers chosen from the different churches of the city, the following were elected the officers of the McAll Auxiliary for the ensuing year, at the recent annual meeting: President—Mrs. A. C. Baldwin; Sec.—Mrs. Lawrence Myers; Treasurer—Mrs. Wm. Graydon; Vice Presidents—Mrs. Wm. R. Richards, Mrs. K. P. Ketcham, Mrs. E. M. Rodman, Mrs. A. H. Lewis, Mrs. J. B. VanMeter, Mrs. R. S. Holmes, Mrs. J. E. Stockbridge, Mrs. Wm. B. Wadsworth, Mrs. H. E. Bowen, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. W. L. Patton.

The Bound Brook Burglar Sentenced.

On Friday last in the Somerset county court at Somerville William C. Rockett, the burglar who was captured while attempting to rob the Bound Brook post-office, pleaded guilty and was sentenced by Judge Bartine to four years and six months in state prison. Rockett is also under indictment by the United States grand jury. Rockett, it will be remembered, was the partner of the man who jumped into the Raritan river to elude his pursuers on the night of the robbery, an account of which we published at the time. The report that he was drowned at the time is now discredited.

The Four O'Clock Meeting.

At the four o'clock meeting held in Reform Hall last Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., there was manifest much revival of interest, and a great many requests for prayer was presented. A special effort is now being made to make the meetings still more interesting. Copies of the "Gospel Choir" will be put in the chairs for the use of the congregation, and the singing is to be a special feature. Next Sunday afternoon the leader has some important remarks to make concerning the future success in this good work and invites a large attendance of all friends of the cause, and Christian workers of all denominations to be present. The Dunham Choristers will be present in full force to lead the singing. All are welcome.

Important to N. J. Musicians and Teachers.

The Influence of the Music Teachers' National Association has become marked, and is doing great good. Many State organizations have also been formed, and are successful; growing interest is manifested and is permeating even remote parts of the country. The profession of music is already on a higher plane than heretofore. You are earnestly requested to identify yourself with the National Association, and to use your influence in favor of this good work. By doing so the valuable pamphlets bearing on musical subjects of great interest will be sent to you, free of charge, and your name will be printed in the reports. You will thus strengthen and be strengthened by an organization that is increasing in power and importance. Any music teacher, leader or musical writer may become a member by paying the annual fee of $2.00. Please give us your opinion in reference to the forming of a New Jersey State organization. Would it be a good plan? The programme of the next meeting will be sent you on receipt of the same. If you intend to join with us, send your name and address to the undersigned at your earliest convenience.

Respectfully yours,
DORSEY W. HYDE,
Vice-President M. T. N. A. for the State of New Jersey, Plainfield, N. J.

Public Library.

At the meeting of the Directors of the Public Library, held on Wednesday evening, the business transacted was entirely of a routine character. The report of the librarian for the month of February showed that the number of books added for the month was 551, of which 499 were purchased and 52 the gift of Col. M. W. Tyler. The number of volumes now in the library is 5,761, card holders 593, cash received from fines $7.71, from subscriptions of inhabitants of North Plainfield $3, circulation (free) of books for the month 1,237, of which but 879 were fiction, (the largest circulation yet attained was on Friday, the 25th, when 190 books were given out and 188 returned,) number of visitors to building 1,964. Hereafter the hours of circulation will be on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 2 to 5:30 o'clock, and on Saturday evenings from 7:30 to 9 o'clock. The reference room is open from 9 to 12 o'clock in the morning, and the art gallery from 10 to 12 in the morning and from 2 to 4 in the afternoon. It is not even yet thoroughly understood that all these privileges are free to all inhabitants of Plainfield, and that inhabitants of North Plainfield can obtain books upon the payment of but $1, each six months, in advance.

Personals.

Miss Alice Holmes of the Crescent avenue church choir has consented to sing a solo during the elocution recital of Mr. Chas. F. Underhill, at Reform Hall, next Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Potter, the Misses Potter, and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Babcock have left Plainfield for a few weeks and are enjoying a trip through milder climes of the United States. Before returning the party will probably go as far as Cuba.

Mr. Robert Gillies of Brooklyn, a prosperous brother-typo, is visiting his father, ex-Fire Commissioner T. J. Gillies of this city. Young Mr. Gillies who has been quite sick for the past four months, is rapidly recovering, with Plainfield air, his very good health.

The Tenth Anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Linbarger of Elm street, was celebrated at their residence, Monday evening. A number of useful gifts were received from the large circle of friends and relatives present and absent. The occasion was a most auspicious and enjoyable one.

Dr. E. W. South, because of ill health, has disposed of his large practice in this city and will spend the coming Summer in Europe, and probably the following Winter in the South. The retiring physician's successor on April 1st will be Dr. O. L. Jenkins, now the principal practitioner of Danielsonville, Conn., who while studying years ago was in Dr. South's office. Dr. Jenkins is a former resident of this city, and his wife is the daughter of Mrs. C. Hallock of West Fifth street. If we must lose Dr. South, we know of no one more worthy to succeed him nor more capable of sustaining the reputation and practice he has established in the past seventeen years of faithful service.

It is with great pleasure we record the improvement in health of the estimable wife of Mr. Harris Coitier, who is a guest of Force's Hotel, this city. Mrs. C. was recommended to Plainfield by her Brooklyn, N. Y., physician, for a relief of her malady, asthma, from which she has been a long sufferer. While improving from that complaint, she has been a victim to neuralgia, since she came here, which has been greatly relieved by the attendance of Dr. Keeney. Mr. Coitier is Cashier in the well known Maiden Lane, N. Y., establishment of Cross & Beguelin, importers of diamonds. We are glad to know Mr. Coitier, who comes to us speaking in high terms of one of our oldest Democratic subscribers, Mr. Cross, and of a brother of Plainfield's honored ex-Councilman, Tell A. Beguelin. Mr. Coitier, himself, is a prominent member of the Brooklyn, N. Y. Young Men's Democratic Club.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Mr. Littlefield, residing at the corner of Wynah avenue and Walnut street, has purchased the farm known as the Murfey farm, on Rahway road, and intends occupying the same this Spring.

A horse attached to a carriage driven by Mrs. V. Burtis, became frightened on Westfield avenue, and started to run away. Mrs. Burtis kept control of the animal until it had reached the depot when it was stopped.

The Town Committee held their last meeting for the past year, on Wednesday evening of last week, and passed a resolution recognizing the Fire Department as now constituted as the department of the Township, under a similar ordinance as the one passed by Fanwood Township a short time ago, recognizing Excelsior Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, as the Fire Department of Fanwood.

The Prohibitionists held their primary meeting at Town Rooms, on Tuesday evening last—about twenty persons were present. The reporter noticed Justice Wittke present who is a prominent Republican, and understood he entertained the Prohibitionists with an address. After considerable discussion the meeting adjourned, without making any nominations, until Wednesday, March 9th, which is the day after election.

At the meeting of Bucket and Engine Co., No. 1, held on Tuesday evening, their Foreman, Erastus Dolbier, resigned on account of his removing to Bayonne next month. Howard P. Manning was elected to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Dolbier. The Treasurer was authorized to make the last payment for their new engine, when it becomes due which will be on the 8th of March. This leaves the Bucket and Engine Co. free from debt. A committee consisting of W. S. Welch, J. N. Wilcox and Charles R. Clark, to confer with similar committees of the other companies in reference to the purchase of a lot for the erection of a suitable building for the Fire Department was appointed.

The regular meeting for the election of Overseers of Roads for the several road districts of our town, occurs on Thursday, March 10th. It is very important to our town that we have the most capable persons as overseers of roads, as there is raised every year between five and six thousand dollars for making and repairing roads in our Township. We want men who understand how to make the roads and put the crushed stone upon them in a systematic manner after the roads are made. The crushed stone should be put upon uniformly in width and of a regular and sufficient depth. Every legal voter on the several road districts should certainly turn out to their road meetings and give us good roads. Westfield is noted, through our county papers, of having as good roads if not better than either of our adjoining towns.

At the Democratic primary held at Town Rooms on Wednesday evening last, the following ticket was nominated for Township officers: John J. Willis, town clerk; P. Traynor, chosen freeholder; John M. C. Marsh, assessor; Isaac L. Scudder, collector; Martin E. Alpers, town committee, for three years; John S. Burhans, town committee, for one year; W. S. Welch, Joel Moffett, James Moffett, commissioners of appeal; David E. Miller, Aaron B Clark, surveyors of highways; Benjamin Pierson, overseer of poor; Robert Woodruff, pound keeper; John M. C. Marsh, constable, for three years; W. E. Gardner, judge of election; John D. Jaques, inspector of election. The following gentlemen were appointed a committee of conference on the appropriation; John T. Lawrence, John S. Irving, Wm. Stitt, Joseph Moffett, F. R. Pennington.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Until May 30 it is unlawful to have a black bass in possession, no matter how it is caught. The penalty for each fish is $25, and every reported violation of the law will be promptly investigated by the proper authorities. The law against catching any fish when a pond is drawn off, under the same penalty, and that against seines and nets will also be strictly enforced.

An interesting pigeon shooting match came off on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen on Wednesday last. The contestants were Mr. S. Smith, of this city, and Mr. Lebbeus Ayres, of Metuchen. The conditions were—twenty five pigeons each; $50 a side; Hurlingham rules; twelve guage guns; Smith, thirty yards; Ayres, twenty-eight yards rise. Mr. Smith won the match amid the plaudits of a large number of spectators, by the following score:

SMITH.
1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 1 1 1—18.
AYRES.

Mr. Harry Campbell, of this city, acted as referee. This match was a bona fide one, and shot for all it was worth, as the saying goes, among the "fraternity."

The extraordinary success attending the First Annual Tourney of the "Middlesex Gun Club" on their grounds at Dunellen, N. J., last week, both financially and in point of enjoyment, is a matter of comment with the public and among sporting circles. At a meeting of the Board of Directors held at Force's Hotel, this city, on Tuesday evening last, it was announced that the net profit realized by the Club on the tournament was nearly $600. This grand success must be attributed to the judicious and careful management and hard work of the committees appointed and the interest manifested among the members generally. With such energetic workers as President E. H. Robinson, Vice President S. G. Smith, Secretary M. W. Mulford, Treasurer George P. Suydam, Director and General Manager of the tourney, Mr. W. Fred. Quimby, Official Scorer, W. I. Ritch, and others, the affair was bound to prove a success from its inception. It is a matter of pride to refer to the excellent service rendered by Mr. G. W. Watson, who kindly acted as Treasurer during the tournament. To "Warry's" superior financial ability is due the fact that at the close there was not a difference of two cents in his accounts. He was ably assisted by Mr. Frank C. Green, who made an excellent and efficient committeeman. A difficult and arduous duty was performed by Mr. T. Keller, who had charge of the traps. "Tom" did his duty like a little man. At the gate the argus eyes of "Gus" Warden prevented any from entering the sacred precincts of the grounds without the requisite number of "shekels." In fact none who were appointed on committees shirked their duties. Hence the success of the entertainment. The Club tender their hearty thanks to Mr. John Cameron for his generous loan of chairs for the grand stand, which by the way, was constructed under the management of Mr. F. R. Stevens, at short notice and in a good manner. The restaurant under the grand stand was ably and satisfactorily conducted by Mr. Chas. Smith. The hungry were fed in a bountiful manner at fair rates by Mrs. Smith and her corps of assistants.

"Uncle" John D. Voorhees, a member and Director of the Club, tested his skill at the score with the "big uns" at double birds. Although he failed to secure a piece of the money, yet he did that which called forth applause—he killed two birds at one shot of his gun. "Uncle John" is in his 70th year, and is not afraid of any of the younger shooters of the Club, at the trap.

The visitors from the Southern portion of the States, Messrs. J. W. Brown, jr., Williams and Ivans, of Norfolk, Va., were handsomely entertained by their friends, Captain Cranmer and "Jake" Biederman, one of the well known firm of Biederman Bros., West street, opposite the Central Railroad depot in New York City. The "Captain" and "Jake" did their best to entertain their Southern friends. "Brownie," especially, received their attention. As he remarked—"Plainfield is a glorious place, and the gentlemen composing the Club are 'good boys,' and I shall not forget them, but I want to see my friend 'Jake' in New York, or I would stay over night in Plainfield."

An interesting feature connected with the tournament was that of a presentation to a member of the Club, (Mr. P. Fowler) on Friday evening, at Force's Hotel, of a handsome neck-tie from the "champions" Messrs. Stice and Budd, in honor of Mr. F's birthday, also an elegant scarf from Mr. Quimby. Mr. Fowler, in a quiet (?) manner, accepted these testimonials from his friends and remarked that he would "see them later." And he will.

We had almost forgotten, (beg pardon) to speak of the "Mayor of Bound Brook," Mr. John S. Bishop, who so efficiently acted as Chairman of the Entertaining Committee. He faithfully fulfilled his part, as he always does, when placed in such a position—satisfactorily to all concerned. The "Mayor" has a reputation for such duties, which are highly appreciated.

The prize of $50 offered by the "Middlesex" club to the shooter making the best average at live birds was awarded to Mr. J. R. Stice, of Jacksonville, Ill., who is an expert with his little "corn sheller"—a single barrel magazine gun just put in the market by the Winchester Rifle Company. Bro. Stice is a six footer with small (?) feet—a perfect gentleman and a good shot. He made a host of friends here during his stay, as did all the visiting sportsmen.

The prize of $50 offered by the club to the shooter making the best average at clay pigeons will be announced next week.

The result of this "First Annual" of the Middlesex Gun Club has been a surprise and pleasure. It is the only Gun Club in the State which has had the pluck to offer to the public an entertainment of the kind, which has drawn together such renowned shooters from the South, East and West. Representatives and shooters were here from even far away Dakota and Texas. Such pigeon shooters as Stice, Budd, Stark, and "Bob White" from the West, Tom J. Eley, Jack Brewer and Kleine of Pennsylvania, and "crockery breakers" like Charley Wagoner and Monroe C. Smith, of New York State, and Graham, the English champion, are hard to bring together to contest on new grounds in a strange place. They all departed, however, after the close of the tournament, with the expression that the Middlesex Gun Club had the finest grounds and the best set of members they had met with in their lives. "Embly Johnson" and "See-me-more" will be household words with them hereafter.

Reform Club.

Wintry blasts and icy sidewalks did not prevent the assembling of a respectable sized audience within Reform Hall last Sunday night. The members of Mr. Vanderbeek's choir were there in full force, and the duly appointed speakers for the occasion, Mr. W. H. Sampson, Captain Ostrom and Judge Harper, all responded through short and pointed addresses. Five signers to the pledge of total abstinence answered the urgent appeal of President French. Notice was given that the speaker for next Sunday night would be Mr. McCarthy, a prominent lawyer of New York and a gentleman of rare ability. All who possibly can ought to be in Reform Hall next Sunday at 3.45.

SCOTCH PLAINS SRATCHINGS.

Meeting of the R. of P. of District No. 14, at Goodwill Lodge No. 101, K. of P. of Scotch Plains, N. J.

The gathering of the members of the Lodges that comprise this district, in the village, was a great surprise and a rare treat to the community. Within the history of the place it was the first time that any of its secret organizations has had a brass band present when they expected visiting Brothers. This occasion is one upon which the order can feel a large degree of pride for the reason that it called out in full uniform the Crescent Uniform Division of the City of Plainfield, who presented a very handsome appearance in their new uniform, and their military bearing was a credit to the order and the city that they came to represent, many were the flattering remarks that were expressed on their appearance and gentlemanly behavior. The D. D. G. C. Frank Hossenger, to whom the village is indebted for this knightly treat, met the G. C. Henry C. Housell, of New Brunswick; G. K. of R. and S. Eugene V. Lorton, of Plainfield; G. O. G. Chas. W. Kilborn, of New Brunswick; P. G. C. and S. R. Joseph Miller, of Camden; S. V. C. of the World, Gen. Wm. Ward, of Newark; P. G. C. and P. S. R. of Kentucky, and now D. D. G. C. of District No. 20, W. A. Cotter, of Flemington and a large delegation from other lodges at Fanwood Depot. He escorted them to the Castle Hall of Goodwill Lodge where the Brothers representing the Lodges in the District were assembled to receive the Grand Officers of the Grand Jurisdiction of N. J. The G. C. was introduced to the members present. His address was well qualified to cement the order together and be recommended to the lodges to make fraternal visits whenever they could and thereby encourage each other in the work of building the order up to a higher standard. He thanked District No. 14 for their kind welcome. The next speaker introduced was that veteran and warrior who parted with an arm in the defense of the flag of his country, Gen. Wm. Ward, S. V. C. of the World. His remarks were well aimed to promote a growing interest in the order and showed that he was well worthy of the high honor, that the order had confered on him. He congratulated Goodwill on its present prosperity and wished them success. The next speaker was S. R. Joseph Miller. He spoke in commendable terms of the order and the endowment rank. This he said beloved every Knight to belong to as it was the best life insurance that was in existence. At the close of his remarks D. D. G. C. Frank Hossenger, informed the lodges that Goodwill Lodge was now prepared to confer the fifth degree on the visiting Brothers. The meeting then adjourned, and under the escort of D. D. G. C. Hossenger assisted by the Plainfield Cornet Band they proceded to Excelsior Hall where a bountiful repast was spread to renew the inner man. After all present had passed through the ordeal of this degree, Gen. Wm. Ward was again introduced by D. D. G. C. Hossenger. He spoke of the pleasure that it afforded him to be present on this occasion and closed his remarks with a flattering tribute to women, which was well received by the ladies present; he was heartily applauded. The D. D. G. C. introduced Wm. A. Cotter, who for the benefit of those present not members of the order, and especially the ladies, made an exposition of the working of the order, which was received with laughter and applause. The next speaker introduced by the D. D. G. C. was Eugene V. Lorton. He congratulated Goodwill Lodge on the progress that it was making and the good material that it was selecting for its membership and that its future was bright and glorious. He refered to the name of lodges in this District. He said with Perseverence, Unity, Goodwill, Harmony and Olive Branch and the Crescent forming a circle how could they help but succeed. His remarks were well received. Then G. C. G. Chas. W. Kilborn spoke; his remarks were very appropriate for the occasion. He ended his speech with saying that this is one of the most important years in the history of the order and that we should work with renewed zeal as we have a Ward to protect and a Miller to take our grist to the S. L. and grind it for us. He was heartily applauded. There were a number of the wives and daughters of the members of Goodwill Lodge and a number of invited guests, not members of the order; they all enjoyed the evening immensely and left for their homes well pleased with the evening's entertainment. Great credit is due to the members of the committee of arrangements for the manner in which they performed their part towards making the entertainment a success and maintaining the reputation of the Lodge for its hospitality. Space will not permit giving honor to those who took part in the musical portion of the evening's entertainment, but it can be said that it was well done and members of the lodge feel even grateful to the members of the Plainfield Cornet Band for the part that they contributed toward the success of the entertainment. It is to be hoped that the District meetings will not, be like angels' visits in the place, for their coming awaken the people.

"Comparisons are Odious." Pomeroy's Petroline Plasters are beyond comparison with any of the old slow-acting plasters so much advertised; they are positively original and superior in all respects. Of druggists and R. J. Shaw.

"Oh! if I had only known this in time." Known what? "Known that a simple cold in the head may develop into chronic Catarrh." Well, it isn't too late, for Ely's Cream Balm will cure catarrh even after the sufferer's life has become a burden to him, and he a nuisance to his friends. It is the only radical and thoroughly reliable catarrh cure known. Not a snuff. Not a liquid. Price fifty cents.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

GAY LIFE IN TRENTON.

Life in Trenton during the legislative session is pretty closely portrayed by a chapter from the life of Assemblyman Average, who represents the Eleventh District of Essex county. He is a fictitious character, of course, but although it seems like a paradox to say so, his history is a true one.

On Monday afternoon, being a new member, Average came down on an early train. Had this been his second year he would have waited until night and then arrived in the city just early enough to attend the evening session. Of course he rode on a free pass, but he was aware that the charter of the railroad compelled it to supply him with one, and so he felt no compunctions of conscience.

When he walked up Green street there were little knots of men standing on the sidewalk in front of the Trenton and American Houses. He had half resolved beforehand that he would go to the latter hotel and save fifty cents a day, but as he was passing the Trenton House, one of his colleagues shouted:

"Hello, ain't you going to stay here this week?"

Rather than make a long and unpleasant explanation, he said "Yes," and rushed up the steps and had soon registered for a $3 a day room. Five minutes afterwards he was out on the front piazza again, and the humdrum life of the week had begun. Space had closed in around him and his world lay in three rooms—the Assembly chamber and the bar-rooms of the two principal hotels.

Average killed time during the afternoon in monotonous conversation with members and politicians, wandering back and forth between the American and Trenton Houses, and after supper he went down to the House to attend the Democratic caucus. After it was over a reporter met him in the corridor.

"Well, what did you do?" asked the scribe.

"Nothing at all," he replied, looking very wise.

"But you were in there an hour," insisted the reporter.

"Well, I can't reveal any secrets," replied Average with dignity.

"Then," said the journalist, smiling, "I'll tell you what I did," and sitting down he amazed Average by repeating every motion that had been carried in caucus.

"Will you say that I am incorrect in any particular?" asked the journalist.

"You are as straight as a string," answered Average. "Where did you get it?"

"I can't reveal any secrets," retorted the reporter, laughing.

Average went back into the House to attend the evening session a wiser man, resolved that as the newspaper men would find out everything anyhow, he would gain their good will by removing the padlock from his lips.

The session only lasted a few moments, and after spending a quarter of an hour in a committee room, doing nothing, Average went back to the hotel.

It was too early to go to bed and there were just three occupations open to him. He could saunter around the bar-rooms, play billiards or take a seat at a poker table in a quiet room upstairs.

The latter was the most fascinating and dangerous, but after a short struggle with himself, Average yielded to the importunities of a friend and was soon leaning over the green cloth.

The game was a characteristic one for Trenton. The limit was fifty cents and the ante almost anything below that sum.

There was a fellow with a red necktie on at the table not a member of the Legislature, whose looks Average did not like, but he reflected that his host would hardly allow a sharper in the room, so he plunged madly into the entrancing game.

After paying five cents several times into the "kitty" on pairs, Average pulled a flush and won a dollar on it. Then he got a straight and hauled in fifty cents.

The red neck-tied man was watching him like a cat, but he did not notice it when he filled his hand with three queens at the top. Red Necktie "staid" and in a flutter of excitement Average ran the pot up out of sight. Still Red Necktie staid and raised. At last the Eleventh District representative became disgusted, and calling, exclaimed as he threw down his hand: "Why, I could win all of your money, but I don't want to be hoggish."

He was pulling in the pot when the wearer of the red neck-tie quietly threw down a full hand of kings and yanked the pile of chips over toward himself, taking about two-thirds of all the money Average had brought down to Trenton to pay his expenses.

Not long after that Average's senses having been rendered acute by his loss, he saw Red Necktie dealing from the bottom of the pack and he realized that he was facing one of the sharpers who are accustomed to making new members at Trenton their prey. He would have struck the fellow on the spot, but he reflected that he was a member of the Assembly and could hardly afford notoriety, so he withdrew from the game and went to bed.

The morning session on Tuesday was like the evening session on Monday, very brief. Average was going to dinner after it when he met a party of his colleagues.

"Hello!" hailed one, "come around to Brown's."

"I'm going to dinner," urged Average.

"Oh, pshaw: come around to Brown's?"

So around to Brown's he went.

"Brown's," by the way, is the fictitious name for a saloon on Hanover street, where Average found about half of the members of the Legislature sitting around beer tables.

Average stayed there so long that he barely had time to eat dinner and get back to the House at three o'clock. Another short session.

After supper he found that there was no theatrical performance in Trenton that night. There never is. He determined not to play poker, so he joined a crowd which was making the round of the rooms occupied by the more wealthy and hospitable members of the Legislature.

The crowd consisted of five Assemblymen, one Senator and two officers of the House.

During the earlier hours of the evening they contented themselves with sauntering into one room where open house was kept after another. They usually found a bottle of whiskey, a bottle of gin and an array of beer bottles on nearly every centre table. Average had a drink every time with the rest, and by midnight he was hilarious.

Then an hour or two was spent in breaking in doors, turning out the electric lights, etc., and toward morning the young man found himself sitting down to a poker table again.

Red Necktie was not there, but there was another fellow in his place, and after losing all the money he had, besides some which he had borrowed, Average went to bed.

On Wednesday morning the same routine, diversified only by an encounter with a lobbyist. One of his most intimate friends had met him in a corridor and said:

"You know Seabright?"

"Yes."

"Well, he wants to bet that I won't vote for a certain bill this Winter. Bet that I will; there he comes; I'll return the money to you."

Seabright sauntered up, and after a preliminary conversation, offered to wager $500 that Average's friend would not vote for a certain corporation measure.

"I'll bet you $500 he will," replied Average laying down a check for that amount.

The lobbyist pulled out $500 in bills, covered Average's check, and asked coolly:

"Whose hands shall we place the money in?"

"Anybody's you please," replied Average.

"Well, in your friend's, then."

The money was put in the friend's hand, and Seabright went away smiling. It was not until his friend returned him his check and put the $500 in his own pocket that the disgusted Average understood that he had been a party to a very disgraceful transaction.

On Wednesday afternoon he went to Comptroller Anderson's office and drew $50 of his salary to pay his hotel expenses. Then he came home resolved that he would reform. Next week he will go down and scrupulously follow the stereotyped programme again.—Newark Evening News.

DISADVANTAGES OF FAT.

It is generally supposed that fat people have much more blood than others. On the contrary, they have less. The blood they have, moreover, is really poor, while the fat fills the space which is required even for the circulation of that. The fat have then less vital energy than the thin, not possessing sufficient blood to bring every organ up to its full working power, and the fat hindering what blood there is from flowing freely enough to the organ especially at the moment of action requiring it. Besides all this, the fat obstructs the play of the lungs, so that sufficient air cannot be inhaled to purify the blood; the natural and necessary combustion is thus so interfered with that the functions of the body are hindered. It follows that too much exertion should always be guarded against in the people of large and fatty developments, and too much should never be expected of them.

THE BOOK AGENT'S REVENGE.

A Jersey City politician of a pronounced type was sitting in his office yesterday with his feet cocked up on a desk, meditating upon the confused condition of the city government, when a tall, seedy looking man floated in through the doorway without the formality of knocking. He had a last year's silk hat on his tangled hair and wore a Spring overcoat several sizes too small for him together with an argumentative smile.

"Pleasant day," he began.

"Well, what of it?" demanded the politician.

The smile widened an inch.

"Nothing particular. I've come——"

"Well, you can go again."

"I just want——"

"Not to-day."

"To show you a——"

"Don't want any."

"If you'll only——"

"Didn't I tell you I don't want it. Wouldn't take it, whatever it is, as a gift. There's the door."

"Is this a free country?" asked the visitor reproachfully as he slowly moved toward the door.

"Don't know and I don't care."

"Good day, sir."

"Good day."

"May I call again when you're not so busy?"

The politician took his feet from the desk and there was a dangerous light in his eye as he silently pointed to the door. The man put his hand on the knob.

"Sure you don't want the best——"

The politician sprang to his feet. The man quietly closed the door from the outside. Then opening it again he poked his head in and, with the air of a man who opens a jack-pot on four queens, said radidly:

"I only called to see if you would sample a new brand of whiskey I'm introducing, but as you are so busy——"

The politician smiled. He came forward and stretched out his hand.

"My dear fellow, why didn't you say so before? Come right in."

The stranger pulled a flask from his pocket. Holding it up to the light and eyeing it affectionately he said:

"I'll bet you can't guess a conundrum I'll give you?"

"Can't I? Conundrums are my pie. Let 'er go."

"If"—and here the stranger looked at the other with an expression of fiendish exultation—"if a theatre is packed with dudes can it be called a slim attendance?"

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y
By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.
The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.
THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE
Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.
ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLEEPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.
THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE
Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown.
A short desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points.
All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly attention.

From Pole to Pole
AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has demonstrated its power of cure for all diseases of the blood.
The Harpooner's Story.
New Bedford, June 1, 1883.
DR. J. C. AYER & Co.—Twenty years ago I was a harpooner in the North Pacific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums swollen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and our breath seemed rotten. Take it by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime-juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seen men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and I've seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanac of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ought to know of this, and so send you the facts.
Respectfully yours, RALPH Y. WINGATE.
The Trooper's Experience.
Masseru, Basutoland (S. Africa), March 7, 1883.
DR. J. C. AYER & Co.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure to testify to the great value of your Sarsaparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live in tents. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veldt-sores." I had those sores for some time. I was advised to take your Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.
Yours truly, T. E. BODEN,
Trooper, Cape Mounted Riflemen.

Poetry.

A SHADOW BOAT.

Under my keel another boat
Sails as I sail, floats as I float;
Silent and dim and mystic still,
It steals through that weird nether world
Mocking my power, though at my will
The foam before its prow is curled,
Or calm it lies, with canvass furled.

Vainly I peer, and fain would see
What phantom in that boat may be;
Yet half I dread, lest I with ruth
Some ghost of my dead past divine,
Some gracious shape of my lost youth.
Whose deathless eyes once fixed on mine
Would draw me downward through the brine

TO A SHY YOUNG WOMEN.

False Violet! I sought for thee
That I might know
If thou didst bend so low
Prompted by tender modesty,
—Or show!

I will disclose thy modesty;
Looks that are shy,
Thou know'st, do win mine eye—
(This truth, fair maid, I challenge thee.
Deny!)

And so, since it becometh thee,
And charms my heart
Thou dost affect this part!
Thus, all thy sweet simplicity
Is art!

WHAT LACK WE YET?

BY ROBERT J. BURDETTE.

When Washington was President,
As cold as any icicle,
He never on a railroad went,
And never rode a bicycle.

He read by no electric lamp,
Nor heard about the Yellowstone;
He never licked a postage stamp,
And never saw a telephone.

His trousers ended at his knees,
By wire he could not words dispatch;
He filled his lamp with whale oil grease,
And never had a match to scratch.

But in these days it's come to pass
All work is with such dashing done,
We've all these things—but, then, alas!
We seem to have no Washington.

BETWEEN WINTER AND SPRING.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

That weary time that comes between
The last snow and the earliest green!
One barren clod the wide fields lie,
And all our comfort is the sky.

We know the sap is in the tree—
That life at buried roots must be;
Yet dreary is the earth we tread,
As if her very soul were dead.

Before the dawn the darkest hour!
The blank and chill before the flower!
Beauty prepares this background gray,
Whereon her loveliest tints to lay.

Ah, patience! are we dreamed of it,
Spring's fair new gospel will be writ.
Look up! good only can befall,
While heaven is at the heart of all!

Miscellaneous Reading.

THE MISSING RECEIPT.

My name is Arthur Maitland, and at the opening of this story I counted from a miserly looking bag upon the table in my office—I was a doctor—the sum of one thousand dollars. I rejoiced in every coin, in every crumpled bank note, in every bit of silver—not with a miser's greed, but with the satisfaction with one achieves an object. I was anxious to be rid of it, too, for by work and saving and anxiety about money, foreign to my nature, I had been able to pay off the mortgage on my father's old homestead.

It had been left to me mortgaged down to its full value. This was my last payment. With this old place all my own, I could woo and win Rose Baldwin, whom I loved dearly, and here and now I began life anew. The money was to be paid at the office of the brothers Grace—miserly old twin brothers, whom I never knew apart, and who had the reputation of being hard and grasping, which they merited. Only one of them was in the office when I entered; he was talking with a lady, and simply nodded to me when I sat down. I fancied that he looked disappointed, for my failure to bring this money would have thrown a valuable bit of property into the hands of the firm. The Grace Brothers held the mortgage themselves, and as I waited for him I turned the leaves of a book that lay on the table near me. It proved to be a small Bible, with a book-marker in it, kept there, perhaps, to offer to people who were called upon to take an oath in regard to any matter; perhaps for pious reasons and the private readings of the brothers.

At all events, I glanced down the columns, finding new beauties, as one always must, until Mr. Grace bowed the old lady out and came to me. He took my money, lamented, as was his usual way, the hard times and the failure of business men, and finally gave me my receipt.

Then, as I was about to go, he suddenly called out "wait,"—left me, and returned shortly with the prospectus of a new company, in which a desirable investment could be made, he said. The matter did not interest me much. I had no desire for speculation. To put my little doctor's sign on the door of my house—marry the woman I loved, and strive to make money and fame in my profession, was my ambition. I wanted the money to spend—not to save—to be—to be happy with. It was simple, harmless greed; not a miser's.

I left the office happy. The next morning's paper brought me unexpected news. Mr. Richard Grace had been found dead in his chair in the office, on the previous afternoon. I had never known the brothers apart, as I have said—and I asked myself if the man I had spoken to, could have been so near death without giving any token of it to a physician? I felt in my pocket for the receipt. It was not there. It is never a pleasant thing to lose an important paper.

I knew the Grace Brothers to be far from worthy men. I had paid the money without witnesses. My receipt was all I had to depend on. The only consolation I had was that the loss was not known to any one but myself; and I waited for certain legal papers which were to be sent to me when drawn out. They did not come. I appreciated the fact that with a sharp business man one cannot be too particular, when a notice was served on me, to the effect that legal proceedings would be taken, if the money—one thousand dollars—was not paid at once. I hastened to the office of the Grace Brothers. A painter was at work altering the gold letters on the window pane, so that they should read, "Robin Grace & Co."

Robin Grace sat in his chair at his desk. I fancied him the same person I had spoken to a few days before. I placed the legal paper before him.

"This has been sent to me by mistake," I said.

He looked at it.

"No mistake," he said.

"Then you have the papers to show," he replied.

"A receipt," I said. "The other papers were to be sent to me—by your late brother, I presume."

It had been a sort of a joke that I did not know them apart. I did not like to repeat it under the present circumstances.

"Unbusinesslike," he said, "but the sudden death of my poor brother has upset us. The receipt is sufficient, of course. He made no record of the payment. Perhaps he had no time permitted him. You have the receipt."

I had searched madly for it all the morning. I was obliged to tell him the truth.

"I have mislaid or even lost it," I said. "Are you sure I did not pay it to you?"

A twinkle in his pale blue eye seemed to be that which I had seen in the eye of Richard Grace when he handed me the prospectus. That I had safe enough in my pocket.

Robin Grace gave me an angry and suspicious glance.

"No, sir," he said sternly. "No, sir; you did not. If you paid either of us, you paid my poor brother. You will do well to find that receipt. We shall expect that receipt, sir. You have been most unbusiness like at best. Nor can I believe my brother so forgetful as not to complete the affair. We—shall—demand the receipt—"

He struck his thin, little, blue-veined hand on the table, and I could only reply:

"I will find it."

I returned home. I searched my clothing, my office furniture, my portfolios, my books. I had the ashes in the cellar sifted, and rummaged my waste paper in vain. In a fever of anxiety, nervous and forgetful of everthing but the lost paper, I picked the still warm coals from my gratepan, hoping to find at least its scorched remnant beneath them, burnt my fingers, jumped up hastily, struck my head violently against the mantel piece, and knew nothing more for days—nothing but the receipt, which danced before my eyes in all its pink crispness, with "Brother Grace" at its head, and just over it these words, "Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel."

As I grew better I began to wonder why these words associated themselves with the receipt.

My attendant physician was the father of the girl I loved. I spoke to him of this.

"You were fancying it was burnt when you struck yourself," he said. "That explains it."

"I am sure it does not," I said.

"Don't be sure of anything until you are better," he said.

But I was sure. It was a clue held out to me, I knew, but I could not grasp it.

"I was told that Mr. Grace had been very considerate, but the end came, all the same. The mortgage was forced, the property—my dear old homestead—was gone. There had been an attempt to prove me a trickster. My betrothed wife's father, Dr. Baldwin, had saved me from that; but how? He gave it as his opinion that anxiety on the subject had upset my mind; that my visit to the office was a delusion of mine. I had taken no one into my confidence as to my small economies my privations, the odd jobs of copying, etc., that had bit by bit added to my little hoard. Dr. Baldwin gave it as his opinion that I only fancied that I had paid the money. Only fancied that I had paid it! And I had made matters worse for myself by crying out:

"Never had it! Never had it! Why I see it now—every dollar—every bit of silver! I see the receipt before my eyes, pink, pale pink, signed 'R. Grace,' and above it these words: 'Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel.'

There are times when men should be silent, if to be so they must tear out their tongues.

No one thought me an impostor. No one thought me mad enough to be locked up; but I had been "strange."

Great Heaven! a blow against that marriage would have made any one strange for a while. My patients left me. I earned nothing. I grew shabby. I had no kins-folks. I would not appeal to friends. I almost starved in the desolate office, from which I sold everything by slow degrees.

Finally I left it. I could have had several good positions but for the taint upon my name—mad, mad. It followed me everywhere, that accusation; and I was poor, hollow-cheeked, shabby, wretched. One day, as I sat miserably in the garret which I kept as shelter by some copying work, I looked over a week old newspaper. At the head of the column of marriages I saw these words: "On the ——, Robin Grace, to Rose, only daughter of Dr. Esculapius Baldwin."

I had not seen the girl I loved for many months, but she then seemed true to me. I had cherished hope without knowing it. I could not believe it true. Rose—my Rose—married to my enemy; a miserable old man, without a charm about him. Could she be so mercenary. I wrote to my old friend. This was his answer:

"MY DEAR BOY:—It is true. My daughter acted on my advice. Under the circumstances, you would, I am sure, be willing to give her up. Trust to time, and take good care of yourself. If I can help you, come to me without hesitation.
Your friend, E. B."

I tore the paper in two, and the next morning took service as a common sailor.

It was a good step. My health amended itself. My spirits improved daily. My captain was a man of warm heart and confidence in his own opinion. I told my story; he was indignant. Through his influence I became the physician of the ocean steamer over which he reigned.

I was myself once more. I had passed through the dark waters, but I was myself. And we took many voyages together; and I was a middle-aged man when one day I saw among the passengers these names: "Robin Grace, Esq., lady and maid."

So, I should see them again; I should see her again.

They came on board. She was still pretty but a trifle pinched and faded. He a skeleton of an old man, more like a Mexican mummy than a living creature.

The maid was a prim-looking person, of middle-age. It was not an attractive party.

If that woman had loved me and been true to me, doubtless the change in her face would have touched me. As it was, I think I was glad to see them. She blushed when she passed me, and her husband leaning on her arm as he took the fresh air. I felt nothing but contempt for her. Old Robin Grace had, I was told, been ordered abroad for his health.

In mid ocean, in the dead of night, some one came to call me.

"Doctor," said the messenger, "that old Mr. Grace is taken very bad."

I hurried on my clothes.

The man was "bad," indeed, as we look at things. He was dying.

I told his wife so.

She gasped and turned faint.

"I ought to do something," she sighed. "What ought I to do?" He ought to think of something else, if he's going, besides his money."

"Read the Bible to him, ma'am," said the maid.

"Yes, yes," gasped the frightened woman.

"I brought the little office Bible," said the maid. "It went best into my portmanteau. I wouldn't be to sea without a Bible. I'll get it."

She opened a leather affair of some sort, and took out a Bible with a pink book-marker.

As she handed it to the lady, it slipped between their hands and fell to the floor.

I stooped to pick it up. It had fallen open.

Across the page lay a piece of pink paper, made to adhere by long pressure. It lay directly below the words of Ezekiel, chapter xv., fourth verse:

"Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel."

And the paper bore these words:

"Received from Arthur Maitland the sum of $1,000," etc.

It was the lost receipt. I had placed it there in a fit of abstraction, with my own hands. How we come to do these who can tell? But I know now what my memory of these words, "Behold it is cast into the fire for fuel," meant. I had read them over the top of that receipt, and had shut the cover on them, when Mr. Grace brought me the prospectus to look at.

I remember all now. Too late—too late—too late. Youth, love, ambition, had been "cast into the fire for fuel," and all were gone.

My thousand dollars, with the interest for all these years, was easily recovered from his estate, but I had no desire to regain my lost love, though I had good reason to think I could have had that, if I had cared to ask it. But the experience of years had changed my ideas regarding the value of a woman's love.

A NEW SPIRIT MEDIUM.

John Slater, a spiritualist, has been making a sensation in Brooklyn by revealing secret things to people in the audiences that gather in Avon Hall to witness his "mind-reading." He is the man who proposes to expose Washington Irving Bishop as a bungling trickster. For himself he claims to have what he tells his hearers from spirits through a spirit whom he calls Falling Water—Indian, of course. He stands in full light on a platform occupied besides by a piano, a cabinet organ and a bunch of flowers. He is a tall, pale, frail young fellow, and his performances are thus described:

"There is a young man in the audience," he said, pacing up and down the platform, "who is light-fingered. Not long he took $1.50 from his employer's drawer. In three weeks he is going to be put away. His initial is H., and his firm's name I know."

"Young man," he continued, pointing his finger to a blonde youth in the gallery, "I hear you talking about Harry. That's Harry behind you, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Harry.

"Well, you came here for deviltment, Harry, and I will show you that this is a serious place by warning you about certain things you are doing. You understand?" Harry evidently did, for he blushed and was silent.

Pointing his finger to a young woman in the gallery, he said: "You were here once before, and if you remember I described to you a young man who was with you a great deal. You went home and told him what I said; the man whom I saw is by your side now."

The young woman's companion, a bluff, red-faced fellow, burst into amazed laughter. "That's me," he shouted.

"Did I ever see you, or you me, before?"

"Never."

"Take out that wallet you have in your inside pocket,' said the spiritualist to a black-haired man who sat below. He then told him how much money was in it.

"Correct," said the man before he had opened it.

"There is a $10 bill there."

The man looked over the money. "You missed it that time," he said with a laugh.

"No I didn't," said Slater. "I never miss; look again."

He did. "By George," he said, "there is one here."

"I wish to speak to the young lady who wears glasses," said the spiritualist, turning to another part of the hall, where the reporter sat. "There is one dear to you who has hemorrhages. She coughs, and when the blood comes up she says: 'Oh! it's nothing, it's nothing.' But, God! it's everything."

"My cousin!" gasped the young lady in a frightened whisper, clutching her companion's arm.

"I don't want to frighten you," said the medium; "but you make her take care of herself."

"I see the form of an old man around you," he added to a man in the same part of the house. "He says tell you that he is your grandfather, and that his name is James."

"Well, honestly, I don't know my grandfather's first name."

"You don't? Well, it's your mother's father, and his name is James ——." He gave the rest of the name.

"That is correct."

"Oh, he wants to deliver this message He says 'baby is all right.'"

"Thank you," said the man. "I am glad to hear that."

"Was I ever in your bedroom?" he asked, turning suddenly to a lady in front of him.

"No, sir," said the lady, indignantly.

"Well, I am now. You are stitching on a brown dress and you say, 'It's nothing but stitch, stitch from morning until night.' You have something that looks like a bank book. You want to hide it. You get up and put it in a work-bag and you put that in the closet. Oh! I see it all, don't I?"

"I think you do," said the lady.

In this way he goes from one to another in the audience with wonderful rapidity, giving "tests" sometimes to from one hundred to two hundred in a single night. This puts collusion out of the question. To memorise the string of names, dates, incidents, messages, that he pours out would seem utterly impossible. He says he will do Mr. Bishop's feats without the aid of physical contact, and that Henry Guy Carleton will have to get some other theory than unconscious muscular guidance. Even if mind-reading is admitted, other phases will need further explanation.

* * *

Yankee Girl—Mad! I should say I did come home mad. I shall never go out as a missionary to the Turks again.

Omaha Lady—Would not they listen to your arguments?

"Oh! they listened respectfully enough, but when I talked to one of them about the sin of having so many wives, what do you think the brute said?"

"I am sure I don't know."

"He said if Turkish women were like me, one would be plenty."

A DETECTIVE'S STORY.

It was a very singular, mysterious and complicated case.

In a bare room of an old house in the vicinity of London bridge railway station a man was found dead, hanging by a small cord to a hook driven into the wall, his feet resting on the floor.

He was discovered some days after his death, and by reason of the strong smell sent forth from the decomposing body.

He was a stranger whom no one knew, and why he should have come to that place to commit suicide was a mystery.

He was well dressed, had a gold watch in his pocket, to which was attached a heavy gold chain; he had a diamond stud in his shirt front, and a cluster ring of diamonds on one finger; he also had a pocketbook on his person containing £200 in bank notes.

It was therefore evident that he had not committed suicide on account of poverty, nor been murdered for his money.

Was it suicide, or was it murder?

There was no scrap of paper on his person to tell who the stranger was, nor his motive for the murderous deed, if he did it.

The room, which was an upper story of an old building, the lower portion of which was occupied by a commission agent, contained no article of furniture.

It had been rented about ten days previous to a rather venerable man, who walked a little lame and wore goggles, who said he wanted it for an office for the sale of a patent that would become very popular with sea going people.

When questioned about the patent, he said he would not then explain it, but would have some things on hand for an exhibition in the course of ten days or two weeks.

The dead man was not the one who had taken the room, however; and how and when he got access to the apartment no one knew.

There was an old fashioned fireplace in the room, and some paper ashes in this attracted the attention of a detective, who happened to be no other than my humble self.

In turning over these ashes I discovered two or three little bits of paper not entirely consumed, and they had these words written on them, though now barely distinguishable:

"found her and locked"
"private room"
"meet you"
"station"
"G."

Now, after reading these disjointed sentences, I began to study and ponder them.

Might not this be a portion of a message sent to the dead man to lure him on to the city for the purpose of putting him out of the way?

But for what motive?

Ah, that indeed I could not know—that was something only to be found out after a serious investigation, in case one should be made.

I examined the charred paper as well as I could, and reached the conclusion that what I had read was a part of a telegram which had been sent by somebody from London and received by somebody at a distance and that either the sender or receiver intended to destroy it.

Now, if the deceased had received it, it must have been sent to him by somebody, and that somebody intended to meet him, and probably did meet him, at the railway station.

Well, then, where was that somebody, and why had he allowed his correspondent to visit that out of the way room and commit suicide without ever going near him afterward?

And why should a man come to such a place to kill himself?

And could he have found the room without a guide, and did he get access to it unknown to anyone, if he were not the man who had rented it in the first place?

But then it was certain that he was not that man unless he was in disguise when he hired it; and why had he gone to all that trouble merely to hang himself, when he could have done it quite as effectually in 10,000 better places?

No; looking on it—reason as I might—I could not bring myself to believe that the stranger hanging in that bare room had put the rope around his own neck.

I told the coroner of my belief; but whether he coincided with me or not, it is certain his jury did not, for they brought in a verdict of suicide.

The body was placed in the mortuary for recognition, and I requested that it should be kept there as long as possible, for I had a desire to see what I could do in working up the case.

I started out with the bits of paper I had secured to see if I could find at any telegraph office any messages recently sent off embodying the words I had transcribed in their consecutive order.

I was soon fortunate in getting possession of what I believed to be the original message.

It was addressed to Horace Granger, 187—street, Manchester, and read as follows, the words I found among the paper ashes I enclose in brackets:

I have [found her and locked] her up in a [private room]. Come and use a parent's authority. Take the last train and I will [meet you] at London bridge [station.] G.

Judging from this it was a case of a runaway daughter, whom "G" had followed and captured in London, and whom the anxious father had come on to see and probably to take back with him.

As the dead man appeared to be not far from 32 years of age, it was natural to suppose that no daughter of his could be beyond her teens.

A school girl, perhaps, who had played truant and ran away.

But, then, if she had been caught and locked up it was not reasonable to suppose it had been in that bare room, in a mercantile building that contained no other lodgers.

And then again, if the father had come on and found her, what had become of her, and of "G," who had sent the message, and why had the father remained behind to hang himself?

Or had the girl, assisted by "G," murdered her father?

In any event the affair was one of great mystery, and on privately reporting my discoveries to my chief, I received the welcome order to work it out to the end.

To do this properly I immediately went to Manchester.

The address took me to a large elegant mansion in the suburbs, which led me to believe the owner was a man of means.

I did not ring, enter and state my business, but visited the nearest apothecary, as the man most likely to know the general facts about his neighbors.

"Would you be kind enough to answer a stranger in the city a few questions?" I said to the dispenser of patent medicines.

"Proceed," he replied, looking curiously at me.

"Do you know a gentleman by the name of Horace Granger?"

"I do."

"Has he a family?"

"A wife and a daughter."

"About what age would you judge him to be?"

"About thirty-five."

"And his daughter?"

"Fourteen."

"Is Mr. Granger at home?"

"I cannot say. I have not seen him for more than a week."

"Is his daughter at home?"

"I think not. I think she is away at a boarding school."

"Pardon me, sir, if I seem to be inquisitive," said I; "but I have a reason beyond mere curiosity for all questions I ask, and some time if not just at this moment you shall know all. Can you tell me if he is on good terms with his wife?"

"It is rumored—mind you, I only say it is rumored—that he is jealous of a certain gentleman of whom he has no reason to be, and that he has all confidence in one who may yet turn out to be a treacherous villain."

This was becoming very interesting to me.

"May I venture to ask the name of this second party?"

"Well, sir, as you are a stranger to me," replied the druggist, "I will not mention any name; but if you should ever happen to have business with the head clerk of Horace Granger, it is my opinion you will be within 100 miles of the party."

"Thank you," I said, feeling now pretty sure of my course.

After some further questions I left the apothecary, and repaired to the office of Horace Granger, the street and number of which I had ascertained.

I found a tall, dark, muscular, sinister looking clerk, about 30 years of age, standing at a desk behind the counter.

"Is Mr. Granger in?" I asked.

"No," was the curt reply.

"Will he be in soon?"

Don't know."

"Has he been in to-day?"

"Can't say."

"Will he ever be in again?"

The man started, and looked at me for the first time in a quick, searching way.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"Has he come back with his daughter?" I questioned, in turn.

He again started, came forward, and sharply scrutinized my person; but, as I fancied, with a guilty conscience.

"Who are you? What do you want here? And why these impertinent questions?" he demanded in a fierce way.

"Do you know that Horace Granger is dead?" said I, with a fixed look upon the fellow that made him quail.

"Dead!" he echoed, in well assumed amazement and horror. "Good heavens! How? When? Where?"

"How?—by hanging; when?—six days ago; where?—London," I answered, categorically.

"You take away my breath!" he almost gasped.

"What is your name?" I queried.

"George Gresham."

"Ah, yes, the G.," thought I.

"You knew Mr. Granger went to London nearly a week ago to find his daughter?" I proceeded.

I saw the man turn pale and shudder, as he answered, in a mumbling, confused way:

"I believe—he did—go—somewhere."

"But his daughter was not in London, you know?"

I said this at a venture, for I fancied I had divined the plot.

"Why, how did you know that?—that is—I mean"——

"Never mind," I interrupted. "His daughter was not there, but you were."

"Man!" and his eyes fairly glared.

"You had been there before, in disguise of an old man," I went on, "you had engaged a room in a commercial house to exhibit a patent; you went on again and telegraphed to your employer that his daughter was found and locked up, and to come on the last train and you would meet him at London bridge station. You did meet him; it was in the night; you took him to the room you had previously engaged; you fell upon him; you garroted him; you hung him up to the wall; you burned the telegram, and then you hastened back here to play the role of innocence!"

I went through with my accusations so rapidly, giving the villain no time for consideration or even interruptions—I piled one fact upon another so quickly and surely that I seemed to the guilty wretch to be an eyewitness relating what I had seen; and I brought the whole damning scene so vividly to his mind's eye that, with a face distorted with horror and covered with sweat of mental agony, he staggered back, sank down, and half groaned and half shrieked out:

"Good heavens, have mercy!"

Well, I had my clue; but before I could make much use of it the murderous scoundrel blew out his own brains.

Of course the affair made quite a sensation in certain circles at the time, but was kept as much as possible from the public at large, and was soon hushed up and forgotten by everybody not in any manner interested beyond the mere curiosity and scandal of the hour.

What part the wife had in the wicked plot I do not know.

I, of course, won the distinguished approval of my chief for the part I had taken in the affair, and that proved of much importance to me in the future of my profession.—Hartford Times.

The greatest interest is being manifested by the lovers of dogs in the coming bench show of the New Jersey Kennel club which takes place in the Metropolitan rink, Newark, on March 22 to 25. Already a very large number of entries have been made with the secretary of the organization, Mr. Clinton Wilmerding, No. 17 Murray street, New York city, and by the time the entry book closes on March 8th it is thought that the number of dogs entered for exhibition will greatly exceed that of last Spring's most successful show. The committee this year have endeavored, as far as possible, to leave the rut in the selection of judges, therefore many new men have been asked to adjudicate in the various classes. The old stagers who have been judging for past years have been supplanted by a different lot of experts. Among those who have already consented to judge are: K. E. Hoff, of Arlington, N. J., for St. Bernards; Chas. E. Wal[illegible]k, of New York city, for mastiffs; J. [illegible]entz, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for pointers and setters; S. R. Hemingway, of New Haven, Conn., for spaniels; L. and W. Rutherford, of New York city, for fox terriers; Norman Elmore, of Granby, Conn., for beagles and bassets; J. F. [illegible], of Toronto, Canada, for Newfoundlands, great Danes, foxhounds, deerhounds, greyhounds, pugs, dachshunds, bull dogs, bull terriers, black-and-tan terriers, Irish terriers, Dandie Dinmonts, Bedlingtons, poodles, and miscellaneous and selling classes; Colin D. Anderson, of New York city, for skyes, Yorkshires, King Charles, Blenheim spaniels and toy dogs. The collie judges will be announced in a few days, as the Collie club is now considering the matter, Mr. Mercier being unable to act. The veterinarians for the show will be H. Clay Glover, of New York city, and W. H. Arrowsmith, of Jersey City. James Lindsey, of Jersey City, will superintend.

SENATORIAL.

We desired the election of Leon Abbett to the Senate of the United States.

Why.

Because we knew him to be an outspoken and unflinching Democrat, an intrepid and able defender of popular rights, and one who, as Senator, would have proven himself a brilliant representative of New Jersey and an honor to American statesmanship.

The Republicans in the Legislature evidently did not want a gentleman of Leon Abbett's commanding talents and influence as the successor of Senator Sewell, and being unable to elect one of their own men, bargained with a few Democrats who saw fit to oppose the ex Governor on personal grounds, notwithstanding the fact that he was the regular party nominee, and that they had been sent to Trenton as loyal Democrats.

The arrangement held together and resulted in the Senatorial election of Rufus Blodgett, of Monmouth.

We have not a word to utter against Senator Blodgett. A life long Democrat, an honest, intelligent and plain-appearing man, and a citizen of unsullied character and sound practical judgment, we entertain the fullest confidence that he will discharge all the duties of the high public position to which he has been legally called, to his own individual credit and for the best interests of the people.

We wanted Abbett.

We cheerfully accept Blodgett.

It is unnecessary for us to "read a lesson" to the Democrats of Union county for the defeat just sustained at the polls, whereby the Republicans have gained control of the Board of Freeholders, and with that victory, the distribution of official patronage. They ought to know that their common political enemy, the Republican party, is continually on the lookout to regain lost power, and while seemingly asleep, only awaits the opportunity to spring upon its unwary foe, who, while feeling secure in its recently acquired power, indulges in wrangling and recrimination. The lesson is a severe and serious one. There is a big fight looming up in the distance. Next Fall the voters of Union county will be called upon to vote for a State Senator, County Clerk, Surrogate, Sheriff and Assemblyman. Democrats, will you open your eyes to that fact?

Now don't it seem strange that after denouncing the Democrats for "stealing" the seats in Camden and Mercer and calling them the worst villains in the world, the Republicans should strike their colors and vote for a Democrat for United States Senator? They should have waited until next November and tried conclusions again.

The State Gazette would like to make it appear that the object the Republicans had in view on the vote for U. S. Senator, was to create dissensions among factions of the Democrats, and thus beget discord among them. It won't work, however. The Democrats are wise enough to see through this little scheme. They'll all be that when election day rolls around.

Frederick, Maryland, recently witnessed an exciting public exhibition. It was neither a walking match nor roller-skating carnival, but a noble pie-eating contest between seven colored gentlemen for the offered prize of a suit of clothes. Sheriff Stiles, of Union county, has become pugnacious. He tells the Board of Chosen Freeholders that it is not in their province to appoint a Jail Warden, but rather his, in accordance with the provisions of an old law found on the statute books of the State. The Board of Freeholders have heretofore appointed the Warden and had charge of the jail accounts. If the State Legislature will pass a bill now before it, they will still have that privilege and honor. Go slow, George.

The question has arisen as to the President's power to appoint the Inter-State Commerce Commissioners after the adjournment of the Senate. Some of the Senators argue that the Constitution does not empower the Executive to appoint, during vacation, to a newly created office which is to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Others hold that there is no difference between filling a new office and a vacancy that may occur during a vacation of the Senate, and that there are decisions by Attorney Generals covering the point.

Returns of the recent German elections for members of the Reichstag develop a curious array of partisan names, as for instance—"Conservatives, Imperialists, Centrists, Septennate Centrists, National Liberals, New German Liberals, Socialists, Alsatians, Guelphs and Poles." The proposition to make the vote of eight out of twelve jurors conclusive shows a radical misunderstanding of the principle upon which the jury system is established. The idea of requiring unanimity is to give the prisoner the benefit of every reasonable doubt. When twelve men agree, the law assumes that the evidence must have been such as to strike all minds alike, so that if the jurors had been a hundred instead of twelve in number, they would have still been unanimous. This theory is overthrown when the verdict is referrable to a majority vote, and the element of doubt is at once introduced. It won't do.—North American.

The Freeholders elected Tuesday last, throughout the State, who supposed they had been chosen for two years, are doomed to disappointment. Gov. Green withheld his signature from the bill until Wednesday, giving as his reason that the people who voted for the Freeholders supposed they were only electing them for a term of one year, and cast their ballots with that understanding. To sign the bill for a two-year term would, in his judgment, be taking an unfair advantage of the citizens. As the law only takes effect from the time it is signed by the Governor, the Freeholders elected on Tuesday can only hold office for one year.

The President has determined upon three of the five Inter-State Commerce Commissioners. They are Col. Wm. R. Morrison, of Illinois, Chairman, and General Bragg, of Alabama, Democrats, and Judge Cooley, of Michigan, Republican. Judge Cooley, who was at first loath to give up his present position as Receiver of the Wabash Railway, and so declined the Commissionership, has, it is understood, been induced to reconsider and to accept the place as one of the Republicans on the Commission. The President has great difficulty in finding the other two members of the Commission. One preferably the Republican, he would like to take from New England, the other (Democrat) he would like to take from the Middle States. It is well understood now that he will not be taken from New York. Probably he will be taken from Pennsylvania or New Jersey, if the proper man can be found.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The members of both branches of the Legislature settled down to business Monday night last. In the Senate the following petitions were offered:

By Senator Griggs, a petition in favor of the passage of H. 31, requiring prison-made goods to be stamped accordingly. It came from Passaic county residents and the list of subscribers was many yards in length.

By Mr. Livingston, petition of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in favor of a separate prison for females.

By Mr. Large, a similar petition.

By Mr. Carter, two petitions in favor of the bill reducing the legal rate of interest to 5 per cent.

If such an instrument be filed the State agrees to surrender its right to take the property of the company under the express power reserved in its charter.

It is legal to catch trout now in New Jersey. They must be over six inches in length, however.

It is to be hoped that the numerous bills presented to the Legislature, affecting the game and fish laws of this State, will remain under the member's desks until the session is over. There is none of them beneficial to the protection of game.

Township Elections.

The Republicans of Union county seem to have had things all their own way in the township elections on Tuesday last. The result is that the Board of Chosen Freeholders has a Republican majority. This state of affairs is attributed to the fact that there was an apathy among Democrats, who failed to take any interest in the election, also differences among the Labor element. Certainly there was no great effort made by the Republicans, except perhaps in Fanwood township, where for some reason, Director G. W. L. Martine was defeated for freeholder by twenty majority. This is to be regarded as very unfortunate, as Mr. Martine has such a thorough knowledge of the affairs of the county and has made so efficient an official that there seemed no reason to defeat him. His successor, Mr. Kyte, is a gentleman of ability, and well qualified to act in the capacity chosen. His large majority over so formidable an antagonist as Mr. Martine shows that the voters of the Township repose confidence in him. The result in other parts of the county are as follows:

Clark, ex-Freeholder Thompson, Rep., his opponent was John A. Halliday, Dem., who is the present incumbent.

In Cranford William Littell, Rep., defeated John Ibrmann, Dem., who is at present in the Board.

In Fanwood George Kyte, Rep., defeated Director Martine. Mr. Martine has been a member of the Board eleven years continuously.

In Linden William T. West, Rep., was re-elected.

In New Providence S. P. Debbie, Dem., was returned.

In Springfield J. Martin Roll, Rep., was returned.

In Summit Mr. Hicks, Rep., will take the place of Wilmont M. Chapman, Dem. Mr. Hick's opponent was Mr. Fish.

In Union Geo. W. Doty, Dem., is returned.

J. T. Pierson, Rep., was re-elected in Westfield.

Plainfield re-elected J. F. Hubbard and A. Vanderbeek, Republicans, last Fall, and Rahway, it is expected, will return William Howard and George Wright, Republican, at the election next month. Elizabeth is represented by three Democrats and one Republican. The only Democrats outside of Elizabeth will come from Union and New Providence.

The Republicans also carried nearly all the other township offices in the different townships.

The present Board of Chosen Freeholders stands nine Democrats and eight Republicans; the new Board will stand five Democrats and twelve Republicans.

The whole Republican ticket was elected in Fanwood. The majority of Mr. Kyte over Mr. Martine for Director is twenty. An appropriation for $3,000 for crushed stone was lost by 7 maj. The following are the officers elected. Town clerk, Norman Dunn; freeholder, George Kyte; justice of the peace, Thomas Cleaver; assessor, John Robison; collector, D. H. Terry; town committee, (three years). Lewis W. Miller; commissioners of appeal, Henry S. Littell, Henry Cook, John Melick; surveyors of highways, Frank Hosinger, George Van Ness; overseer of poor, David P. Hall; pound keepers, Edward Terry, William G. Kelly, Frank Hosinger, Myron Young, Andrew Schuyler; judge of election, Edward Miller; inspector of election, Joseph Clark.

In North Plainfield there was no Democratic ticket placed in the field. True, there was a caucus called and a set of Borough and Township officers nominated. The declination of most of them to serve, left it optional with the Democrats to place an incomplete ticket in the field or let the Republicans have it all their own way with their large majorities. The latter plan was adopted. The following are the officers elected:

BOROUGH ELECTION.

Mayor—Justus H. Cooley.

Councilmen, three years—Henry McGee and Alex. Milne.

Judge of election—F. W. Bird.

Inspector of election—W. D. Mahaffee.

For borough purposes $1,000 were ordered raised. For roads, $1,500.

TOWNSHIP ELECTION.

Judges, first district, L. B. Woolston, second district, H. J. Martin.

Inspectors, first district, F. M. Whiteley, second district, S. W. Wakefield.

Clerks, first district, J. A. Peebles.

Town clerk—W. D. Craig.

Assessor—Isaac Brokaw.

Collector—H. N. Spencer.

Overseer of Poor—Daniel I. Smalley.

Justices of the peace—C. E. Austin, A. Coddington, (5 years) F. N. Brown. (1 year).

Chosen Freeholder—W. E Jones.

Town committee—Harrison Coddington.

Commissioners of Highways—M. Powers, Geo, Conover.

Commissioners of appeal—Theo. Rutledge, Jacob Long, R. G. Stivers.

Constables—Job Coddington, P. W. Lutes.

Pound Keepers—Samuel Hudson, J. Mair, jr., James Hurley, H. E. Bateman.

For repairs of roads $800 was voted, for support of poor $1,200, and for salary of town committee $50 each.

In Somerset county the Republicans had it mostly their own way. In Bridgewater Smith (R.) for assessor has 367 maj.; Brokaw, (D) collector, 285; Wyckoff, (R.) freeholder, 193; Dohoney, (D) committee, 62; Van Derveer (D) clerk, 185. In Warren the Democrats elected their full ticket by a good majority. Hillsborough went Republican, except Peter Sutphen (D.) town committee. Franklin elects a Democratic freeholder, collector, assessor and poor overseer. The Somerset county board of freeholders will stand as follows: Bedminster, J. E. Heldebrant, D.; Bernards, George Ballentine, D.; Branchburg, W. E Haver, R.; Bridgewater, W. H. H. Wyckoff, R.; Hillsborough, Aug. Bulmer, R.; Franklin, Henry B. Skillman, D.; Montgomery, J. M. Vreeland, R.; North Plainfield, W. E. Jones, R.; Warren, Fred. Kirch, D.

The Republicans were successful in Piscataway township, Middlesex county. The following are the officers elected: South District—Judge of election, William, Josiah T. Maitland; inspectors, William T. Dayton, Bethune Dunham; poll clerk, Reune B. Manning. North District—Judge of election—Leonard T. Coles; inspectors, Asa D. Pope, Nathan Blackford; poll clerk—Chas. A. Coriell; town clerk, Reune B. Manning; assessor, Abner S. Coriell; collector, Martin D. Nevius; freeholder, H. S. Garretson; town committee, Alvah Gray, two years, W. L. Smalley, three years; surveyors of highways, S. S. Giles, Albert L. Boice; poor overseer, Calvin Drake; commissioners of appeal, A. L. Storms, S. B. Manning, A. I. Coddington; justices of the peace, Eugene Runyon, in place of N. Vars, W. H. Manning; pound masters, P. W. Garretson, S. B. Manning, Robt. Lowrie, S. R. Blackford, J. P. Steile, A. Harris, J. V. D. Field, S. B. Dayton, S. F. Randolph; constables, R. L. B. Pierce three years, Steven Doty two years, Ziba Osmun one year. Borough of Dunellen to have their pro rata of small bridge money.

The Republicans have made gains all over the State. In Essex county the new Board of Freeholders will be Republican by a large majority. In some of the towns of the county strong fights were made by the Labor party. In Middlesex county there is a probability of the Democrats having a majority in the Board of Freeholders. The Democrats of Passaic made gains.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

Has been before the public fifteen years, and wherever introduced during that time has, on account of its purity and great merit, superseded very largely all other similar preparations for producing delicious, light and healthful bread material.

The manufacturers of CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER, recognizing the fact that the public have a right to know what they are using as food, have for many years published their formula, which has been confirmed by analyses made by the Government chemists, State chemists and leading scientists of various States, showing that their Baking Powder contains only purest grape cream of tartar, bicarbonate of soda and a little wheat flour, the latter to preserve the strength of the powder, and that it does not contain ammonia, alum, lime, or any adulteration whatever. The public thus has not only the assurance that CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER is "absolutely pure," but also a knowledge of all the ingredients that enter into its manufacture. This latter information is too often withheld by other baking powder companies.

The scurrilous advertisements of rival manufacturers will not deter the citizens of this vicinity from giving an article so flatteringly recommended as CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER the trial which its merits so justly deserve.

Gospel Services at the Warren Mission.

The Gospel services began at the Warren Mission over a week ago have continued with increasing interest to the present time, and are to be held during this week, and probably for one or more weeks to come, with the exception of Wednesday nights, when all the workers are engaged in their regular church services.

On Sabbath evening, there was a very large audience present. The large choir of ladies and gentlemen nearly filled the ample seating capacity of the enlarged platform, and the singing was led as usual by Mr. M. M. Dunham, the audience frequently joining in the chorus, and in the songs themselves.

The devotional services were under the charge of Rev. W. D. Bridge, who brought the attention of all to the startling words of Revelation, "Behold I stand at the door and knock." Every heart is a door; at every door the Saviour knocks; they who "will" open and admit him; human freedom permits resisting men to debar the loving Christ; decision is a matter of terrible momentousness; shall all now admit the waiting Lord.

An after-meeting was held, and several asked prayers for themselves, or their friends. Several of our prominent citizens were present, taking part actively in the meeting by words of exhortation or prayer.

Monday evening, the service was in charge of Mr. Perine, one of the senior teachers of the Warren Mission Sabbath School. Many forcible and tender illustrations of the power of converting grace were brought out by the leader and by several men and women who spoke in the meeting, and the after-meeting conducted by Rev. Mr. Bridge, was a season of thoughtful and earnest self-examination.

On Tuesday evening, Rev. Mr. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church preached a practical and powerful sermon from the conversion of the Philippian Jailor. The question: What is it to be converted? was plainly answered, and amply illustrated. Several of the proofs of conversion given were, believing, undoing past evil as far as possible, doing good, taking public stand for Christ, Christian rejoicing, faithfulness. Prayers were offered by Rev. Mr. Bridge, Rev. Mr. Richards, Capt. Ohlstrom and others. The large choir sang "Christ Receiveth Sinful Men" "Let the Savior In" "Whosoever Will" etc.

The after-meeting led by Rev. Mr. Bridge proved one of the most fruitful in consecrations of Christians to the work, a large number declaring their intentions to converse during the week with at least one unconverted person with earnest desire to bring them to Christ. Many requests for prayer were presented.

Meetings will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and on Sabbath evening. Song service led by the Dunham Choristers at 7:30; Gospel service at 7:50 each evening. All are invited.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is also the only one that will cleanse the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of

ANÆMIA,

A wretched condition indicated by Pallid Skin, Flaccid Muscles, Shattered Nerves, and Melancholy. Its first symptoms are Weakness, Languor, Loss of Nerve Force, and Mental Dejection. Its course, unchecked, leads inevitably to insanity or death. Women frequently suffer from it. The only medicine that, while purifying the blood, enriches it with new vitality, and invigorates the whole system, is

REV CHAS H. POOL, of Raritan, will explain the Bible lesson at the Trinity Reform church to-night, 11th inst.

NEXT Thursday evening in St. Mary's church, the Rev. J. F. McElhiney, D. D., will deliver a lecture on "Memories of the Old Land." Admission twenty-five cents.

THE Park House has passed into the management of Mr. Evan Jones, its owner, who ran it so successfully and satisfactorily during the early years of its existence.

ON that same principal of "all or none," possibly, the Council granted Mr. Carey's two applications for truck licenses that were presented with a number of others, also granted, last Monday evening.

A PROMINENT Baltimore physician estimates that one hundred bodies are used every Winter for dissection by the 682 medical students in that city, half of which, he thinks, are stolen from the city graveyards.

PLAINFIELD'S spreading reputation as one of the most advanced and enterprising of suburban cities, should never be surrendered. We want no ill-fed horses wearing out our streets pulling bob-tail cars that our citizens would hardly care to patronize.

THE law regarding newspapers says if a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publishers may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

A SPECIAL service of praise is being arranged and rehearsed for the last Sunday evening of the present month, to be given in the Crescent avenue church. The best of the many church choirs of the city will be selected to form a chorus of about twenty-five voices.

WE publish in full in our report of the Council's proceedings, the protest of a minority of the property owners on Broadway against the granting of any permission to run horse cars through that street. No more should they be permitted upon any street.

THE residents of Washington Valley and vicinity are requested to meet to-morrow at the home of Samuel Voorhees, Esq., of Warrenville, to consider a proposed railroad route from Peapack to Plainfield by way of Pluckamin, Martinsville, Warrenville and Washingtonville.

ABOUT midnight of Friday of last week a building occupied as a paint shop by Mr. James Smith in the rear of his dwelling on Elm street, was entirely consumed by fire. The loss was covered by insurance to the amount of $400. The premises are supposed to have been fired by an incendiary.

HERE is a puzzle about two boys who started out to sell apples: One sold thirty at two for a cent, and the other sold thirty at three for a cent. The next day one boy sold the same number of apples (sixty) at the average price of the other two boys—five for two cents—yet he was one cent short of the amount received by the other two boys.

ONE of the handsomest stores in the city is that just opened at No. 30 West Front street, by Mr. Harry Warner. The interior has been entirely refitted, and stocked with a large line of most desirable clothing for men, youths and boys, and a fine assortment of furnishings. The extension show windows built in the new front are most artistically dressed with a display of elegant goods.

A SERIES of eight lectures on Homer and Greek art will be given at Seminary Hall Saturday and Monday evenings, March 12 and 14, 19 and 21, 26 and 28, and April 2 and 4. A limited number of course tickets at three dollars each may be obtained at Ellis's. The lecturer, Prof. Thomas Davidson, stands so high as a platform speaker and a writer on Greek art, that a rare treat is assured those who attend.

THE programme of the third of the Y. M. C. A., series of Philharmonic Concerts will appear in our issue of next week, and when we say it fully equals in promise those of the past, the expectation of the public will be raised to the heights, and ultimate realization will follow on the evening of the 22d inst. Miss Ella Earle who appeared here with so much success in the early days of her career, is the soprano of the occasion, and Mme. Eugenia de Roode will be the piano soloist. The selections of both are specially pleasing.

THE Young People's Society of Trinity Reformed church entertained the Young People's Society of the Congregational church, in the lecture room of the former, Tuesday evening. The occasion was a return of like hospitalities that were recently extended by the latter. The Rev. Mr. Goodrich was present, and between two hundred and three hundred others that included the hosts of the evening and their guests. The pleasures offered consisted of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, games, refreshments and a general social success.

THE Mayor and Council of North Plainfield met in regular meeting Friday evening of last week. The usual monthly reports were presented from the Borough Collector and the Clerk, and also a semi-annual review by Counsel John H. Jackson of the rise, progress and fall of such legal proceedings as had been instituted by the corporation. Mr. Charles Wann was nominated by the Mayor and confirmed as a member of the Board of Health for the unexpired term of Mr. W. E Mattison, resigned. The Council adjourned until this evening.

AT Appleton, Wis., all the street cars are run by electricity. The electricity is generated by a dynamo at the river some half mile distant where it is driven by a water wheel. All the cost of power for the whole three and a half miles of road is the wages of one man to watch the water wheel and dynamo. The local paper speaks of the advantages as follows: "The main points of superiority of an electric road over one actuated by animal power are: first, economy, the cost of running the road being about 50 per cent. less than by animal power; secondly, the number of miles run by the same car, a day's work for a horse car being sixty miles, and of an electric car being ninety miles; and, thirdly, increased patronage on account of rapid transit, neatness of cars and safety." The company have voted to increase the number of cars and have ordered the necessary apparatus for the increase of the Van Depoele Electric M'f'g Co. of Chicago, whose system they use, and who are petitioners to the Plainfield Council for the right to build a road in this city.

OH, for a street railway!

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening and the settlement of the question whether it shall be license or no license during the year '87.

IN the Senate, Monday night last, Mr. Thompson introduced a bill, No. 128, to repeal the act to incorporate the Plainfield F. Department.

CALL at Vanderbeek's, 33 Park avenue, and see the finest lot of new upright pianos ever presented to the Plainfield public. Now is your time to buy.

WE trust the Council will make haste in passing the ordinance regarding the numbering of the streets. Upon the speedy completion of this desired object, depends largely the early introduction of a public benefit, the general P. O. delivery system.

IN another column Howard A. Pope, successor to Pope Bros., calls the attention of the public to his new stock of carpets, mattings, dress goods, &c. As he has had an experience of twenty-five years, in the business, we can recommend him to the public for anything in his line.

NOTICE has again been served upon the Union County Board of Freeholders by Sheriff Stiles to the effect that they shall surrender to him the control of the County Jail. The Sheriff has the law at the back of his demand, but as the Board has the power to fix the amount to be expended in the care of the prisoners, it would prove anything but remunerative to Mr. Stiles if that body chose to be particularly economical.

THE Fire Board met in regular meeting, Tuesday evening, and provided for the coming election of two members, the raising of $10,000, the salary of the Secretary, and the compensation of the Collector and the Treasurer. The election is to be held April 11th. Friday evening of next week was fixed upon to hear the evidence in the several charges made against two of the department's drivers by a member of another company.

AN informal reception was tendered the new Secretary of the Association, Mr. J. H. Manning, in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Tuesday evening. A large attendance was present, and the programme of singing and instrumental music was much enjoyed. Secretary Manning, by his affable nature and special fitness for the position, is destined to prove one of the most efficient and popular officers the Association has ever been favored with.

THE fun of a "Rag Baby" is not so generally distributed into the hands of a number of the characters as in the "Tin Soldier." Frank Daniels in the former play is the only mirth provoking member of the caste, but he's funny enough to make up the lack in the others. Even "the move on him" is a bit of comedy. In the "Tin Soldier," however, "Rats," and "Violet," and "Patsey," and "Canby," and last, but not least, "Carrie Story," are all parts of the whole.

THE Parlor Concert announced to be given at the residence of Mr. J. W. Jackson this (Thursday) evening, will be given at the residence of George C. Martin, Esq., corner of Eight street and Central avenue—the change of place occasioned by reason of sickness in Mr. Jackson's family. The artists who will appear are Mrs. Carl Feininger, soprano, Master Leo Feininger, violin, and Mr. Oscar B. Smith, flute. After the concert refreshments will be served. Tickets $1.00.

THE local editor of the Flemington Democrat is so Jeffersonian in his tastes that he dotes on School ma'ams and confesses the following: "This town is a little slow in some things. It may be possible that it will some day learn to love that high-toned, ear-splitting operatic singing, but at present the majority is decidedly in favor of a simple ballad like 'Only a Pansy Blossom,' or 'White Wings.' There is a plaintive, charming melody about such songs that knocks the four-story operatic strains clear across the ocean."

SOME day we trust a method of protection will be devised for managers of theatres and music halls against the dishonorable but unpunishable ways of certain members of the profession who cancel or change their dates at the last moment if they so please. Mme. Janish once refused to appear here because the advanced sale upon the day set did not suit her; and now Washington Irving Bishop is suddenly taken sick after already once postponing the date of his appearance. If he is present next Monday evening as his manager now promises, all will be forgiven, but Mr. Bishop has been known before (whenever he feels particularly prosperous) to refuse to appear and without a true cause.

MR. WASHINGTON IRVING BISHOP, the marvelous "mind reader," is said to have been seriously ill, but is rapidly recovering, and will positively be seen in his wonderful entertainment at Music Hall next Monday night. He will repeat on that occasion the feats which have attracted enormous audiences to Wallack's Theatre, New York, recently, and which have aroused so much discussion in scientific circles. "The detection of Crime," an experiment first suggested to Mr. Bishop by the Czar, is one of the most singular features of Mr. Bishop's performance. "Stolen or Lost Articles Recovered," which is down on the programme for Monday night, is a feat which has baffled the scientific minds of Europe for years. The programme is a very lengthy one. A committee of the most prominent citizens will be called to the stage to closely watch Mr. Bishop's proceedings. Seats now on sale.

More Earthquakes Predicted.

The prediction by Dr. Falb, the meteorologist, who foretold the recent earthquake, for the remainder of this year, has been issued. The forecast is as follows: There will be considerable atmospheric disturbances, heavy gales and rain, possibly accompanied by shocks of earthquakes on nineteen days of the present year, March 22 and 23, April 7 and 8, May 5, 6 and 7, June 3, 19 and 20, September 17 and 18, October 16, November 14 and 15 and December 12, 13 and 14.

A Warning to Drivers.

The City vs. Theodore Smith, a case brought for violation of the ordinance prohibiting fast driving, was tried in the City Court before a jury on Tuesday. The conflict of testimony was appalling, the City's witnesses stating that the defendant was driving an eight-mile-an-hour gait, and an equal number of the defendant's witnesses swearing that the gait was an ordinary traveling gait which was perfectly safe. The City's witnesses swore that a collision was caused by the fault of the defendant, and the other side swore that the collision was the fault of the pedestrian. It was a question of the credibility of witnesses.

Marshall Becker of the Borough, a witness for the defendant, caused some merriment by stating that he remembered the occurrence distinctly because he had just remarked to a companion "we better move on, or Pat Lynch will take us in." The laugh was on the Marshall however, when the Corporation Counsel addressing the jury and attacking the credibility of the witness insisted that the Marshall virtually stood a confessed law breaker. His remark concerning being "taken in by police officer Lynch" before that officer had noticed the witness was a plain case of the wicked fleeing when no man pursueth, and there was good authority for believing in the wickedness of such a man.

The jury brought in a verdict in favor of the City, but recommended the defendant to the mercy of the Court.

Craig A. Marsh for the City; Walter L. Hatfield for the defendant.

Young Men, Attention!

Is there any reason why you cannot attend the Young Men's Meeting to be held in the Y M C A Hall, Monday evening next? The evening's exercises will consist in part of hearty singing and short talks by young men. The meeting will open with a service of song at 8 p. m. sharp and close promptly at 9 o'clock. Every young man, whether a member of the Association or not, is cordially invited to be present. The meeting will be led by the General Secretary.

Grand Army Matters.

Department Commander John L. Wheeler has fixed his headquarters at Red Bank, where all communications will reach him. All official communications should be addressed to Assistant Adjutant General Samuel N. Rockhill, at Bordentown. Commander Wheeler has appointed the following department staff, in addition to the A. A. G.: Assistant quarter master general, Charles F. Kuhler, Post 29, Paterson; inspector, Henry C. Terhune, Post 61, Red Bank; chief mustering officer, A. M. Matthews, Post 12, Orange; judge advocate, R. B. Seymour, Post 3, Jersey City. He has appointed this personal staff: Chief of staff, E. F. Brainard, Post 11, Newark; ordnance officer, J. P. Langstaff, Post 66, Washington; commissary of subsistence, Lewis E. Wells, Post 32, Atlantic City; provost Marshall, F. G. Holmes Post 50, Phillipsburg; assistant provost marshall, W. G. White, Post 10, Vineland; aid de camp, L. V. Richards, Post 25, Trenton. Other appointments will be made in future orders. It is now in order for each post commander to recommend a comrade for appointment on the staff as aid de camp or assistant inspector. The per capita tax has been raised to seven cents. The new commander urges increased activity. It is generally acknowledged that he has selected an admirable assistant adjutant general in the person of genial "Sam" Rockhill.

Music and Readings.

The last of the W. C. T. U. Course of Entertainments was given at Reform Hall, Tuesday evening, to one of the largest audiences of the series. The programme consisted of readings by Mr. Charles F. Underhill, and vocal music by Miss Holmes and Messrs. R. T. Barnes, Elmer Runyon and A. J. Gavett. What we have before said in these columns in criticism of Mr. Underhill we can only repeat, because he shows no improvement. He has unfortunately appeared in public in this city, too often. His dialect readings are generally bad, but "The Sleeping Car" lost none of its effect by his imitation of the porter. The other selections deserved better treatment out of respect for their age, at least. Miss Holmes' first solo was just so sweetly sung as only an exceedingly flexible voice like her's can sing it. She was enthusiastically encored, and would also undoubtedly have received a recall to her other solo had it not been placed with the worse possible taste at the very end of the programme. Miss Utter was her accompanist, and Mrs. B. T. Barnes accompanied Mr. Barnes and Mr. Runyon in a duett about the moon that was remarkably well rendered. These gentlemen should be heard oftener together if they can always give such satisfaction. We have never heard Mr. Barnes, especially, sing with more confidence. Mr. A. J. Gavett's two solos were like successes, and the apparent gratification of the audience was most deserving. Miss Gavett's accompaniments, as were the others, were apt and skillful.

The Light Was Hidden Under A Bushel.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In a recent issue you print quite too obscurely a brief comment on the nastiness of our so-called macadamized streets. The subject needs plainer treatment than you give it. Let any sensible man compare the condition of Front, Seventh or Fifth streets, or of Park avenue from Seventh to Front street, with Park avenue beyond Seventh street, and draw his own conclusions. It is true that Park avenue from Seventh street to city line was paved by a much more costly system than the other streets named, so costly that it would not have been practicable to have applied it to such an extent as the top dressing system has been applied in our city, within the same space of time. But as to the streets named, while the mire is perhaps not as deep as was a few years ago, they are in a very nasty condition, and by no means what they should be for the outlay that has been made. The reason whereof is plainly shown in your too-modest paragraph, namely, the use of so-called gravel mixed with the crushed stone in such liberal proportions by our worthy roadmaster. This "gravel"—which crushes to true Jersey mud in a little time—it is claimed serves to bind the crushed stone, which is otherwise too hard to pack. The claim is nonsense. The stone used for the body of the road, say of "nut size," needs only to be top dressed with fine crushed stone, wet down and rolled, and there is no trouble about its packing. There are plenty of instances of this about town, and it is certain, on the other hand, that your writer is correct in saying the red gravel is put on only to be scooped up and hauled off later. Jersey mud will not make good roads, and it is simply disgusting that we have nothing better to show for our outlay than such roadways as Seventh, Fifth and Front streets, and Park avenue from Seventh to Front. Several times this Winter and Spring the latter has for long spaces looked like a huge bed of soft mortar. Stop your way through this beyond Seventh street and what a contrast. It is like passing from barbarism to civilization at a step. Speak plainer, Messrs. Editors, next time you treat this subject.

Respectfully,
H. P. REYNOLDS.

Our National Guard.

Adjutant-General Stryker's report has been made public. It states that, from the report of the inspector general of the last annual muster and inspection, the strength of the National guard is shown to be 294 commissioned officers, 3,441 enlisted men, a total of 3,735. This is an increase over the strength reported last year of ten officers and 188 enlisted men. A new battalion, consisting of two companies, has been organized and mustered into the service, and designated the Third battalion. The Ninth regiment has been disbanded and the field officers retired. The company officers and enlisted men were temporarily detached and afterwards formed into a regiment called the Second regiment. No companies have been disbanded during the year. The force now consists of fifty-two companies of infantry and two Gatling gun companies, organized into seven regiments and three battalions and comprised in two brigades and one division.

Assistant Adjutant-General Dickinson furnishes a statement showing the distribution of the reserve militia of the state by counties, estimated approximately from the figures furnished by the last state census: Atlantic, 5,212; Bergen, 8,400; Burlington, 12,086; Camden, 17,562; Cape May, 2,450; Cumberland, 9,119; Essex, 46,799; Gloucester, 6,270; Hudson, 55,117; Hunterdon, 7,853; Mercer, 16,218; Middlesex, 12,950; Monmouth, 12,450; Morris, 10,626; Ocean, 2,411; Passaic, 18,312; Salem, 5,603; Somerset, 5,874; Sussex, 4,863; Union, 13,828; Warren, 8,231. Total, 284,887.

THERE is nothing new in the matter of the proposed general delivery system for the Plainfield Post Office. There is no doubt, however, but that our citizens will see the service in operation during the summer months.

Reform Club.

Unpleasant weather deterred many from venturing out last Sunday night, yet a goodly concourse of people met in Reform Hall. The speaker was Edward D. McCarthy, Esq., a New York lawyer of eminent abilities, and who some eighteen months ago took upon himself before the Reform Club of Plainfield the pledge of total abstinence and has bravely kept it. Mr. McCarthy bore practical testimony to the good effects that act of reformation had conferred upon him, and therefore urged others to do likewise. He is a fluent and polished speaker, every word being properly expressed, so that a report of his remarks taken down as delivered and put in print would read without correction. For over an hour he held the unbroken attention of a deeply interested audience. Mr. McCarthy showed himself well versed in Bible history, and from that stand point refuted the position assumed by Rev. Doctor Crosby, and in other particulars argued and substantiatingly declared the doctrine of moderate drinking, as advocated by that high license theologian, to be the "open door to death." The speech of Mr. McCarthy was eloquent and instructive. President French presided. Rev. Mr. Honeyman conducted the devotional exercises, and the music of Mr. Vanderbeek's choir was never better.

Personalia.

The Misses Murray are home again from their Ontario trip after a most enjoyable visit.

It is with gratification the many friends of County Clerk Vosseller learn of his convalescence from his recent severe illness.

Mr. Stanley Day, Jr., of New Market, left last week for Stratford, Ontario, to pursue a course of study in dentistry with his brother-in-law, Dr. A. E. Ahrens.

Mr. Townsend Rushmore has sailed for China expecting to be separated from his immediate and prospective relatives about six months. They deeply sympathize with one another.

The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond was publicly installed pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church at Albany, last evening. Messrs. T. B. Brown and W. D. W. Miller of this city were present.

Prof. R. S. Holmes left Plainfield, yesterday, to be absent about six weeks, spending a fortnight in Washington and Baltimore, followed by two weeks each at De Funiak Springs and Mount Dora, Florida.

Master Frank VanSickle, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Newton VanSickle, died at the residence of his grandfather, Mr. J. Frank Hubbard, during Sunday last, after an illness of but a few hours. Funeral services were held on Wednesday.

Many of the handsomest book covers, cards and other artistic advertisements issued by the Photo-Engraving Co., of New York, are the reproductions of original designs in india-ink by Prof. W. M. Smith, of North Plainfield.

Mr. Harris Cottier and wife returned to their Brooklyn home on Saturday last. Mrs. C. is an invalid, and requires constant care and attendance, which was faithfully accorded her during her visit here for an improvement in health.

Our congratulations may be premature but they are sincere, and we express the opinion of all who know when we assert that Mr. J. Frank Hubbard will prove one of the very best Directors that ever presided over a Board of Freeholders.

Miss Daft's reception to her young friends this evening, will be held in the handsome new residence Mr. Daft is just completing. The piano and necessary furniture will be moved in for the occasion, and a sort of early "house warming" will result.

Mr. Charles Bock, wife and two children sailed on the Servia, yesterday (Thursday) for his old home, Hanover, Germany, where his parents now reside. Mr. Bock came to this country seventeen years ago, and married a Plainfield lady. For some years he has kept a model saloon on East Second street.

Mr. John I. Holly, of this city, is the Secretary and Treasurer of the association of herders and owners of thoroughbred cattle who intend giving an exhibition at the Madison Square Garden, New York, during May. $10,000 will be offered in premiums for Ayershires, Guernseys, Holsteins and Jerseys.

The marriage of Miss Lizzie B. Atwood and Mr. Wm. M. Stillman was consummated in the Crescent avenue church, Thursday evening of last week, by the Rev. W. R. Richards, with a prayer by the Rev. A. H. Lewis. The attendance was very large and the scene a brilliant one. The bride looked particularly lovely, as did also her maid of honor, Miss Charlotte Groendyke. Miss Utter presided at the organ.

After years of suffering, Mrs. K. P. Ketcham died at her residence, during Tuesday afternoon. Known to everyone as embodying all the Christian virtues, and as an example of the noblest work of God—a good woman—we need say nothing. The funeral services this afternoon will be attended by hosts who will desire to join in reverence of the deceased. The Rev's Yerkes and Hurlbut will conduct the ceremonies at the house, assisted by the Rev's Lewis and Edgar. The Rev. Mr. Richards will preside at the grave.

Mr. Richard Peniston, of this city, received scores of letters some years ago congratulating him upon his having won a half-million of dollars by chance, and he used to regret that his friends were so mistaken. But the Richard Penistan who did win it has now become an inmate of a Charity Asylum. This Penistan was an actor in his young days, but finally retired from the stage after winning a first prize in the Havana lottery which netted him $450,000. He then purchased a stock farm in Kentucky, bought the stallion Fellowcraft and started to raise horses. His hospitality, and generosity, exceeded his ability to sustain them, and he finally wandered back to Philadelphia and has since been living in poverty.

Mr. Samuel Herr, a young man in the employ of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, was taken suddenly ill at Force's Hotel, where he was a boarder, on Friday last. The attending physician, Doctor Tomlinson, recommended that he be taken at once to his home in Altoona, Pa., and he was accordingly so removed there in a sleeping car on the Pennsylvania road Monday night, one of his friends and fellow workmen, Mr. Saelly, accompanying him. On Wednesday word was received that Mr. Herr died Tuesday night, his death being attributed to rheumatism about the heart. Deceased was a young man of sterling qualities, and had made many friends in this city, who mourn his early demise and sympathise with his stricken parents.

Council Proceedings.

The council met in regular meeting, Monday evening. Present—President Marsh and Councilmen Bowers, Carey, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Simpson, Taylor, Voorhees and Wilbur. Absent—Councilman Cuthbert. Sundry petitions for hack, truck and pedler licenses were received and granted. The following communication was read and placed on file:

VAN DEPOELE ELECTRIC M'F'G CO.,
CHICAGO ILL.

To the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.

Mr. W. H. Didiet is authorized to act for us in getting rights to construct and maintain an electric railway in the City of Plainfield, and if such rights are granted to him or the Rapid Transit Company which he represents, it is for the purpose of equipping a road at the earliest possible moment, and we assure you that the system is not in the least objectionable, but is highly praised by the public press and the city officials in all places where it has been tried, and has proved a great success and tended to advance values of real estate and add to the business of the city in every instance.

Van Depoele Electric M'f'g Co.,
By AARON K. STILES, Manager.

P. S. This system of railway is to be put in for the Rapid Transit Co., and is not to be accepted unless it fills the guarantee and proves satisfactory.

Van Depoele Electric M'f'g Co.,
By AARON K. STILES, Manager.

Mr. B. R. Force again requested permission to removed welling across Fourth street, and the petition was again referred. The following communication from property owners on Broadway protesting against the granting of a horse railway franchise to run through that street was read and placed on file:

To the Honorable, The Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

The undersigned, property owners on Broadway, are informed by common report and by the newspapers of your city that a movement is about to be made to obtain from you the privilege of laying Horse Car tracks and running cars upon Broadway, and the said announcements are accompanied with statements that no opposition thereto on the part of the property owners on said street has been made. We therefore respectfully protest against the granting of such permission. Our street, from Ninth street to the city line, has its surface very materially narrowed by the deep and wide gutters necessary to convey the large body of water which there seeks its outlet from both directions to Cedar Brook. These gutters diminish the available surface of the street for driving, at least five feet on each side. A horse-car track, if laid in the centre, would not leave room for a carriage to pass a horse-car on either side without danger of overturning. If the horse-car track should be laid upon one side, two carriages could not pass each other easily and safely, without driving over the car rail, which would be unpleasant and strain the carriage wheels.

We have just completed covering our street with broken stone, at considerable expense to ourselves as well as to the city. We should look upon the tearing up of this new macadamizing with great regret.

We do not believe that a horse-car railroad would receive enough travel in our street to be profitable to its projectors. If so, it is not needed; and your honorable body are proper judges of this matter, regardless of any claims which may be made to you to the contrary. Our street should not be injured, merely because certain parties imagine that such an enterprise might possibly be profitable to them.

It is a well established principle that suburban streets are injured for residences by horse-car tracks until the streets are so closely built up with residences that a horse car railroad becomes a crying necessity. We do not believe that, except in the opinion of a few, such a point has yet been reached in Broadway nor will be reached for several years to come. And we predict that, if tracks should now be laid there, the cars would be run at such a loss that they would soon be discontinued or run so infrequently as to be of no practical benefit. In either of these events, our street would be defaced and almost destroyed for driving without any benefit whatever to us in return.

C. W. OPDYKE,
FRED. KUTTMANN,
S. A. GINNA,
STEPHEN CAHOONE,
L. S. & N. F. DAVIS,
ISAAC L. MILLER,
ALBERT V. NOLEN.

Dr. J. T. Fritts requested permission to make certain additions to his residence at 73 Park avenue. Referred with power. Wm. C. Ayres notified the Council that ignorant of the ordinance he had commenced the erection of a frame building within the fire limits, and asked an investigation in the matter before he proceeded with its completion. Referred with power to investigate. His Honor nominated as a special police man Mr. Geo. W. Moore, with the request that upon his confirmation he be designated as an officer for the collection of delinquent taxes. Referred. The Street Commissioner's bond was received and approved, and the monthly reports of the Collector, the Treasurer and the City Clerk were filed. The Lamps committee recommended the lighting of a gasolene lamp at Richmond and Third streets, which was adopted. The proposition of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Company was accepted, and a contract ordered on the same basis as the past year with the privilege of increasing or decreasing the number of lamps as may please the city. A contract was adopted with the Plainfield Electric Light Company extending the previous contract until Nov. 1st, 1887. An Ordinance to Establish a Board of Health was presented by the Committee on Laws, was read its first time and tabled. The License Committee reported as correct the application of E P. Thorn, which was tabled, and the Committee moved that the consideration of all licenses be postponed for one week. Adopted. The Streets Committee again reported against the application of B R. Force, and such recommendation was adopted. An Ordinance to Provide for the Repair of the Sidewalks on both sides of Park avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets, was read its first and second times, and ordered advertised. The resolution ordering the erection of an electric light at the corner of Park avenue and Fifth street, was taken from the table and referred to the Laws Committee for its opinion as to the rights and powers of the city in the matter. The Council adjourned for one week.

Rahway Ripples.

MESSRS EDITORS—Plainfield is about nine miles distant from Rahway, yet our citizens know very little of what is going on in your city, and it is presumed your citizens know very little of what is going on in Rahway. We propose an occasional correspondence for the information of all concerned, politically and otherwise.

The result of the Senatorial election is the all absorbing topic of discussion in Rahway, and while the Democrats are disappointed over the defeat of their favorite, ex-Governor Leon Abbett, the Republicans are just "raving mad" to know that their representatives in the legislature deserted their party and its principles and voted in a body for Rufus Blodgett, an out-spoken raldical Jacksonian Democrat. The Republicans say they "were sold out body and soul," (we presume that is about the size of it,) and the question now is, does there exist a Republican party in New Jersey?

Rahway is rapidly recovering from its late financial troubles, and with its many advantages—railroad facilities, location, etc., our city will continue to improve. Many new buildings are being erected and the demand for dwellings is greater than he supply.

We have some little excitement here in regard to the Rahway National Bank, but it is as sound as a dollar, and will continue so to be while under its present management. Efforts, however, are being made by a portion of the stockholders to make a change, and organize a State bank—with what result time will tell.

Mr. Patrick Clark, aged about 69 years, well-known for his inventive genius and enterprise, died on Saturday last after a few day's illness. He was an intelligent, congenial gentleman and his death much deplored.

Our business men are complaining of dull times, but it is the old, old story every where, particularly so at this season of the year.

It is reported that the saw mill property, including the lumber yard belonging to Ayres & Lafbery has been sold to Mr. Charles Oliver of this city, where he intends also to establish a coal yard in connection with the lumber business.

Mr. Apollos Potter of Mount Pleasant has purchased of Mrs. Schlitter the Cotton Batting factory on Fulton street, and is fitting it up with stalls for the purpose of opening a livery, sale and exchange stables.

Hatfield & Brown who engaged in the livery business have dissolved partnership. The business will be continued by Mr. Brown.

MORE ANON.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

J. R. Stice, the western shooter, of Jacksonville, Ill., was awarded both prizes of $50 each, offered by the Middlesex Gun Club for the best average score made in live and clay birds during the recent tournament of the above club at Dunellen, N. J. Stice shot in 9 sweeps, 143 live birds; killed 130; missed 13; average over 90 per cent. Budd shot in 9 sweeps, 140 live birds; killed 126; missed 14; average 90 per cent. Brewer was third and Eley fourth in averages. In the clay bird sweeps Stice, Stark and Budd were in nine sweeps. Stice's average was 80 per cent.; Stark, 76; Budd, 76.

There was a large attendance on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen, N. J. last Wednesday, the regular shoot day of the club. Some fine scores were made, showing that practice at the traps by members are making them proficients with the trigger, and evidences that this growing and prosperous club will yet turn out a team impossible to vanquish by any like team from any of the older clubs of the State. During the day there was a contest for a Parker gun. There were nineteen entries to shoot at seven live birds each. Six killed seven birds each, Messrs. Quinlan, Lever, Williams, Dey, Davis and Forest. Mr. S. Smith desiring the prize offered these six a sum which was accepted and divided among them, the gun becoming Mr. Smith's property. The overplus of money in the entries, some $25, was contested for by several of those killing six birds, and was finally divided.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The death of Charles A. Kimball occurred on Wednesday morning after a lingering illness of Bright's disease of the kidneys. The deceased buried his wife about a year ago, leaving two young children, a son and daughter aged five and three years respectively.

The annual school meeting for school district No. 10 for the election of school trustee, in place of Mr. Robert R. Sinclair, whose term having expired, and for the sum of $4,455 for support of schools occurs on next Tuesday evening. There should be a full attendance at this meeting of all of our taxpayers, and hear the report of the Board of Trustees for the past year.

The crushed stone voted for our roads the coming year in accordance with a new law passed last year, is to be put upon our roads under the direction and exclusive control of our town committee. Our taxpayers will no doubt have a better showing for their money than in the past year, when it was distributed to the fifteen different road overseers and put upon the roads in various ways without any system whatever. Good roads has been one of the incentives to the many improvements in the way of first-class dwellings, which you can see in almost any direction now in process of construction.

The annual spring election for township officers passed off very quietly. No excitement. A small vote was polled. Total number 405. Republican, 225; Democratic, 142; Prohibition, 14; Progressive ticket, composed both of Democrats and Republicans, 24. The following were the successful candidates for the most important offices: L. M. Whitaker, Town Clerk; James T. Pierson, Freeholder; David T. Pierson, Collector; John M. C. Marsh, Assessor, no opposition; James L. Miller and Levi Cory, Town Committee, no opposition. The appropriation agreed upon by the conference committee which was on both of the regular tickets, was $500 for poor; $1,000 for roads; $2,000 for crushed stone; $700 for street lamps; $250 for fire department. There were seventy-five votes cast for $5,000 for crushed stone.

GOVERNMENT TESTS.

The Royal Baking Powder Declared Superior to all others.

The fact that Royal Baking Powder is, in all respects, the best baking powder offered to the public has been established beyond question.

Prof. H. A. Mott, when employed by the U. S. Government to analyze the various baking powders of the market to determine which was the best and most economical, after an extended investigation, reported in favor of the Royal, and it was adopted for government use.

Prof. Mott has continued his examinations of baking powders sold at the present day, and now affirms it as his deliberate judgment, arrived at after most thorough research and a careful examination of the principal brands of the market, that the Royal is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public. Prof. Mott, in his recent report, says:

"The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made both for that company and the U. S. Government.

"I will go still further and state that, because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public. DR. HENRY A. MOTT, PH.D."

Late U. S. Government Chemist.

WOMEN AT THE MATINEE.

"Oh, all sorts of women come to matinees," said a box-office clerk the other day, in response to a reporter's question, "from the 'society leader' who takes a box and gives her three dearest friends a theatre party, to the domestic who spends her 'afternoon out' in the top gallery. And you'll generally find, by the way, that the domestic takes more interest in the play than all the rest of the audience put together. An average matinee audience, large though it often is, cares very little for the play, and doesn't trouble itself about the acting. It has more important business on hand. Whats that? Well, you go in for awhile, take a seat in the middle of the crowd, listen to the conversation that's going on about you, and you'll soon find out for yourself."

Following this friendly advice, the reporter slipped into the last row of the parquet just as the orchestra violins indulged in their preliminary squawks. As he carefully deposited his hat under the seat a rustling and bustling behind told of fresh and feminine arrivals.

"Well, here we are at last," floated in dulcet tones over his head. "Let me help you off with your coat. I'm just tired to death; are'nt you?"

"Oh, completely tired out. Now, let me help you with yours."

"Now, we're comfortable; let's look at those samples."

"Yes, we can see how that green looks by gaslight."

"Well, I don't like it."

"Neither do I." (Duet—"What a pity!" "How provoking!" "We'll have to go back again!")

"Have you got the candy?"

"Yes. Have you got the opera-glass?"

"Yes. Do you see Mrs. Blank anywhere?"

"No. There's Mrs. Dash in a box."

"Do you think that woman pretty?"

"No. Do you?"

"No. I never did."

"Did you ever notice her feet?"

"No."

"She wears sixes."

"Goodness!" Pause.

"There's the curtain going up. What are they going to play?"

"I don't know. Let's look at the programme."

"Who is Barrett, anyway?"

"I don't know. I guess he's an Eastern man. Who is Miss Eastlake?"

"I don't know. Reminds me of Eastlake furniture."

"Te he."

"Well, I suppose we'll have to keep quiet?"

"Yes. Have some candy?"

"Thanks. It's awfully good, isn't it?"

"Yes. I can't hear a word they're saying. Can you?"

"Not a word."

At the close of the first act it began again.

"Well, I didn't think much of that. Did you?"

"No. Isn't she the homeliest thing you ever saw?"

"Yes. Do you see that girl in the third box with the V bang? Her dress is made just like"—etc., etc., etc.

The reporter changed his seat and appropriated one behind a bevy of pretty girls, who were discussing something or other with much interest and animation. He thought it might be the play. It proved to be a north side engagement.

Then he called upon some "box" acquaintances, and, while the young Chatterton struggled in death agony on the stage, was regaled with an account of "the Dash reception."

"Well," said the box-office clerk a little later, as he watched the last sealskin disappear through the swing door, "what do you think they came for now? Not for the play, eh?"

"No, not for the play," assented the reporter.—Chicago News.

The Boston and Albany Railroad Co., has for some time past been testing an apparatus for heating and lighting their passenger cars. It has been proven feasible to do this and thus avert the possibility of passengers being roasted to death in case of an accident on their road by the cars taking fire from the old-fashioned stove and lamp.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

A KENTUCKY VIEW.

Senator Brown, of Georgia, in opposing the efforts of the honorable Senator Blair to protect women in that constitutional "right of citizens of the United States to vote" which men enjoy so much in this country, lately said in the United States Senate chamber that he regarded the movement as an attempt to reverse the very laws of being. I have no doubt in my own mind that Mr. Brown would have to reverse the very laws of his being in order to do unto women as he would be done by in this matter, since St. Paul declares that the natural man is at enmity with God, and not subject to His laws. And I have no doubt in my own mind that the sooner Mr. Brown, and every opponent of the enfranchisement of women, reverses the very laws of his being, the better it will be for him, since Jesus says: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."

MRS. JAMES BENNETT.

REJOICING OVER KANSAS.

The Woman's Journal office has been a place of jubilee ever since the passage of the municipal suffrage bill in Kansas. Beginning on Monday morning, nearly every person who entered came with congratulations.

"Is it not good news from Kansas?" said one.

"How delightful that such a great State has done it!" said another.

"Massachusetts ought to have done it," said a third.

"I am glad she did not," said a young Western-born suffragist. "Those great Western States are bound to take the lead. Massachusetts is too conservative."

"How happy those Kansas women must be!" said one.

"Those Kansas men ought to be proud of themselves," said another. And so it went on. Suffragists from Maine, Vermont and Rhode Island came in, and all with one accord joined in the chorus of rejoicing for Kansas and with it. The end of the long strife for equal rights for women seemed nearer than ever, and the forty years of searching for the promised land in the wilderness of doubt and disbelief in the principles of a representative government, seemed not in vain. Everywhere the signs are full of promise. Let us redouble our efforts. In due season we shall reap.

* * *

The census shows that there are between two and three millions of women wage-workers in this country, who support themselves, and many of them their husbands and families.

* * *

Mrs. J. W. Smith, of Orange, N. J., is a famous tricyclist. During the past year she rode 2,643 miles, 2,228 of which were with her husband on a tandem machine; the other 415 were alone.

* * *

A syndicate of workingwomen has been formed in the Rue de Palestro, Paris, France, to dispense with the services of registry offices. About fifty women have already inscribed their names.

* * *

According to Secretary Dickinson's report, fifty years ago two-fifths of the public school teachers in Massachusetts were men; now about one-tenth are men. The average wages of men then were $25.44 per month, and of women $11.38; now men average $111.23, and women $43.97.

* * *

Senator Brown says that "the Creator never intended" women to vote. But in the absence of any special revelation from the Creator on that point, we doubt whether Senator Brown knows. If the will of God can be inferred from the tendency of events, all who can read the signs of the times are fast coming to perceive that He does mean women to vote.

* * *

Senator Brown says that women are physically incompetent to perform political duties. As these duties, however, are performed without difficulty by octogenarians and cripples, it seems as if they might not be beyond the strength of women. Indeed, when thousands of women have been voting for nearly twenty years, both in England and in our own Western Territories, it is absurd to talk about "laborious duties for which they (the female sex) are not by nature physically competent."

* * *

The Toronto Globe announces that "the woman's vote" in that city "is henceforth to be reckoned on as a powerful factor in the election of municipal counsellors and school trustees. For good or for evil this vote is a great fact. It is here, and it is here to stay. More than that, very few will hesitate in saying that so far as it has been tried it has been for good." When Canadian women have thus proved their competency as voters, why should American women be still considered incapable of political responsibility?

* * *

Miss Clara Barton, President of the American National Red Cross, has been visiting northwestern Texas, to find out by personal investigation, her favorite method, the actual state of the sufferers from the long drought, about whose condition so many contradictory reports have been afloat. She found the distress indeed severe, but came to the conclusion, also, that Texas was amply able to relieve her own sufferers. As a direct result of Miss Barton's efforts, the press of Texas has taken the matter up, and a generous subscription has been set on foot. Persons outside the State are also responding liberally. All contributions should be sent to the Dallas (Tex.) News.

Mrs. Mary E. Haggart lately joined Enterprise Lodge No. 1 of the United Order of Honor, and said, in her initiation speech: "If there is anything connected with my entrance into this organization upon which I especially congratulate myself, it is the fact that there were among the pioneers of the United Order of Honor enough clear-headed, large-hearted, far-seeing men to understand and demonstrate that the race needs the help of woman in every organized effort to improve humanity or to enrich and bless the lives of those around us. . . . No organization in the future can secure a permanent hold on long life and shut women out."

Department is, as it always has been, under our own direction, and our work in this branch in past years is the only recommendation we court. While we employ good Workmen we also use none but the best of materials and our patrons are always assured of a good job at a very reasonable price.

We Guarantee Our Work.
We are under many obligations to our numerous patrons of the past for their work and their unsolicited recommendation of the same to their friends, and we will endeavor to merit a continuance of the friendly relations heretofore and now existing by doing only first-class work.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y
By reason of its central position, close relation to principal lines East of Chicago and continuous lines at terminal points West, Northwest and Southwest—is the only true middle-link in that transcontinental system which invites and facilitates travel and traffic in either direction between the Atlantic and Pacific.
The Rock Island main line and branches include Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, St. Joseph, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns and villages.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE
Guarantees Speed, Comfort and Safety to those who travel over it. Its roadbed is thoroughly ballasted. Its track is of heavy steel. Its bridges are solid structures of stone and iron. Its rolling stock is perfect as human skill can make it. It has all the safety appliances that mechanical genius has invented and experience proved valuable. Its practical operation is conservative and methodical—its discipline strict and exacting. The luxury of its passenger accommodations is unequaled in the West—unsurpassed in the world.
ALL EXPRESS TRAINS between Chicago and the Missouri River consist of comfortable DAY COACHES, magnificent PULLMAN PALACE PARLOR and SLEEPING CARS, elegant DINING CARS providing excellent meals, and—between Chicago, St. Joseph, Atchison and Kansas City—restful RECLINING CHAIR CARS.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE
Is the direct, favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Over this route solid Fast Express Trains run daily to the summer resorts, picturesque localities and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. The rich wheat fields and grazing lands of interior Dakota are reached via Watertown.
A short desirable route, via Seneca and Kankakee, offers superior inducements to travelers between Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Lafayette and Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Atchison, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and intermediate points.
All classes of patrons, especially families, ladies and children, receive from officials and employes of Rock Island trains protection, respectful courtesy and kindly attention.

COSTIVENESS
affects seriously all the digestive and assimilative organs, including the kidneys. When these organs are so affected, they fail to extract from the blood the uric acid, which, carried through the circulation, causes Rheumatism and Neuralgia.
The functions of the Liver are also affected by costiveness, causing Bilious Disorders,
Among the warning symptoms of Biliousness are Nausea, Dizziness, Headache, Weakness, Fever, Dimness of Vision, Yellowness of Skin, Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulders, Foul Mouth, Furred Tongue, Irregularity in the action of the Bowels, Vomiting, etc.
The Stomach suffers when the bowels are constipated, and Indigestion or Dyspepsia,
follows. Fetid Breath, Gastric Pains, Headache, Acidity of the Stomach, Waterbrash, Nervousness, and Depression, are all evidences of the presence of this distressing malady. A Sure Relief for irregularities of the Stomach and all consequent diseases, will be found in the use of
AYER'S PILLS.
They stimulate the stomach, free the bowels, healthfully invigorate the torpid liver and kidneys, and by their cleansing, healing and tonic properties, strengthen and purify the whole system, and restore it to a salutary and normal condition.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

END OF A JOURNEY.

The Houghton landau drew up at the station and Louise alighted with her friend, Sybil Travers. The latter young lady, clad in a gray Mother Hubbard, and wearing a pretty poke bonnet piled high with ostrich feathers, was the very picture of elegance. Louise was a little, insignificant thing, and she appeared less attractive than ever as she made her way to the waiting room alongside of her distinguished looking friend.

"It is too absurd, Sybil," she said as they sat together in a remote corner, enjoying a last confidential chat before Miss Travers left for the west. "The idea of your posting off to San Francisco all alone, simply because a harmless youth promises to come this way, and to act as your escort!"

"It is only three weeks earlier than I meant to go, anyhow," said Sybil, stoutly. "You know why I prefer to go alone, Louise. You see Uncle Jerry has made up his mind that propinquity is the only thing necessary to make Mr. Valleau and myself fall madly in love with each other. He fancies that a trip across the continent is especially well calculated to bring about that much desired result. But I don't see it that way. I know very well that I should hate Mr. Valleau from the outset. I should feel bound to do it just for contrariety. So, you see, I prefer to go home a few weeks earlier, and to go alone; for if I do wait for Mr. Valleau, as Uncle Jerry wished me to, and if I failed to fall in love with him, you know very well that it would be impossible for me to explain the phenomenon satisfactorily. As it is, I can smooth matters over easily."

"How far-sighted you are, Sybil," Louise said, laughing. "Mr. Valleau will be terribly disappointed though, I fear. But there's your train, dear. Good-by. Write to me as soon as you arrive."

Then followed considerable girlish demonstration, which provoked a smile on the lips of a nonchalant young traveler who reclined at his ease before one of the windows of a parlor car, and who had been watching Louise and Sybil with interest.

"A very handsome girl, by Jove!" was his mental comment as Sybil took her seat just behind him, and the mirror at the end of the car enabled him to command a full view of her face. "I wonder how far she is going."

There was no means of ascertaining just then, but when the conductor came through the car, and the young man presented his ticket, to which was attached a long string of coupons running all the way from New York to San Francisco, he noted with satisfaction that Sybil had one like it.

"A through passenger," he observed. "I wonder who she is? Traveling alone, too, but evidently a lady. She must be a Californian, but she looks like a New Yorker," etc.

The young man's fancy ran riot, and all the while had his eyes fixed on the mirror in which was reflected Sybil's lovely face, with its rich, nice coloring and its beautiful frame of rippling hair. Very often their eyes met, as was only natural; but Sybil had wonderful composure for so young a girl, and the look of serenity she continued to wear rather chagrined the handsome stranger, who had entertained a hope, innocent enough in its nature, that the long ride over the plains might be enlivened with piquant flirtation.

"Pallas Athena," he said regretfully. "Beautiful, but susceptible of no passion that is not animated by reason."

Such a conclusion might have been rather hasty, but it appears that this aggressive young man in an ulster and traveling cap made some pretense toward being a reader of character.

Meanwhile, Sybil, constitutionally opposed to "ogling," as all sensible, womanly girls are, formed a pretty severe opinion of the stranger who took such a mean advantage of the power of reflection. But she scorned to change her seat. Her policy was one of complete oblivion, and settling herself comfortably, she soon forgot all about the handsome pair of brown eyes so deliberately fixed on the tell-tale mirror.

The other passengers were pretty well acquainted by the time they reached Chicago, but Sybil naturally reserved, and becoming more so through the protective instinct which prompted her to make few friends when traveling alone, had not joined the little coterie which soon establishes itself in every westward bound train. Her neighbor had been baffled in several attempts to make her acquaintance, but difficulty only fired his determination.

"She's something new in the feminine line, by Jove she is!" he remarked, when one of his deepest laid schemes had been overthrown by Sybil's courteous but unapproachable dignity.

It appears that this handsome stranger has been a "ladies' man for many a day." He was of a peculiar temperament. When he made up his mind to anything he usually accomplished it, and in accomplishing it was quite willing to relinquish all subordinate interests. He, too, held himself aloof from his fellow passengers, and so it was that when they reached Council Bluffs not a soul was on board the train who could have told who the lady and gentleman were that traveled alone and were so exclusive.

Any one who has made a transcontinental trip will appreciate the desire to take a turn on terra firma that seized Sybil's peculiar vis-a-vis when she reached Council Bluffs. He was a lithe, athletic fellow, and during the hour and a half that the train halted he made a pedestrian tour into the surrounding country. Unfortunately he prolonged his walk beyond a desirable limit, and when he reached the station again the train had already begun to move slowly. Many a time he had boarded the train when it was going much more rapidly, and, with a moment's hesitation, he ran for the rear platform of his car, making a spring and catching at the iron railing.

As often happens, he had not calculated on the full speed of the train. He missed the step and fell backward, striking his head on the platform, and only escaping a terrible fracture by the presence of a pile of empty mail bags, which broke his fall.

The train stopped and the injured man was taken aboard. He was wholly insensible, and the blood gushed freely from the wound in his head. A skillful surgeon who happened to be among the passengers was summoned at once, and, having seen the young man made comfortable in a sleeping car, he examined the contusion.

"Will some one please help me with these bandages?" the doctor asked. "No, thanks," he added as a gentleman offered his services. "A lady, please."

He glanced around the car and his eyes fell on Sybil's calm face, on the slim white hands that looked so deft and agile, and he noted the composure with which she bore herself while the rest of the ladies were nearly all in a semi-hysterical state.

"Will you hold these bandages, miss?" he asked kindly. "Do you understand how to do it?"

"Oh, yes, sir," said she promptly. "My father was a doctor. I am used to such work."

The wound was shortly dressed, but it was a whole day before the young stranger awoke from the stupor occasioned by his fall, and then it was only to pass into a state of delirium.

"Do you know who he is?" the doctor asked Symbil, who had been installed by common consent as the sick man's nurse.

"This dropped out of his pocket," she replied handing him a business card. "I think that is his name, as his baggage is marked with those initials."

The doctor read: "Robert Vincent & Co., commission merchants, New York."

"He had a narrow escape," he observed handing the card back to Symbil. "A little more force would have crushed his skull like a nutshell."

A new interest suddenly awakened for Symbil.

"I wonder what Louise will say when she hears that I have been playing nurse?" she pondered the day following the assumption of her new new duties. "Poor fellow! I'm sorry for him."

At Cheyenne, happily for the sick man, the train was delayed two days by a landslide. During the interval of quiet and rest the doctor succeeded in breaking his fever, and on the fourth day after the accident Mr. Vincent opened his eyes in weak astonishment, as his returning consciousness discerned in his faithful attendant the handsome young lady with whom he had tried so assiduously to flirt.

He felt too weak from the shock and from the loss of blood to ask any questions, but Sybil divined his wonder and she explained to him the details of his accident, with a gentle grace as charming as her former reserve had been admirable.

Nothing could have been prettier than Sybil's devotion to the unfortunate stranger, and the other passengers seemed to appreciate it, for they held and were content with being merely spectators. She waited on him with persevering devotion. It was Sybil's way to do that. She read to him, or, when he wished it, talked to him. The presence of an invalid seemed to infuse a home feeling into the life aboard the train, and when the week's journey was protracted by various obstacles to ten days no one complained.

Before they reached San Francisco, Mr. Vincent was able to sit up. It would take some time for the wound to heal, but he had recovered pretty well from the shock. In the opinion of some of the passengers he was not altogether anxious for immediate convalescence, which was hardly to be wondered at; and really I think Sybil felt a twinge of regret as she sat the last evening beside Mr. Vincent's couch and listened to a party of gentlemen warbling a Swiss air out on the front platform. It was twilight, and the porter had not yet come in to light the lamps.

"Don't you think, Miss Sybil," Mr. Vincent said in a low voice, "that some acquaintances ripen very much faster than others? I feel as though I had known you for years, yet I cannot tell what your last name is. The doctor calls you just Miss Sybil."

"I thought you knew," she said, simply, ignoring his first question, which had sent a strange thrill to her heart. "My name is Travers."

"What!" he almost shouted. "What did you say?"

"Travers," she repeated, looking at him surprised.

He sank back on the cushions helplessly, and turning his face toward her, he murmured: "Kismet!"

"Do you know he continued, after a pause which Sybil felt to be pregnant with meaning—"do you know that we have been as badly mixed up as to our identities as the people in a play. I had no idea you were Miss Travers. Your Uncle Jerry"—

"Do you know my Uncle Jerry?" she cried, in surprise.

"I ought to," he replied, with an odd smile. "I am—Sybil, do you ever forgive people who practice little deceits upon you?"

The familiar manner of this address did not offend her, strange to say.

"That depends," she said softly.

"What would you say if I were to tell you that my name wasn't Vincent at all?"

He had contrived to get hold of her hand, and he felt it flutter slightly, but she made no response.

"I do not know what led you to believe that my name was Vincent. At first I could not correct the impression, and, when I was able, I didn't care to, for I was so pleased with our relation that I feared to do anything that might jar upon it. It is all the worse for me now, for I fear this deceit may have prejudiced you. I am your uncle's friend, Sybil. I am Royal Valleau!"

It was her turn to start in astonishment. She snatched her hand away from him, but he secured it again.

"Don't!" he pleaded in a low tone. "Forgive me! You have made me love you and you must not be so cruel. You will at least forget that I have deceived you at all?"

Sybil gave no spoken reply, but her hand was still clasped in his, and before the porter lit the lamps she suffered him to carry it to his lips.

This story was detailed in letter to Miss Louise Houghton the following week with the appended comments:

And just think of it! I have actually engaged myself to him. I meant to hate him so, too! Uncle Jerry is delighted, of course. For myself, I can only say that I am perfectly happy, and leave the rest to your imagination. Wasn't it funny, though? He left New York three weeks before he had intended to, because he didn't want to be bothered with looking after me; and I ran away from him in the most unceremonious style. Yet we both got on the same train after all. It is quite like a romance, isn't it, dear? But I must close, as Roy is begging me to hurry and finish. I will write you more again. Your loving friend, SYBIL.

LITTLE TIME FOR WAITING.

A Seventh street lady was surprised the other day by the information from her cook that she was going to leave in the morning. "But Mary," her mistress said in surprise and consternation, "what are you going off this way for? What is the trouble?" "Oh, it's no trouble at all, mum," was the reply; "only Pat came over last night and said there was going to be a tie up on the cars, and that would give him time to get married; so we're going to be married to-morrow night, and I'll be wanting to-morrow to get me things ready and help Pat fix up the rooms we're going to live in." "But you ought to give me time to find another girl," the mistress persisted, although she perceived plainly enough the uselessness of remonstrance. "So I told Pat, mum; but he said there was no telling how long the strike would last, and that if I had to give you warning and wait for you to find another girl he'd look around after another girl himself."

LA BELLE AMERICAINE.

A well preserved, elderly man, with a pleasant expression, iron-gray hair, and faultlessly dressed, might have been occasionally seen strolling along the Promenade des Anglais, at Nice, last winter. He leered a good deal under the bonnets of the pretty women. But there was a demure and half-respectful expression in his glance which at once dispelled any rising feeling of resentment. His serious sympathetic, half-smile, combined with his age, gave him a certain immunity which would not be extended to younger men. He was known in society as Mr. John P. Chase, of Chicago city.

Mr. Chase, accompanied by his daughter, arrived in the Riviera last November. He took up his abode in a small but pretty villa on the outskirts of Nice, and signified his intention of staying the whole season. Very soon after his arrival it was rumored that Mr. John P. Chase was a millionaire, a "king" of railways, iron, or something, rumor did not know what; nevertheless, society received both him and his daughter with open arms. The people who benefit their health and lose their money at the Rivera are generally a nice set; so the American millionaire was soon able to number some of the best patrons of Mentone and Nice amongst his acquaintances. His conduct in public was most exemplary. The mystic word "millionaire" acted a charm against all prejudice, and also commanded the society of a select circle of parasites.

In the small talk over five o'clock teas in certain villas and hotels, he was frequently discussed. It was an open secret that he had married beneath him, and after a short period of domestic infelicity his wife "made tracks," leaving her infant daughter behind. Society took the man's part, of course. The rich American had taken the matter with ease, given up his mansion in the suburbs of Chicago, and for the last ten years led a wandering life with his charming daughter for a companion. This sedate and almost idyllic life society admired. He was voted by all "a nice man," and entertained in consequence.

Miss Nathalie Chase was of that type which police-court reporters would have termed "of prepossessing appearance." She was tall and graceful, too slight, it may be, to fulfill the rigorous standard of womanly beauty, but possessed a figure rounded and symmetrical as a nymph's with the same length of limb and airiness of gesture which painters have combined to confer on those strange mythological coquettes. Her hands and feet were perfect—long, slender and flexible, assimilating well with the undulating lines of her patrician figure, and the stately pose of her proud head. Dark masses of hair, which looked black against her pure white skin, she wore gathered into a coil upon the top of her head, and pulled away somewhat too boldly from the temples, disclosing the faultless outline of the cheek and the perfect little ear. Nor was her face out of character with the rest of her person, for its features denoted considerable intellect, no slight leaven of caprice, and, above all, great persistence and force of will.

Before she had resided at Nice a fortnight Nellie Chase—for that was the name by which she was generally known—was talked of, thought of, and greatly admired by most of the marriageable young men. She was always agreeable, although it must be said she spoke with something of an American twang, but to the youths who flirted with her this only increased her charms. The American Crœsus and his pretty daughter were for the time the pets of society. They could be seen everywhere. On the Promenade des Anglais, in the afternoon and in the evening at Monte Carlo, enjoying a mild game of ecarte, with friends, of course, in the jingling salle du jeu. In Nice, Nellie Chase was the belle, greatly to the envy of numbers of other fair damsels who were being put up for sale in the matrimonial market by their mammon-seeking parents. The men swarmed around her to bask in her sweet smiles wherever she went, and seemed to thoroughly relish a flirtation.

There was one youth whom she particularly favored. He was the Hon. Bertie Mashem, whom everyone knew to be heir to the fine estates of the Earl of Slushford. He occupied one of the best suites of rooms in the Hotel Paris, and was generally thought by scheming mothers to be a fish worth baiting for. When Chase pere and fille appeared upon the scene, these mothers waxed exceeding wrath, in consequence of the Hon. Bertie turning up his nose at their bargains, and transferring his inconstant affections to the new comer.

At first he set about to become on intimate terms with the millionaire, lunching and dining him at his hotel, in princely style, and then by degrees he gradually grew friendly with the girl. In fact, it was he who had placed them on evidence with society, and had introduced them to all the best people.

The Hon. Bertie rather prided himself on his game of ecarte, and strange to say Mr. Chase also estimated himself a player, so it was hardly a matter for surprise that they kept touch with the "form" displayed by other visitors, and frequently passed their evenings within the precincts of the much-abused Casino. Money passed very freely between Mashem and the American, and the game frequently ended by Bertie's victory, and some disguised chagrin on the part of his friend.

One evening Bertie and Nathalie were strolling along the terrace overlooking the Mediterranean. The gaming room was crowded and a walk under the oranges and palms was delightfully cool and refreshing after play, which had lasted several hours. Bertie had won, as usual, and left Chase, in order to obtain a tete-a-tete with Nellie.

They had walked some distance, when the girl said to her companion: "What a magnificent moon! We don't get such as that on our side."

"Yes," replied Bertie, "it's almost as lovely as you, my darling."

"A compliment most truly," she said, with a smile and a mocking bow.

He paused for a moment, and raising her tiny gloved hand to his lips, said: "Nell, my darling, I love you!" Placing his arms around her neck, there in the moonlight he told her the oft-repeated story in a truly romantic fashion.

Before they again moved along over the graveled path Nathalie Chase had promised to become the betrothed of the Hon. Bertie Mashem, and the latter had promised to "ask her pa" at the earliest opportunity. They had vowed eternal affection, and the young lady had signified her intention of having "a swagger wedding," to which her adorer acquiesced. At last she had "caught on" a good thing.

On the following morning, Bertie, after attiring himself in gorgeous raiment, and paying particular attention to the minor details of his toilet, duly appeared at the millionaire's villa, and was accorded an interview.

"Wal, you're real early this morning, Bertie," said Mr. John P. Chase, of Chicago, when his friend was ushered into the drawing room.

"Air so invigorating, don't you know. Can't sleep at night." The latter part of the sentence was quite true, for he had been awake most part of the night thinking of the undeniable loveliness of his fiancée.

"Have a corpse reviver? Nellie isn't up yet the lazy little puss."

"Aw—thanks, my dear Chase, I'll have nothing. I've come to talk with you on a little matter of business."

"Business eh; what's up?"

"Well—er," said Bertie as he took his seat, "the fact of the matter is, I want your consent that Nathalie may become my wife."

John P. Chase looked a little astonished, pulled his gray moustache thoughtfully and said: "Hum, you surprise me very much! Out west they don't usually make matches as quick as this."

"True," stammered Bertie, "but I really love her, and she's willing to be mine."

"What is your position?"

"I'm heir to the estate of the Earl of Slushford, my uncle, which means eight thousand pounds a year."

"What's that in dollars?"

"Don't know. Always was a duffer at figures."

"How old is your uncle?"

"Aw, it's nearly time he croaked, for he's over eighty."

John P. Chase gave a grunt of satisfaction over this intelligence, and was silent for a moment.

"Wal, Mr. Mashem, your expectations ain't what we call tall, but I'll give my consent to the union providing you're willing to render me a small service."

Bertie was delighted.

"Most certainly," he replied; "I am perfectly at your command."

The millionaire drew his chair closer, and in a half whisper said with a stronger nasal accent than usual:

"Look here, I've been playing heavily since I've been in this 'ere place and am what you may call slightly embarrassed. —Only temporarily, of course; but I don't want to draw on my bankers in New York; besides, it would take time."

"I understand, thoroughly. Er—what amount."

"Only a few hundred pounds."

The Hon. Bertie placed his hand into his breast pocket and produced his cheque-book. His companion placed a pen and ink before him.

"Now, how much?"

"I leave it to you," replied John P.

Mashem placed his signature to a cheque, and handing it to him said:

"Fill it in yourself, my dear fellah, and don't be afraid."

The American took it with a smile, and an expression of thanks, adding that he trusted Nellie would "love, honor and obey" him.

The Duke of Slushford's heir then withdrew, and the same evening took his future bride for a drive along the lovely Corniche road.

The next day he went over to San Remo, to make a dutiful visit to a fossilized maiden aunt; but even before he alighted from the train, he felt a longing to return to his fair American. After three days, he could stand it no longer, so he returned to Nice by the rapide, and drove at once to the villa.

"Is Miss Chase within?" he asked of the servant who answered the door.

"No, both monsieur and mademoiselle left the day before yesterday, and have not since returned."

Bertie was dumfounded. He swore a very large "d," and inquired if any message had been left, but as none was forthcoming, he drove to his hotel.

"Any letters for me, Farran?" he asked of his man.

"Yes sir, this one."

Bertie tore it open eagerly, and read. His face grew pale, and he sank into an adjacent arm chair, with the solitary ejaculation "Damn."

It ran as follows:

DEAR SIR:—Many thanks for your cheque, which I have filled up for £5,000. I shall be obliged if you will discontinue your thoughts regarding Nathalie, for instead of being my daughter she is my wife.

Faithfully yours,
JOHN P. CHASE.

P. S.—I will repay you the loan when we next meet.

Mashem at once wired his bankers to stop the cheque; but alas! the reply came that it had been cashed. The Hon. had been "rushed."

Next morning, happening to take up Galignani in the hotel reading room, his eye caught the following paragraph:

ARREST OF SWINDLERS.—Late last night the police arrested at the Gare St. Lazare the soidisant American millionaire named Chase, and also his wife, who were about to proceed to London. For some time past the police have kept observation upon them, and we hear their latest victim was a young English nobleman, who is at Nice. A considerable sum of money was found upon the man, who, it would appear, has practiced systematic frauds.

* * * * * * *

Bertie succeeded in regaining four thousand pounds, but is now very careful about his cheques—especially blank ones. The "millionaire" and his pretty wife will live at the expense of the republic for several years to come.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S LONG REIGN.

In the thousand and sixty years which have elapsed since Egbert was made King of all England, there has been but three occupants of the throne whose reigns have been so prolonged as that of Queen Victoria. But her majesty will, in the course of this year, have reigned, in one sense, longer than any English sovereign; for of the three kings whose reigns will have exceeded her's at the Jubilee celebration in June next, not one actually ruled for so long a period as fifty years. King Henry III. was crowned on the death of King John in 1216, but the regency was intrusted to the Earl of Pembroke, and it was not until 1222 that the king was declared of age. King Edward III. succeeded to the throne on the deposition of his father in 1327; but it was not until 1330 that he assumed the government, so that he only ruled from that date to his death in 1377—forty-seven years. King George III. practically ceased to reign six weeks after the completion of his fifty years' reign; but if we except the period during which his former mental affliction lasted—namely, from the beginning of November, 1788, until the following February—his majesty's actual rule fell below the period of fifty years.

There is nothing so sightless as the official eye of a policeman that has been closed by a drink.

MA DID NOT TRIUMPH.

"You look very much excited, dear," said a Westfield swain one night this week, when she entered the parlor where he was waiting for her.

"Well, I should think I ought to be excited," she answered. "I've just had the most awful argument with ma." And she began to weep hysterically.

"Why, what is the matter, my darling?" he inquired, as he slid his arm around her waist and endeavored to soothe her; "what was the argument?"

"Oh, how can I tell you? She said you were only trifling with me, and that you would never pop the question; and I told her she did a great injustice, for I believe you would pop the question to-night. She said you wouldn't, and we had it hot and heavy; dear George, you will not let ma triumph over me, will you?"

"Wh—why, certainly not," answered George.

"I knew it," my darling," the dear girl exclaimed; "come, let us go to ma and tell her how much mistaken she was!"

And they did, and ma didn't seem to be very much broken down over the affair.

COMMUNICATIONS.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN:—Your attention is again respectfully directed to the demand heretofore served by me on your honorable body. I have delayed taking any legal steps to enforce my rights, hoping that you would recognize them without such action on my part. Public duty, not less than a personal desire to have this matter adjusted, prompts me, in the interest of public economy, to take such steps as will secure that object. Still hoping that such amicable arrangements may be made as will be mutually satisfactory, and result in such disposition of the matter as will relieve me from a position that may impose responsibility for the conduct of those over whom I have no control, and also insure the county from pecuniary loss and again protesting against delay, and reasserting all the rights mentioned in my former demand, and renewing my request that the custody of the jail be turned over to me, I have the honor to be,

Yours respectfully,
GEO. M. STILES, Sheriff.

A MISTAKE.

Even the most radical partisan, if he be a man of common sense, will acknowledge that sometimes, to say the least, men should be continued in public office, no matter what their political name, simply because, as officials, they have earned the better than gold reputation of honesty, ability and faithful service.

With all due respect for the gentleman who was chosen Freeholder in place of Cornelius W. L. Martine, we must be permitted to think and declare that Fanwood made a mistake.

If ever there was a man in public office who gave thereto, without stint, time, labor and watchful care, and made the faithful discharge of duty a sacred obligation, that man is Director Martine of the present Board of Freeholders.

The county of Union will greatly miss the efficient service of Mr. Martine, and we feel assured that more than one of the Republican members of the Board regret his coming retirement, notwithstanding the fact that his Democracy is hereditary and life solidified.

Fanwood made a mistake. In saying this we wish to be distinctly understood as not reflecting in the least upon Freeholder-elect Kyte, whom personally we highly esteem.

MEMORIA.

The death of Henry Ward Beecher, the distinguished Brooklyn divine, and generally admitted to have been one of the grandest intellectual giants of the age, brings into fresh prominence not only his vast influence as a writer and speaker, but certain individual characteristics which made him the man of mark he was.

Mr. Beecher, like all other human beings, had personal faults, and who has none, but, heavily outweighing imperfections, he possessed traits of excellence and wonderfully exercised them for the good of humanity, irrespective of creed, clime, condition or color. Among those noble attributes of greatness, shining as a beacon light over troubled waters was that of religious toleration.

It is a glorious and hopeful fact that freedom of religious thought and worship is every year gaining strength and enlarging supremacy, and justice demands that no small degree of credit for the fostering of such a universal blessing should now attach to the memory of Henry Ward Beecher.

He had no fellowship with that dark-browed theology, that concentrated essence of bigotry, that Pharisaical spirit which, even in this enlightened century, for mere differences of religious belief or formula would say—"Stand aside, for I am more holy than thou."

He abhorred such narrow-minded intolerance from the bottom of his heart and publicly denounced it with becoming severity.

Mr. Beecher knew well and unhesitatingly proclaimed, as it were from the very house top, that true religion is not the exclusive property of any man, clique or denomination, but that it lives and flourishes unchained and everywhere.

He nobly championed a most vital principle of the American Constitution—RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

The brightest gem in the coronet of Independence.

We honor him for it.

We lay our humble tribute upon the tomb of Beecher.

How to have that work and money properly applied is the matter to be discussed now, that the best methods may be ready for adoption when the season for road-making comes.

The President was evidently afraid of the Trade Dollar bill, for he allowed it to become a law without his signature. Thus at last the Government is about to redeem these dishonored coins, but too late to afford restitution to the poorer class of people who were compelled to let them go long since at ten and fifteen per cent. discount into the hands of wealthy merchants and capitalists, who will now reap the benefit of their investment. For a space of six months from the present time, that is until September next, trade dollars not defaced or mutilated can be exchanged at the U. S. Treasury or any sub-Treasury in the United States, for a like amount of standard silver dollars, which are "legal tender."

As was well said by the Philadelphia Ledger—"Rufus Blodgett, Senator-elect from New Jersey, continues to grow in public esteem as the returns come in. There is reason to believe in point of ability, sound judgment and established character, he is up to the mark of the high office of Senator of the United States."—Camden Democrat.

The Forty-Ninth Congress has passed into history. It leaves a record which compares most favorably with that of any Congress of recent years, and surpasses that of almost every Congress which was divided by the two great political parties into two hostile camps. More bills were introduced in both Houses of the Forty-Ninth, more committee reports were made, more bills were passed, more became laws and more were vetoed than ever before by any Congress. There were introduced into the House during the two sessions, 11,228 bills and 263 joint resolutions, on which over 5,000 reports were made. This was several thousand more bills and over a thousand more reports than were made by the Forty-Eighth Congress, which had, in its turn, beaten the record. In the Senate there were introduced over 3,000 bills on which nearly 2,000 written reports were made, being upward of 500 more bills than by the record-breaking Forty-Eighth. The death roll also of the last Congress was unusually long, comprising thirteen names. The total number of laws enacted was about 1,390, while 132 were vetoed by the President, making twenty-one more instances of the exercise of the Presidential prerogative of veto than had occurred from the foundation of the Government down to the beginning of this Congress. Only one private pension bill and one public bill, namely that providing for a Government building at Dayton, Ohio, succeeded in passing both Houses over the President's veto.

The repeal of the tenure-of-office law leaves the President free to exercise that control over appointments and removals that had always prevailed previous to the Johnson administration. There is an earnest desire that the President will utilize the power thus given him, and break up that carefully constructed unanimity of Republican office-holding which has so long existed. If the civil service was open to the benefits of a competitive examination and trial no one would object, but the offices are so filled by people drawn from the ranks of a single party, that there is no chance to apply the theory of Civil Service Reform.

THE LEGISLATURE.

There was a large attendance of spectators at the evening session of the Legislature last Monday, and considerable work done by the members. In the Senate twelve bills were introduced. The principal business of the evening was on Senate No. 75, Mr. Gardner's bill rearranging the rates, etc., for the publication of the laws in newspapers. Mr. Gardner moved to reconsider the amendment adopted a week ago, by which the Governor and Comptroller were allowed to fix the rate, if desirable, at a lower rate than 60 cents a folio. The motion prevailed and then a long debate followed, in the course of which Senator Griggs supported the amendment and Senator Gardner opposed. They repeated the arguments substantially as advanced a week ago and then reported. The amendment was finally defeated. Mr. McBride offered an amendment fixing the rate at 51 cents per folio. Another spirited discussion was had, and the amendment failed 10 to 10. Several amendments were offered and defeated. The bill was laid over temporarily.

In the house, there was a number of bills introduced during the evening. Bill 201 came up on its final passage. This bill provides for the compensation of those newspapers that published the laws without being designated, but upon the understanding that the Governor and Comptroller would recommend that they be paid therefor. A statement from the Comptroller was read relative to the matter giving information as follows:

COMPTROLLER'S REPORT.

The Comptroller says that the law of 1886 appropriated $50,000 for the publication of the laws, that under the law the Governor and Comptroller designated 49 papers to publish the laws of that session in full, and 24 were designated to publish either the first or second half thereof, making in all 73 papers. The publications of these papers required the sum of $49,852.25 to pay therefore. He further says that those who were given one-half to publish were told by him and the Governor that if they published all the laws they would recommend the passage of an act to compensate them for the extra service. He again says that a special list was prepared and the publishers informed that should they see fit to publish the laws in full, the Governor and Comptroller would recommend to this Legislature the passage of an act compensating them for such service. Twenty-six papers did publish the laws under this notice. The total amount of expense entailed upon the State under the bill will be $11,060.50.

He also adds that the law of 1886 provided that fifty cents per folio be paid for this service. The laws and joint resolutions of 1886 exceeded in numbers of folios by one-half of 1885, and this not being anticipated by the Legislature, the number of papers were reduced one-half. This situation was embarrassing to the Governor and Comptroller, and they, upon consultation with State officers and members of the Legislature, made the statements to the publishers, and they published the laws with those statements. The Comptroller earnestly recommends the passage of the law.

Mr. Corbin bitterly opposed the bill, while Messrs. Beckwith and Hudspeth championed it.

Speaker Baird took the floor, Mr. Oviatt in the chair, and said he was opposed entirely to the publication of the laws in the newspapers and favored the pamphlet system. This would not cost any more money to the State. Plenty of men would take such a contract for $30,000, and agree to supply each voter in the State. However, as long as it had been decided to publish the laws in the newspapers, he favored giving the laws to all legal papers; therefore he favored this bill. He favored increasing rather than decreasing the number of papers.

The bill was passed by a vote of 42 to 13, those voting in the negative being Messrs. Chamberlain, Corbin, Feeney, Hildreth, Lennon, Lewis, Lanterrow, Matthews, McLaughlin, Noonan, Oviatt, Pearson and Tumulty.

On Tuesday the following nominations were sent to the Senate by the Governor: For Clerk of the Supreme Court—Benjamin F. Lee, of Trenton, reappointed for five years; Riparian Commissioner—John Carpenter, of Clinton, reappointed for five years; Lay Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals—Jonathan S. Whittaker, of Cumberland county, reappointed for six years; Law Judge for Camden county—John W. Westcott, reappointed for five years; Law Judge for Passaic county—John Hopper, for five years; Prosecutor of Pleas for Middlesex county—J. Kearney Rice, reappointed for five years; Prosecutor of Pleas for Ocean county—Thomas W. Middleton, reappointed for five years; Lay Judge for Bergen county—Garret H. Ackerson; Lay Judge for Essex county—M. J. Ledwith; Lay Judge for Gloucester county—Edmund Jones; Lay Judge for Ocean county—William A. Low; Lay Judge for Morris county—Charles H. Munson; Lay Judge for Atlantic county—Enoch Cordery; Lay Judge for Salem county—William A. Wood, all reappointed for five years; Lay Judge for Morris county—Dewitt C. Quimby; Lay Judge for Mercer county—Josiah W. Wright. The nominations of Judges Hopper and Cordery were confirmed and the others were referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Among the bills reported adversely in the Senate were those requesting Congress to pass an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by the people and legalizing the publication of Sunday newspapers. The reports were sustained without discussion.

The bill regulating the price of Sunday newspapers at not more than double the current price was adversely reported. Mr. Beckwith, the author of the measure, said that it was intended as a blow at monopoly and extortion. The adverse report was not sustained, and the bill was put upon the calendar.

Mr. McDermitt called upon the Committee on Corporations to report the bill providing for the laying of telegraph and telephone wires under ground in cities. He intimated that the committee was smothering the bill. At that Mr Arnwine, the Chairman of the committee, popped up in his seat and reported the bill adversely. Mr. McDermitt made a passionate speech against the report, and charged that the Western Union Telegraph Company had a powerful lobby present to work for the defeat of the bill. Mr. Chamberlain, a member of the committee, indignantly denied the charge. Mr. Beckwith said the bill, if passed, would paralyze millions of capital. Mr. Hill thought otherwise. Sooner or later, he said, all wires would have to go under ground. In his opinion the bill was a good one.

By a vote of 18 to 23 the adverse report was defeated and the bill was placed upon the calendar. Later it passed second reading.

The Morris and Essex Railroad company have opened correspondence with the State officials since the passage of the House bill to repeal their charter. On Wednesday a joint resolution was passed in the House which provides for the appointment of two arbitrators, one appointed by the Governor and the other by the company, to adjust the matter of taxes against the company.

The Senate on Wednesday passed the general act for the publication of the laws. Senator Griggs was the only one voting against it.

The Senate passed the bill appropriating $100,000 for the enlargement of the Trenton Lunatic Asylum and defeated the repealer of the local option law in Chatham Township, Morris County.

The House passed the bill altering the general railroad tax of 1884 so as to make it uniform to the decisions of the courts touching local rates of taxation and making the State Board of Assessors a State Board of Equalization.

The Republican Senators in caucus Wednesday decided to reject two Gubernatorial nominations, those of John Wescott, for Law Judge of Camden county, and ex-Senator John Carpenter, Jr., for Riparian Commissioner.

The Senate went into executive session Wednesday afternoon and rejected the nomination of Judge Wescott. Carpenter's case was not taken up. The nominations of Jonathan S. Whittaker for Law Judge of the Court of Errors, Thomas Middleton for Prosecutor of the Pleas of Ocean County, and all those for Lay Judges of Courts of Common Pleas were confirmed.

The License Question Settled.

The Council met in adjourned meeting, Monday evening. Present—President Marsh and Messrs. Bowers, Carey, Cox, Dumont, Dunham, Simpson, Taylor, Voorhees, Wilbur. Absent—Mr. Cuthbert. M. Quinn asked permission to erect a frame building covered with corrugated iron, on the rear of his lot on East Fourth street, between Sycamore and Park avenue; Referred. Mr. Leo Dalt asked for the right to construct a system of electric street railway; Referred. Sundry petitions for hack and pedler's licenses were read and subsequently granted. Certain petitioners asked for the action of the council in prohibiting the running of dogs at large in the city at all seasons of the year; Referred. The application was read and referred of F. E. Miller for a license to keep an inn and tavern, and to sell liquors therein, at the Hotel Netherwood. The Finance Committee reported its approval of the Mayor's nomination of Geo. W. Moore as a special policeman, and the same was confirmed. The Fire, Water and Lamps Committee reported back the communication of W. C. Ayres, with the explanation that it had no power to act, as the building being erected was within the fire limits, and against the provisions of the ordinance. It was moved by Mr. Voorhees that the application of P. Day be taken from the table. It was moved that by unanimous consent Mr. Simpson be allowed to make a statement. Messrs. Dunham and Taylor objected. The motion to take up P. Day's application was then withdrawn, and it was moved that Mr. Muldowney's application be taken up, that Mr. Simpson might explain his position in regard to that petition. After some remarks Mr. Simpson withdrew his demand that Muldowney's application be acted upon, and the motion to take it from the table was lost. Mr. Day's application was then taken up in opposition to Mr. Cox's motion that it be returned to the table.

The applications of P. Day, J. Blimm and J. Sullivan, were granted by the following vote:

Affirmative—Messrs. Bowers, Carey, Dumont, Simpson, Voorhees, Wilbur—6.

Negative—Messrs. Cox, Dunham, Marsh, Taylor—4.

The applications of J. B. Miller, J. H. Force, J. H. Staats, J. Connelly, E. P. Thorn, F. Caspar, J. Rafferty, C. Smith and C. Goodman, were granted by the following vote:

Affirmative—Messrs. Bowers, Carey, Cox, Dumont, Simpson, Voorhees, Wilbur—7.

Negative—Messrs. Dunham, Marsh, Taylor—3.

The application of J. Muldowney was refused on motion of Mr. Taylor, without roll call.

The following were adopted as the salaries of the city officers for the present year:

City Assessor—$600; Corporation Counsel—$500; Street Commissioner—$600; City Clerk—$450; Janitor—$60, and $2 for each special and adjourned meeting; adopted. The following offered by Mr. Taylor of the Finance Committee, was adopted:

Resolved that George W. Moore, special policeman, be and he hereby is designated, constituted and appointed as the officer to receive and execute all warrants for the collection of taxes issued or to be issued by the City Judge.

Resolved that the City Judge be and he hereby is requested and directed, upon the return to him of any tax warrant, forthwith to issue an alias or pluries tax warrant as the case may require to be directed and delivered to the said George W. Moore, the officer designated by the Common Council to receive and execute the same.

To the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

I offer to accept the office of special policeman and the designation of officer to procure and execute warrants for the collection of taxes, now delinquent and to perform the duties thereby devolving upon me to the best of my ability on the following terms, viz., on taxes collected for years prior to 1880 for which tax warrants shall be issued, or are already issued and shall be renewed, a commission of ten per cent. and in addition thereto thirty six cents for every delinquent whose tax including interest and costs shall be collected under said warrants; on taxes collected for other years except the present, that is to say since 1880 to 1886 both inclusive under warrants as aforesaid, a commission of five per cent. and in addition thereto, thirty six cents for every delinquent whose tax including interest and costs shall be collected under said warrants, it being understood that the tax warrant for the year 1887 is to be issued on December 21st, 1887, and commissions under said warrant shall be three per cent. to January 1st, 1888, and thereafter five per cent.

Dated March 11th, 1887. GEORGE W. MOORE.

Resolved that the proposition of George W. Moore to collect delinquent taxes be accepted with the understanding that his duties in connection with same will terminate with the year 1887.

Resolved that George W. Moore be required to give a bond of $1000, approved by the mayor and finance committee.

The Council resolved itself into a committee of the whole and recommended that $20,000 be fixed as the tax levy for general purposes based upon the following estimates from each committee as to its necessities: Street lights, $6,900; Police, $3,900; Salaries and Elections, $5,425; Advertising and Printing, $700; Streets and Public Health, $7,500; Rents, $800. The Committee on Laws was instructed to draw up an ordinance providing such levy, and the Council then adjourned.

The Washington Valley Railroad.

A meeting to ascertain the public sentiment concerning the proposed railroad from Peapack to Plainfield by way of Pluckamin, Martinville, Warrenville and Washingtonville, was held at Warrenville Saturday evening last. A. T. Oakley was called to the chair and Walter Wesley Winans was made secretary. A large number of prominent citizens of the vicinity were present and there was much enthusiasm in favor of the road. After speeches by Messrs. Oakley, Winans and Voorhees, a committee was appointed to ascertain the resources with a view of submitting them to the railroad officials, and also to learn how many farmers would be willing to give the right of way. The meeting then adjourned until to-morrow evening when the committee will report and some important steps will be taken. There seems no doubt that the new road would be a decided success.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

The annual school meeting was held on Tuesday evening last, Mr. Abner Coriell in the Chair. The appropriation asked for by the School Board was granted without one single objection. Authority to make a well on the school property was included in the requisition and this was unanimously agreed to. Mr. Dayton's term expired and he declined to serve again. Dr. Edwards and A. B. Smith were nominated and the former elected by a handsome majority. The utmost harmony and good feeling seems to have pervaded the taxpayers at this gathering, which we are glad to chronicle.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The regular semi-monthly club shoot of the "Middlesex" is next Wednesday. A large attendance is looked for.

There will be an interesting pigeon shooting match on the Middlesex Gun Club grounds to-day, (Friday) between two well-known local shooters—Dickens and Campbell.

Until May 30 it is unlawful to have a black bass in possession, no matter how it is caught. The penalty for each fish is $25 and every reported violation of the law will be promptly investigated by the proper authorities. The law against catching any fish when a pond is drawn off under the same penalty, and that against seines and nets will also be strictly enforced.

It is a singular fact that every year there a lot of bills introduced into the Legislature, affecting the game and fish laws, which are as nonsensical as they are worthless. The present Legislature has before it for consideration about a dozen of such bills. The Committee on Fisheries in the House to whom these bills are referred, recently met in conference, and framed a bill which they think will suit the sporting fraternity, but which we think will not. Mr. Pearson represented the Northern section of the State and Mr. Roe the Southern section, in the conference. It will be observed that the English snipe is not allowed to be shot in the Spring, the time that bird makes its appearance in the Northern section. The bill is no good, and will not work in either section of the State. Leave the game laws as they now stand. They are good enough with one or two exceptions, which this bill does not remedy. The following is the bill in question:

An Act entitled "An act to divide the counties of this state into two sections, to be known as game sections, and to fix the time for shooting certain game birds and animals therein."

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the several counties of this state be and the same are hereby divided into two sections, to be known as the "northern and southern game sections."

2. And be it enacted, That the northern game section shall comprise the counties of Bergen, Essex, Hudson, Hunterdon, Middlesex, Morris, Passaic, Somerset, Sussex, Union and Warren; in the counties comprising the northern game section as named in this act, it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to take, kill, or have in his, her or their possession after the same has been killed, any woodcock, quail, gray squirrel, or hare, commonly called rabbit, except only between the fifteenth day of October and the first day of December of any year, under a penalty of ten dollars for each and every game bird or animal so unlawfully killed, taken or had in possession.

3. And be it enacted, That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons in the counties comprising the first game section of this state as named in this act, to kill, take or have in their possession after the same has been killed, any American pheasant or ruffed grouse, except only between the fifteenth day of October and the first day of January, of any year, under a penalty of ten dollars for each and every bird so taken, killed, or had in their possession unlawfully after the same has been killed.

4. And be it enacted, That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons in any of the counties comprising the northern game section of this state, to take, kill, or have unlawfully in their possession, any English snipe, except only between the thirty-first day of August and the first day of December, under a penalty of ten dollars for each and every bird so taken, killed, or unlawfully had in possession after the same has been killed.

5. And be it enacted, That the section to be known as the southern game section shall comprise the counties of Atlantic, Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Mercer, Monmouth, Ocean and Salem; in the counties comprising the southern game section as named in this act, it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to take, kill, or have in his, her, or their possession, any American pheasant or ruffed grouse, woodcock, quail, gray squirrel, or hare, commonly called rabbit, except only between the fifteenth day of November and the first day of January, of any year, under a penalty of ten dollars for each and every bird or animal so taken, killed, or unlawfully had in possession after the same has been killed.

6. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be, and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

IT WILL COME!
What will? Why Spring, to be sure. "The world awakes. The smell of the soil is in the earth. The sullen ice has slunk to the north of every rock and fence and there come voices from long hidden birds."
Thus has Spring been described by that foremost American who has so recently passed away. And when it comes, one of life's prime necessities will be clothing suited to the season. You have scarcely thought of the matter yet, but we have, and back in the cold winter days when the very thought of light clothing would make you shiver, we were as busy as bees preparing a Spring stock which will eclipse anything we have ever offered, that, of course includes anything that anybody else has ever offered within a good radius of this town. We have excelled ourselves, for our stock is better than our anticipations and will fully satisfy your expectations of us, which are always great. We found it a difficult task to beat our last Spring's assortment, variety and prices. We are satisfied that no other house could have done it, but we have, and that's perhaps, the highest praise we can bestow upon our present stock. As to PRICES, THEY ARE LOW, IN CLOTHING; lower than they ought to be. Somebody is suffering at the present market prices, but that's not your "funeral," nor ours. We have simply availed ourselves of every honest advantage the market offered, and we give you the full benefit of the same. If you buy without looking at our assortment you will loose more than we shall. This looks well enough on paper you think, and perhaps you call to mind the adage, "self praise is no recommendation"; but the truth is, the goods talks louder than we dare to. We simply want you to come and see for yourselves. No trouble about selling you; the goods will sell themselves. $12.00 worth for $10.00 is the most eloquent argument in the world. We offer that every time, if you compare us with others.

OH, for a paid fire department!

THE shad season is at hand, and ulsters and seal skin sacques will soon be laid aside.

DRUMMERS for all kinds of Spring and Summer goods are now making their rounds.

PREPARATIONS for the construction of the bridge across Staten Island Sound will soon commence.

CANDIDATES for election next November in the gift of the county, are already considering and being considered.

BUDS on maple, peach and lilac trees were reported a month ago, but this is not exactly what we should call an early Spring.

IF a quorum is present, questions of importance will come up for consideration by Union Club at its regular monthly meeting, next Monday evening.

THE Bible lesson study at the Trinity Reformed church to-night (Friday) will be under the leadership of Rev. Joseph Greaves of Westfield. All are welcome.

SPRING begins March 20th and ends June 21st. We are promised it will begin on time, and that this will be a big year for fruit, clams, cheap ice and knee pants.

PLACES can be secured without charge, for one thousand or more men at Association Hall, opposite Post Office, to enjoy the Young Men's Meeting, held Monday evening next, at eight o'clock.

AT his well-known stables in New Brunswick, John W. Morris is receiving every day a consignment of horses for all kinds of work or pleasure. He can show you anything you want, and at a low price.

THE season will soon be here when the "Donkey Club" will take position. Each member, after church services, will take his place along the walk, forming a line on both sides, and stare every person in the face who comes out.

ISAAC WILSON, a minister of the Society of Friends from Canada, is expected to attend religious services at the Meeting House on Peace street, next First-day (Sunday) morning at eleven o'clock. The public are respectfully invited.

THE largest audience since its opening filled Music Hall, Thursday evening of last week, to witness "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as given by one of the poorest companies on the road. The character of "Topsy," however, was well rendered.

SUNDAY is mid-lent. Only three weeks to Easter. Begin to think of your Spring suits, girls, and plan your lovely new bonnets, but don't wear them until the Sunday following Easter. Its bad form, otherwise—and you know how objectionable are bad forms.

THE store now occupied by M. C. Dobbins at the corner of Second street and Park avenue, has been leased by B. A. Moore, of the late firm of Moore Bros., who will open a meat market therein about April 1st. Mr. Dobbins has rented a more desirable stand for his business, elsewhere.

THE old Casino rink building is to be torn down and its timbers and boarding used in the erection of barns, sheds, &c., on the farm of Mr. John Cameron, who bought in the property at receiver's sale. The lease of the land which had another year to run, has been surrendered by Mr. Cameron, and it will be offered for sale in building lots by its owner.

THE Borough Council of North Plainfield of 1886-87, met Friday evening of last week and completed its business for the year. The salary bills and other claims were audited and ordered paid. The grade maps contracted for were presented as completed by Surveyor Dunham, and accepted by the Council. That body then adjourned sine die.

THE price to be paid Muldowney to withdraw his application for license, was $450 —thus costing each one of the twelve whose business he had broken up, $37.50. It has been held by some that the contest all along has been a matter of principle, but when the great obstructionist is willing to accept a small price to back out, we fail to see any principle about it.

THE John C. Berry property at Somerset street and Park place has just been purchased by Messrs. Lutkins & Hummer for $10,000. These gentlemen are also the owners of lands adjoining which permit them to open a street through the rear from Park place to Linden avenue, and thus transpose their entire property into desirable building lots for dwellings.

INCLUDING the many who were afforded an opportunity of signing the petition to the Council, the people of Plainfield, by a large majority, endorse the appeal that an ordinance be enacted (as many others of minor importance are enacted) and enforced (as few others of any importance are enforced) prohibiting the running at large of dogs in our streets at any time or season of the year.

THIS paper was one of the few that did not mislead the people in relation to the term of office of Freeholders elected Tuesday. They will only serve one year, as do their predecessors. The bill making the term two years was in Governor Green's hands in time to be signed and effective at Tuesday's election, but he omitted his signature until Wednesday, giving as his reason that the people who voted for the Freeholders, supposed they were only electing them for a term of one year, and cast their ballots with that understanding. To sign the bill for a two year term would, in his judgment, be taking an unfair advantage of the citizens. As the law only takes effect from the time it is signed by the Governor the Freeholders elected on Tuesday can only hold office for one year.

THE CRESCENT DIVISION, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias of this city, was instituted Thursday evening of last week, with the necessary ceremonies conducted in secret. Col. Wilson and other grand officers of the State took part, and a number of invited guests were present from other divisions. After the impressive services an extra degree was worked at the City Hotel where all of the Division's friends were bountifully entertained. Being now officially organized, the Plainfield Division starts auspiciously upon a career that will result in its subsequent ranking as one of the first divisions of the State. Its officers are:—Sir Knight Commander—George H. Polhemus; Sir Knight Lieut. Com.—Joseph Sheppard; Sir Knight Herald—J. F. Wakefield; Sir Knight Recorder—J. L. Duckworth; Sir Knight Treasurer—Jos. Hawkins; Sir Knight Guard—S. A. Davis; Sir Knight Sentinel—John H. Carney. The members are perfecting themselves by weekly drills in The Crescent, and will give a grand ball during some night in April.

OH, for a street railway!

"ALL or none" was the cry, and the result was all the rest but none for Muldowney.

A WINTER with so few pleasant days has never been known. The one just passed will take the prize for dreariness.

THE Odd Fellows of Plainfield are preparing for a grand anniversary celebration during the latter part of April. The Crescent may probably be engaged for the occasion.

QUITE an extensive contract for slate roofing on some of the county buildings at Snake Hill, N. J., has been awarded to Mr. J. T. Odam, of this city. His work in that line is not excelled by any, and his prices are reasonable.

IF you want a baby carriage—and we are glad to notice a steady growth of Plainfield's population that makes such vehicles necessary—look at the fine line of new styles at low prices offered by A. W. Rand, 94 West Front Street.

A LARGE number of relatives and friends were present at the funeral services over the remains of Mrs. K. P. Ketcham, last Friday afternoon, at her late residence and at the grave. The Rev's Lewis, Yerkes, Hurlbut, Goodrich and Richards officiated.

A CONVENIENT change has been made in the interior of J. P. Laire's household goods establishment at Front street next to the corner of Park avenue. A stair case has been built from the centre of the lower store to the floor above where is displayed a fine stock of wood and willow ware, etc.

WE think we can now safely prophesy that the Crescent avenue church, chapel, parlors and school rooms will be lighted by electricity on and after Sunday the 27th inst. We understand the delay has been unavoidable, but it has permitted much more careful work, and as a thorough trial will be made before turning the light on, no failure will follow.

EDSALL advertises in this issue a large line of new spring shades in "Harris" and "Foster" kid gloves both in plain and embroidered backs, and also a new stock of fashionable dress goods, velvets, laces, etc. He says he is making special effort to incourage home trade, and when his new improvements are complete his store will be more attractive than ever.

THE house and lot at the corner of Somerset street and Somerset place, belonging to the estate of Sarah Moore, deceased, has been sold to Mr. C. Frank French, who will remove the house and begin the erection at once of a handsome brick building the lower story to be occupied by the owner as a flour and feed store, and the upper stories to be rented as apartment flats.

THE Bicycle Club at its regular meeting of Monday evening, appointed a committee to arrange and report on some plan for a testimonial reception, supper and dance to be tendered the Fair assistants who made possible the great financial success of the Club's late bazaar. Invitations will be extended those who contributed as well as those who personally assisted by their attendance.

IT is said the coming base ball season promises to be an active one, and will open early in the season. The leading clubs in this State have perfected their organizations for the coming season, and the State will be represented by several strong clubs. With this gratifying intelligence, added to that of the promise that this is going to be a great season for clams, people have a right to anticipate a very happy summer.

MANAGER MARSH succeeded in persuading Miss Margaret Mather's agent to consent to a reduction of her prices for this (Thursday) evening at Music Hall. Our citizens are thus enabled to occupy the best seats at $1.00 instead of the usual price she demands and commands, $1.50. Mr. Marsh was, however, obliged to consent to a fixing of the price of all reserved seats down stairs at $1.00, and all unreserved, 75 cents. Upstairs, 75 and 50 cents.

JUST when other cities are discarding horses as a motive power for street railways, there are those in Plainfield who can be persuaded to sign a petition to the Council begging it to grant permission for outside speculators to run a horse railroad through our streets and avenues. But some of those very signers are now anxious that their names should be taken off the petition, and if it is ever presented to the Council the true inwardness of the scheme may be exposed.

AN Old Folks' Concert is soon to be given in Plainfield for the benefit of the Y's. About thirty voices that were among the most efficient in the late Vocal Society, are to be rehearsed, and their owners are to be costumed and drilled for the occasion. The teacher will be Mr. W. C. Williams, the composer, who is the organist at the Westminster church of Elizabeth. The entertainment, and its cause and leader, all assure a great financial success.

A TOTAL Abstinence from Cigarettes Society would be, in the words of the late lamented Hamlet, "a consummation most devoutly to be wished." It is too bad that the free air of heaven must be polluted and poisoned by the sickening smoke that ascends from the vile cigarette, and upon a choice between its odor in the clothes of the dude, and the smell of a buckwheat breakfast that hangs 'round the winter overcoat of the countryman in the car seat behind you, we'll take the cake.

THE sweetness of Erminie's music, the strength of its cast, the beauty of its costumes and its setting, continue to draw full houses even though the anniversary of an entire year's continuous run, approaches. And now another feature that will attract Plainfield's theatre goers is the opening of the Casino Cafe under the proprietorship of one of our city's well-known and most popular gentleman of the past. It is fitted up with a magnificence equal to any resort of its kind in New York city.

THE Reception Committee of the Y. M. C. A. are arranging for a Reception to be given to the christian young men of this city, on Monday evening the 28th inst. Every effort will be used to make it a success. Mr. J. L. Gordon, General Secretary of the Brooklyn Association, will be present on that occasion, and it is expected that a delegation from the New Brunswick Association will attend. It is hoped that those for whom the Reception is intended will so arrange their plans as to be present on that occasion.

THE Elizabeth papers tell us that "the gallant Third regiment will probably be increased by one or two new companies in Plainfield." The organization of a military company in this city has long been the desire of a few, and their patience and perseverance will undoubtedly be rewarded soon. So our Est. Contemp. is nearer correct in that report than in its record in the same issue of the incorporation of the Netherwood Hotel Company with a capital stock of $7,000. That amount wouldn't pay for the carpets and tiling on the first floor alone.

ABOUT half as large an audience as would have greeted Mr. Washington Irving Bishop a week ago, attended his appearance at Music Hall, Monday evening. Mr. Bishop is loosing his health and has just lost his wife; she says his mind is gone, and Mr. Montague of Boston claims to expose his business; yet Mr. Bishop's entertainment Monday was as marvellous, unexplainable and skillful as ever. Whether gift, art or science, the results were wonderful, and he failed only when the tests were unjust ones because of the bungling of some of the committee. Could he be persuaded to come again at popular prices, a full house awaits him provided there be no postponement.

THE song of the street sprinkler is heard on the air.

THE carpet cleaners and beaters will soon have their hands full.

THERE is to be a business meeting of the Y's, Monday afternoon next at four o'clock, in Y. M. C. A. Hall.

WE have been asked the feasibility of tunneling Jackson avenue in the Borough, and as to the probable cost of the undertaking.

PEWS in the Crescent avenue church are so much in demand, that those desiring to get in them are offering a premium without success.

FOUR auction sales offering many attractive and tempting inducements to Spring buyers, are advertised by Mr. T. J. Gillies on the opposite page.

THE Hotel Netherwood is to open about the latter part of May, and already its new owner, Mr. Frank E. Miller, is receiving personal and written applications for rooms.

AT the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the North Plainfield Public School, held Tuesday evening, Mr. Geo. F. Brown was unanimously elected in place of Mr. F. H. Gardner who declined re-election. The sum of $4,000 was voted to be raised for the expenses of the year, and power given to the Board to borrow $2,500 in anticipation.

THE official notice of the declaration of the final dividend on the old accounts with the Dime Savings Institution, appears in our advertising columns to-day. All parties holding books unbalanced should present them for settlement without delay, as after the first of April the amounts are ordered to be paid into the Court of Chancery at Trenton.

A SALE of Jersey stock was begun at New York city, Tuesday, with bidders from all parts of the country; and the Pogis family, in particular, were highly valued. Victor Hugo Pogis, bull six years old, brought $500. Stoke Pogis Chief, bull one year old, $450; Jennie Pogis, cow, five years old, $725; and Violet Pogis, cow, dropped 1882, $300.

THIS evening the Board of Managers of the Fire Department will examine into the charges against and guilt of one of the company's drivers. If the evidence is against the accused he will probably be removed, as the Board has shown in the past a desire to uphold the dignity of the department and serve the best interests of the people by the condemnation of all insubordination and offensive behavior.

THE most artistic theatre in its interior in the United States has been long known to be the Lyceum of New York, and it is now receiving as wide a reputation as the home of the most talented little actress in the country. Miss Dauvray is a true artist, without a particle of art, and renders characters the most real without even a false hair to conceal her identity. In the first and second acts of "Walda Lamar" she is now doing some of the best work of her career—work that need not be excelled.

Relief Association.

Owing to the unusual severity of the past winter, heavy demands for provision and fuel have almost exhausted the funds of the Relief Association. The managers are therefore again compelled to solicit subscriptions from those who heretofore have contributed so liberally to the support of the Society.

Electric Street Railway.

The Van Depoele Electric Company have more miles of street railway in successful operation to-day than all the other companies of the World combined. For the sake of giving the public an unbiassed view of this matter, we have carefully looked into the workings and results of the different systems and find the above statement a fact, and also that no other system has had any continuous success. This company ask for the right to construct and maintain a road in this city that they may possess an exhibition plant in the vicinity of New York. They say they will put on the handsomest cars that can be desired, elegantly upholstered and lighted with electric light. The macadamized streets will not be harmed in the least, the present poles along such route as might be selected could be used, and Plainfield would again take an advancing step in the way of enterprise.

Reform Club.

There was a good sized audience within Reform Hall last Sunday evening. The appointed speakers were Mr. W. J. Leonard, of the Central Times, and Mr. James McGee, of North Plainfield, and both gentlemen gave entire satisfaction to attentive listeners. Mr. Leonard, in urgently advocating the saving worth of total abstinence from intoxicating liquors referred to several instances within his own personal knowledge where residents of Plainfield had fallen from affluence and respectability into the lowest degradation of drunkenness; and Mr. McGee, in his usual clear and convincing manner followed up the theme of temperance on behalf of religion, home and patriotism. Mr. Vanderbeek's accomplished choir rendered the sweetest of music, and President French announced that the Rev. Mr. Hector, a colored clergyman of rare oratorical ability, would occupy the platform next Sunday evening, and invited all to be present. Doors open at 7 o'clock, services to commence at 7:45.

Two Fires.

About 2 o'clock on the morning of Friday last, the wife of Mr. J. Newton Honeyman was awakened by the smell of smoke in their home, which was situated just off the main road leading from Dunellen to Bound Brook, near Seebring's Mills. Arousing her husband, he proceeded to investigate, finding the house on fire in the kitchen part, where it originated, it is thought, from an overheated stove pipe. Mr. Honeyman immediately got his family outside the burning dwelling, and alarmed his nearest neighbor, Mr. William Brokaw. With his aid and other neighbors who soon arrived on the scene, the greater part of the furniture and effects were removed. The house being substantially constructed, (in 1802) it took fully five hours for it to consume, no fire department being within reach to assist in the extinguishment of the flames. Mrs. Honeyman was taken to her sister-in-law's, Mrs. Charles Dunham, at Bound Brook. The building was owned by Mr. Carmon Parse, Cashier of the First National Bank of this city, and was insured for $3,000, which does not cover the loss. Mr. Honeyman, who is a brother-in-law to Mr. Parse, had no insurance on his furniture.

Tuesday night last, a little after 10 o'clock, the fine dwelling house on Union avenue, near Grant avenue, owned by Cashier Carmon Parse, and occupied by Mr. H. VanNest and family, was discovered to be on fire. The alarm was sounded and the department promptly responded. Owing to the fact that the burning building was situated on the outskirts of the city, but one engine, No. 2, and the truck company, No. 1, also hose No. 1, were detailed to work on the flames. Despite the efforts of the firemen the building was burned to the ground. The fire evidently originated in the kitchen part of the building. Mr. Honeyman had that day stored all his furniture saved from the first fire in this dwelling, which he expected to occupy in a few days. Some of it was rescued, but his loss from both fires will amount to about $500, with no insurance. Mr. Parse had an insurance of $4,750 on the building which does not cover the loss. Among the ignorant and superstitious, the building had a reputation of being haunted.

Third Philharmonic Concert.

Mr. Arnold and his associates will appear next Tuesday evening (22d) at Music Hall with a choice programme embracing such great names as Wagner, Rubinstein, Liszt, Haydn, Raff, etc., for the rendering of whose works this club is eminently qualified. Miss Ella Earle who is the soprano for this occasion and who is sure of a friendly welcome in Plainfield, is down for two numbers, a song by Goring Thomas and one by Tschaikowsky. Mme. de Roode comes to us announced on good authority as one of the great pianists of the day. Thalberg has said of her "She has the strength of a man and the soul of a woman." And the critics of the metropolis agree that she is a worthy interpreter of the great masters and possessed of a charming and natural method. Tickets at Reynolds pharmacy and at the door. See our advertisement.

An Enjoyable Event.

The "Alpha Social Club" gave their Fifth Annual Sociable at the home of one of their officers, Force's Hotel, North avenue, Friday evening of last week. The attendance was large, and the occasion proved one of the most enjoyable of the season. Excellent music was furnished by Prof. Frazee, and there was ample room afforded the dancers in the spacious dining-room and parlor, seven setts of quadrilles being formed at one time. About midnight, the company sat down to a bountiful refreshment table, after which dancing was resumed and continued until two o'clock in the morning, when those from abroad, who were compelled to wait for a train, were entertained by the members of "Alpha" in their handsome club room on North ave. The Committee of Arrangements, Messrs. J. L. Force, J. R. Blair and F. S. Dunn, are entitled to praise for the success attending their efforts on the occasion. Among those present were:—

Mr. C. R. Frace, formerly of the Casino rink, and now located at Wellsville, New York, was a guest of Wallace B. Miller, of Laing's Hotel, the past week.

Mr. S. C. Moore, of Williamsport, Pa., who was visiting in this city, gave a private organ recital in the Crescent avenue church, Wednesday evening.

Mr. Robert Whittaker, of this city, left Monday last for Fordham, New York, to go in active practice preparatory to starting out with Sells Bros., circus as a bare-back rider.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carney of North Plainfield have great reason to feel proud of the little daughter that has just arrived. They do not know a sweeter baby in the State.

Mr. William H. Roselle, of Brooklyn, New York, a son of the late John Roselle, made a flying visit to this city on Tuesday afternoon last and made a few calls on old friends.

Senator Livingston was called away from his legislative duties last Monday evening to attend the funeral of his sister, wife of Senator Kellogg, at Elizabethtown, N. Y.

A. L. Munday, a prominent merchant of Somerville, intends giving up business at that place and will remove to New Brunswick, he having bought the old stand of J. C. Van Cleef.

Miss Laura M. Warnock, a sister-in-law of Vincent L. Frazee, left yesterday for Ramseys, Bergen county, this state, and intends making that place her future home to the regret of many friends in this vicinity.

Lewis H. Boice died at his residence, 47 Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, Wednesday, after a long illness. The funeral services will be held this morning, at his late home, at 11:30. Friends of the deceased are invited to be present without further notice.

Mayor J. H. Cooley, M. D., of the Borough of North Plainfield, President of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, has been nominated by the State Division as Chief Consul for New Jersey of the League of American Wheelmen, an organization that now numbers almost nine thousand members.

To-day ends the life of single-blessedness of one of Plainfield's popular residents, Mr. Albert Runyon, the genial and accommodating delivery clerk at the post office, who leads to the altar Miss Agie D. Wheeler, of Brooklyn, daughter of the late Asa H. Wheeler, a former resident of Plainfield. "Al." has the best wishes of a host of friends in his matrimonial alliance.

A native programme from Berlin informs us—as near as we can figure it out —that Herr Carl Feininger appeared in a Grosse Orchester-Concerte, two weeks ago last Wednesday, and was the principal star of about two hundred performers. It all took place at the Concert-Haus von Franz Medding, Leipziger Strasse, 48. As Mr. Feininger played some of his own compositions, the many of our readers who all recognize his gift and talent will feel assured with us of his entire success.

Mr. Walter S. Freeman, who is visiting his mother, Mrs. W. B. Ostrom of this city, has for the past few years been the Superintendent of probably one of the largest lumber yards in the World, at Manistique, Mich. The pay roll was $35,000 a month, and the sawed and dressed pine boards in enormous piles stretched along the yards for fifteen miles continuously. Since his arrival in this city he has been offered by telegraph the office of Secretary and Manager of a corporation owning and operating yards and mills at St. Ignace, Mich., and so generous is the offer it will probably be accepted.

The Evening Star.

The great glory of the early evening is the planet Venus, which is evening star for the whole month, and during the entire time is increasing its angular distance from the sun as well as its brightness, which, by the last of the month, is more than forty times that of a first magnitude star. Amateur observers with small telescopes can do no better service for astronomy than to make careful studies of the surface of this planet. Everything goes to show that it is almost constantly covered with clouds, but during the past three years occasional spots have been suspected as well as faint indications of polar ice-caps.

Warren Mission.

The interest in the Warren Mission extra services culminated in the presence of about seven hundred people on Sabbath evening, not a space in the large building being unoccupied. The conduct of the services was in the hands of Mr. Fred. Moon, and the music by Brother Marvin Dunham. Stiring addresses were made by workers present from the Methodist and other churches resulting in the earnest inquiry by many "What shall we do to be saved."

Capt. Ostram led the Monday evening exercises and his "Ocean Stories" applied to the scripture had a novel effect and interest. Rev. Mr. Love took charge Tuesday evening, his subject "What shall we do if we neglect so great a salvation" stirred many hearts and the young people filled the inquiry room at the extra meeting when Bro. Bridge led a warm prayer meeting for inquiring souls. Wednesday evening Bro. Bridge followed the service of song with his vigorous illustrations of real life and applied it to the scripture text. These meetings have been much and favorably criticised by Christians from the several churches, with strong approbation of the spirit of liberty in exhortation in contrast with meetings of a similar character that are usually unsuccessful on account of the absence of the spirit of Freedom.

Electric Lighting.

Mr. Wright has returned from Pittsburg, where he has been negotiating for an extra engine and dynamo for the increase of the station on Madison avenue. He has also arranged for the immediate construction of the mains for incandescent lighting to all important points in the city and the Borough. One section of wiring will be placed underground as a test, with a view to placing the electric light wire below the surface should the experiment be successful after a fair trial. The lamp posts for the lighting of Seventh street from the Crescent to Madison avenue with incandescent street lights, as an exhibition of incandescent street lighting, will be designed and ordered by Mr. Wright in a few days. Whilst arrangements are being made with the contractors for the underground service which will be placed on Seventh street to the Crescent Avenue Church, Mr. Wright proposes to run a temporary main to supply the light for the church and the vicinity—the wire for which has arrived in Plainfield and will be strung in time it is hoped to light the church by next Sunday, and at all events early next week. The cost of the extra machinery and wire ordered for the extension of the Plainfield Electric Light Company's installation will amount, with erection, to about $30,000. Mr. Wright's business affairs will in future call him from Plainfield frequently, but, he will reside in the city and have the management of all the affairs of the company and the laying out of new work. Mr. Taber has been appointed Superintendent in immediate charge of the station, and will also have charge of construction under Mr. Wright's management.

Free Delivery.

The longer Common Council postpones passing the Ordinance now before them regulating the numbering of the houses in our city, the longer will be postponed the needed and proposed free delivery system from the Post Office. Our neighboring city of Orange is going to get the system first from appearances, as the Council has taken the matter in hand and passed the proper ordinance.

The act under which it is proposed to number the city was passed by the Legislature March 12th 1884, and provides "That in cities of the first and second classes the Common Council shall have power to adopt a scheme for numbering and renumbering all buildings in their respective cities by streets, and through some appropriate committee or street commissioner may designate the number to be given to each such building or parts of any building, and shall immediately notify the owner or person occupying such building or such part thereof, and in case of failure of said owner or occupant, for the space of thirty days next thereafter, to cause such number to be properly attached in front thereof, then it shall be lawful for such Common Council, by resolution, to direct such Committee or Street Commissioner to attach such number and to include the expense thereof, which shall not exceed the sum of fifty cents, in the next annual assessment of taxes against said dwelling, and the same be payable and collected in the same manner as other taxes are collected."

Since writing the above Inspector Warren Edgarton has called upon Postmaster Force in relation to the free delivery system. The Inspector expressed himself as surprised that the numbering of houses and designation of streets had not progressed any since his last visit here. He is of the opinion that the department will not grant the desired favor until the conditions required by law are complied with—not only must the houses be numbered, but the streets also must be designated at the intersections. Will our Common Council push through the ordinance and see that its conditions are enforced afterward?

Starving to Death.

One morning over a week ago, an old man of about three score years of age named Madden, living in the valley a mile South of Warrenville, begged of one of the residents of that town his help to cut some wood. Mr. Bournmann who was asked, cheerfully consented, and after going to the old man's home and splitting a quantity of fuel made a tour of examination into the condition of the family and the premises. Signs of the most abject poverty met him at every step, and evidence of starvation among all living and dead beings, stared him in the face. In the barn was but a handful of fodder, and dead cattle and a dying horse lay upon the ground. Within the hut where the old man lived (?) his aged wife was dying on a heap of straw, and by her side was a dead calf while another in the last stages of starvation roamed where it would. The floors of the building's two rooms were covered inches deep in places with the accumulation of manure for the past months. The assistance of kind hearted neighbors was at once secured, and willing hands set at work to bring purity and comfort out of chaos. The place was thoroughly cleaned with hoe and broom. A bed-lounge that the aged couple didn't seem to know the use of was opened, a mattress placed upon it and Mrs. Madden made comfortable. Dr. Zeglio was summoned and pronounced the invalid suffering from an inward cancer. Fodder for the cattle and food for the human beings, was contributed in quantities, and the sick woman was carefully nursed with delicacies. All this was, however, too late to save the life which left her body a few days afterwards. Whatever was of value among the live stock has been purchased, and the old man is thus placed beyond the reach of want. He is said to have a son living in this city, but he must be a most unfilial one to so shamefully neglect his aged parents.

Resolutions of Reverence.

The following sincere expression of the sentiments and sympathy of all, was adopted at a meeting of the officers of the First Presbyterian church, held Thursday of last week:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from this earth Mrs. Emily A. Ketcham, the beloved wife of our pastor; Therefore

Resolved, That the officers of this church take this opportunity to bear testimony to her christian devotion, faithfulness and energy while in health; her cheerfulness and resignation during her protracted and painful sickness; and to express the firm conviction that death was to her not only a blessed relief from her sufferings, but also a full realization of her hopes.

Resolved, That we hereby tender to our beloved pastor and his daughter our warmest sympathy in this their hour of sore trial and pray that the comfort that he has so often brought to others may be returned in ten-fold measure to him.

Fanwood Township Meeting.

The Township Committee of Fanwood met at Excelsior Hall on Monday last and organized the Board for the ensuing year by electing George Kyte, Chairman, and Lewis W. Miller, Treasurer. The Treasurer's salary was made $25 per year. The Treasurer stated amount of cash on hand same as shown in published financial report—$414.84. Messrs. Jackson & Codington of Plainfield were appointed township counsel on same terms as previous years, and Dr. F. W. Westcott was appointed Township Physician. Returns were presented from road district meetings as follows: District No. 1, Frank Hosinger, overseer, and special tax of $500 voted for crushed stone; district No. 2, A. D. Shepard, overseer, and special tax of $1,500 for repairing roads; district No. 3, Thos. S. Whitenack for overseer and $70 for crushed stone; district No. 4, Ernest C. Kelb for overseer, and an appropriation of $500 for repairing roads; district No. 8, Wm. N. Pangborn, overseer, and special tax of $100 for crushed stone. On motion these returns were received, and the election of overseers confirmed, and the township clerk instructed to give notice to Assessor of amounts of special tax voted in the various road districts. Petition was received from road district No. 6, asking committee to appoint James E. Goodman overseer of roads in said district; also petition from district No. 7 asking for the appointment of Thomas Lee as overseer of road district No. 7, and accordingly the parties named were appointed. All the officers-elect, who were required to qualify, with the exception of two to three, were present and filed their official oaths and bonds. The rooms of Excelsior H. & L. Co., No. 1, were rented for all township purposes for the ensuing year at the annual rent of $50. Justice Nash, of Plainfield, was requested to renew tax warrant for collection of delinquent taxes. The following persons presented applications (with $30 each license fee) for licenses to keep hotels in the township of Fanwood, John Flannery, Bennett Brittin and Henry Illsley. Applications read and licenses granted from April 2nd, 1887 to April 2nd, 1888. Committee adjourned to meet Thursday, March 24th, 1887, at 7:30, P. M.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Capt. Sansom of the steamship "Alsia" arrived home on Monday last.

The Rev. George W. Smith will preach his last sermon as pastor of the M. E. church on next Sunday morning, it being the end of the conference year.

The Westfield Fire Department held their regular meeting on Tuesday evening last. Considerable business of importance to the department was transacted.

The youngest child of Mr. Wm. Dallas, residing on Orchard street, died last week after a short illness. The funeral occurred on Sunday last. Interment in Fairview cemetery.

The first duties of our newly elected overseer of road district No. 8 should be to repair some of our crosswalks, which need looking after immediately; also to fill up the few places in the crushed stone roads in the district, which are broken through.

At the annual school meeting held at school house, district No. 10, on Tuesday evening, Wm. Gale was chosen Chairman and Joseph B. Harrison, secretary. The annual report of the trustees was read and approved, and placed on file. The election for school trustee in place of Mr. Robert R. Sinclair, was next in order. Mr. Sinclair was renominated and no doubt would have received the unanimous vote of the meeting if he had not sent a letter positively declining the renomination, having held the position for the past eight years. Several gentlemen were nominated for the position, and after the ballot Mr. Edward L. Embree was declared elected. The sum of $4,455 extra money for support of schools, was voted.

The following is the result of the election in the several road districts last week for overseers of roads:

District.	Overseer.	Extra Money.
No. 1	N. A. Barnett	$ 37 45
2	Isaac. F Schnider	125 00

12	O. M. Pierson	None
13	No Election
14	L. V. Clark	200 00

Total		$4137 45

Our township raises over $7,000 the present year for the improvement of our roads and sidewalks. The crushed stone money is to be used and distributed under and by the direction of our township committee, which plan no doubt will give us more work for our money than under the old plan—by the fifteen different overseers of roads.

THE CHANGES OF A LIFETIME.

Men ninety years old remember when there were no steamboats, but all travel on the water was done by the slow, uncertain means of sailing vessels, when if one started for New York it was doubtful if he would reach there in a day or a week. Now we know how many hours and minutes it requires to make the trip.

Men now sixty years old remember when there were no railroads, but all travel on land was done by stages, by wagons, by ox teams, on horseback, and on foot. Now a network of railroads covers the whole country, and several lines run from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. Now it takes only six or seven days to cross the continent. Formerly that trip required three months.

Men fifty years old remember when there were no photographs, but only paintings and drawings, made at great prices, of objects now done better in an instant at trifling cost.

Men of that age also remember when no steamboats crossed the ocean, and it was believed that they never could, but now hundreds of steamships are plowing every ocean, reducing the time of crossing the Atlantic from weeks to days.

Men forty-five years old remember when there was no electro-plating, but everything in that line was done in the old-fashioned slow way.

Men of that age also remember when there were no telegraphs, but all messages had to be sent by the slow-going mails.

Men twenty-five years old remember when there were no telephones, but all the messages now spoken through them had to be sent by notes or special messenger.

All these grand and useful inventions have been made within the memory of men now living. The younger generation can never appreciate them as those do who remember the want of them, and therefore the great convenience they are to the world.—Bridgeport Standard.

A PERSIAN QUACK.

Dr. Wills, an Englishman residing in Persia, accepted an invitation to dine at the house of Mirza M——— Kahn, a wealthy grandee. The meal had hardly begun when one of the guests, S——— Kahn, entered upon a long list of his ailments for the benefit of the English physician.

It is the custom in Persia to consult a medical man wherever one is met. This would-be patient finally stated that, for the relief of lumbago, he had been in the habit of inserting a needle beneath the flesh of his back every morning, but that, on the previous day, it had disappeared under the skin.

The physician, after examining the flesh which S——— Kahn had uncovered, told him that it was probable that the needle had been lost and had never been in his flesh at all. At this the patient was most indignant.

"Ah, you Europeans!" he cried; "you will never believe. Why, Agha Ali, the surgeon, says it is there, and he is going to extract it by the mouse."

"By the what?"

"The mouse. Don't you understand that?"

"No. What mouse?"

"Ah, science! Ah, Europeans! He doesn't understand the action of the mouse!"

A chorus of explanations now brought out the supposed fact that a live mouse being bound on the back of the patient the needle, by some mysterious process, would leave his flesh and be found in that of the mouse.

"What kind of a needle was it?" asked the Englishman.

The confidential valet produced a packet of ordinary sewing-needles, declaring that no different ones were ever used for that purpose.

Presently the native surgeon made his appearance, and after listening carefully for the needle with an old stethoscope, the wrong end of which he applied to the general's person, declared that the bit of steel was very deeply seated.

"But, please God," said he, "by my science, and by the help of the sainted martyrs, Houssein and Hassan, I shall remove it."

He carefully opened a box and disclosed a poor little mouse tied by the feet with silken threads. The animal on being touched gave a squeak of pain. The sound was a revelation to the Englishman.

"Ah," he said, "this is indeed a wonderful thing! Aghi Ali, the surgeons of Persia have in you a burning and shining light; but your trick is old." At this the native turned pale. "Observe, my friends. Presto, pass! S——— Kahn, the needle has left you and is now in the poor mouse's body!"

Agha Ali sprang up and would have rushed away, but he was seized and held while his box was opened. A needle was indeed there, previously slipped under the loose skin of the mouse's back. It was compared with the others in the khan's pockets and found to be half an inch too short.

That the patient was furious need scarcely be said. He threatened the frightened surgeon with punishment in full measure, and it was only at the Englishman's intercession that the culprit was spared.

Nine-tenths of the men who apply for relief at the London workhouse are unmarried. This is indirect but striking testimony to the good effects of matrimony.

A company of Pittsburg sportsmen have secured possession of the greatest game preserve in the world. It is in the heart of the wildest mountain region of West Virginia and embraces 70,000 acres. There is not a settlement within its limits, but an abundance of bear, deer, wild turkey and other game.

A telegraph operator at San Francisco, Cal., the other day at two p. m. received a message for Yokohama, Japan, and at the same hour the next day, just twenty-four hours later, he had a reply thereto. The message went to New York, thence to London, and by the Suez cable to China and Japan. What a marvelous revolution has been wrought by electricity and steam, and the end is not yet?

* * *

A Republican paper having exclaimed with an expression of horror, that "twenty-three ex Confederates and only three Union soldiers" will be members of the U. S. Senate after the 4th of March ensuing, the Chicago Times pertinently inquires: "If the Republican party wants Union soldiers in the Senate why don't it elect them? Three Union soldiers in the Senate from the eighteen States that gave a Republican majority in 1884 is not a very good showing for a party that pretends to idolize the soldier class."

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

TEMPERANCE IN A SNOW-DRIFT.

Rev. Annie H. Shaw writes a letter from Minnesota on the train, "stuck in a snow-drift," fifteen miles from Farmington, where she was to speak. A gentleman, who had heard her speak at Austin, asked her if she would address them on the train, while they were waiting to be dug out. She complied with the request, and spoke half an hour on the great good traveling men and railroad men can do for temperance and society in the White Cross movement. Miss Shaw says she had a very attentive audience.

IOWA WOMEN.

According to the official register of Iowa for 1887, three counties—Cerro Gordo, Madison, Warren—have women as recorders. The counties of Cedar, Decatur, Green, Grundy, Keokuk, Louisa, Page, Plymouth, Van Buren and Washington have women as superintendents of public schools. These women not only fill offices elected by the franchise of men, but sit in judgment of controversies between male, school officials and their constituents, hear appeals, issue certificates and revoke them, and the schools in nearly all these counties are of a very high order. It would have been thought very shocking thirty years ago, for a woman to hold such a position, but it has proved quite harmless and safe. Some other things which are now dreaded—woman suffrage, for instance—will have proved equally safe, thirty years hence.

CO-OPERATIVE HOUSEKEEPING.

Co-operative housekeeping, which has failed so often in more ambitious hands, is found to be working successfully, in a quiet way, in a New York tenement house. It started with a little woman who had tended a glove counter until she became the wife of a horse-car conductor. Like most poor people, she bought groceries by the pound or half-pound, and coal by the scuttle. She saw that buying in this way meant paying high prices, and she persuaded the inmates of the tenement-house to club together and buy their stores in larger quantities. They find that this saves about one-third of the cost. Six of the women have now clubbed together and hired a woman to wash and iron for them, while they take in tailoring or do other work; and they have some thoughts of trying a co-operative kitchen. Who knows but these women may become the Rochdale Pioneers of co-operative housekeeping?

HELPING THE WOMEN.

The Vineyard Gazette has a good word to say in favor of "helping the women folks":

"Young man, or old one either, rest assured that it is a good deal more 'manly' for you to perform such household duties as you have the opportunity for, than to burrow luxuriously in bed, while your wife, or mother, or sister gets up in the cold and makes the fires; and spend the balance of the day in loafing about town, while she cooks, and sweeps, and washes, and scrubs, and looks after the children, and beats mats, and lugs water, and perhaps brings in wood, and forty other things, some of which you could relieve her of without personal inconvenience, and for none of which have you spunk enough to furnish her with a dollar-a-week assistant. The 'manliness' which will permit a woman to work her life out because the males of her family must limit themselves to strictly masculine pursuits, ought not to enter into any system of philosophy governing the conduct of men."

SHE DID IT HERSELF.

Men are quite willing that women should do a hundred things which are physically more laborious than casting a vote. The solicitude some of them express for fear suffrage may injure the health of women recalls a story told by Miss Eastman. When school suffrage for women was still a new thing, a hard-working woman appeared at the door of the polling-place in a country town, to cast her first vote. A local politician instantly bustled up to her, and offered his arm with great gallantry to escort her to the ballot-box, saying, "Let me assist you, madam." The woman looked at him, and answered:

"If you had been around this morning at five o'clock, when I was making the fire, bringing in wood and water, and getting breakfast, I might have been glad of some help; but if it is only about dropping this bit of paper into the box that you want to help me, I think I can do that myself." And she did. A. S. B.

A GOOD MOTHER-IN-LAW.

The Christian Register says:

"So many foolish and flimsy jokes are published about the mother-in-law that it is a good tonic to read such refreshing and appreciative testimony as that which John Adams offered to the memory of his mother-in-law. This letter, written more than a hundred years ago, also indicates the broad, progressive views which Mr. Adams took in relation to the sphere of woman."

The letter was written by President John Adams, to his wife, Abigail Adams, on the death of her mother, in 1785:

"Your mother had a clear and penetrating understanding and a profound judgment, as well as an honest, a friendly and a charitable heart. There is one thing, however, which you will forgive me if I hint to you. Let me ask, rather, if you are not of my opinion? Were not her talents and virtues too much confined to private, social and domestic life? My opinion of the duties of religion and morality comprehends a very extensive connection with society at large, and the great interests of the public. The benevolence, charity, capacity and industry which, exerted in private life, would make a family, a parish, or a town happy, employed on a larger scale in support of the great principles of virtue and freedom of political regulations, might save nations and generations from want, misery and contempt."

WEARY.

Weary, so weary; oh weary of tears;
Weary of heart aches, and weary of fears;
Weary of mourning and weary of pain;
Weary, so weary of hoping in vain.

Weary, so weary of the burdens of life;
Weary of toiling and weary of strife;
Weary of parting and weary of night;
Weary, so weary, and longing for light.

Weary, so weary of waiting alone;
Weary of asking—receiving a stone;
Weary of watching, weary of jeers;
Weary, so weary of taunts and sneers.

Weary, so weary; but sometime I'll rest,
Dreamlessly sleeping, hands crossed on my breast,
No more to sorrow, no more to weep;
Only to lie down and quietly sleep.

TRICKSEY.

Margaret Ayrie was the younger of two children of an English Clergyman. Tom, her handsome brother, had years before married a fragile girl, and when his regiment was ordered to India had bidden his wife and child what proved to be a last farewell. Less than six months after his departure word came back of his death from a malignant fever that had broken out among the soldiers. His wife, heartbroken at the news, survived him but a short time, and at her death Tricksey became an inmate of the rectory—the comfort and joy of her grandfather's declining years, but a trial to the servants and her Aunt Margaret.

For three years the rector had been sleeping by the side of the wife of his youth in old Hawley church yard, and in that time Tricksey had grown into a tall girl quite beyond her aunt's control. Gentle Margaret was no match for this girl full of splendid animal life and rare independence. Scorning, as she did, all the little set rules that hedge in an English girl, Tricksey was a constant annoyance and source of anxiety to her shrinking relative. She was determined to enjoy her life in her own way. Did she want to laugh she did so in no uncertain manner. Did she chose to ride that exercise was taken with no regard whatever to possible broken bones, and each time she returned old Ronie, who filled the double capacity of coachman and gardener, received the reins she carelessly flung him with the muttered prophecy: "She'll brek her nake, sure, i' some o' her gallups." But, nevertheless, Tricksey returned each time unharmed, her horse usually in a lather and her cheeks and eyes glowing with life and health. The salt sea air acted like wine upon the girl's temperament.

Tricksey had heard vague whispers in regard to a love affair of her aunt's youth; but just what it was the careless, happy child had never troubled herself to ascertain. She never dreamed that the master of Talcottwold—that great, grim, silent stone house that had been closed ever since she could remember—had anything to do with Margaret's life. Old Ronie had often regaled Tricksey with descriptions of Guy Talcott—his generosity, bravery and manliness being themes of which the honest old Scotchman never tired. Listening to these glowing accounts, Tricksey clothed their subject with all the chivalrous attributes of her favorite heroes, and Talcottwold, with its massive walls and stately elms, became the center of the girl's imagination, around which focused all that was mysterious in her nature. That her Aunt Margaret was in any way connected with the absence of its owner had never occurred to Tricksey, although old Ronie's hints would have been enough to arouse a more worldly wise person's suspicions.

* * * * * * *

Tricksey had ridden one day to the dunes, a wide stretch of beach above the tide mark, totally devoid of vegetation and covered with miniature hills where the wind had piled the sand; hence its name. This desolate place seemed to have great attractions for her, as she rode more frequently here than anywhere else. There were two ways of reaching it from the rectory; one by the main road, and the other—a much nearer way—by a path cut through the rocks at the base of the cliffs, called the "narrows." This path was but seldom used, as it was unsafe when the tide was in.

The spice of danger connected with the narrows was enough to make it Tricksey's favorite, and many a time she had galloped over it, seemingly throwing defiance to the waves that almost touched the feet of her horse. This time she had ridden farther than usual, in fact, going a mile or two beyond the dunes, and as she neared the narrows upon her return old Ronie's warning came back to her:

"Gie Jep the main way the day, Miss Tricksey, there's muckle sea a runnin' an' t' narrows be dangerous groun' anyway."
